Mobile, Ala., May 29.—(AP)—The long awaited denouement in the Aubrey Boyles case came with a smash today when an indictment charging the former United States district attorney with "possession and transportation of liquor" was returned in federal court. Reading of the indictment followed swiftly upon the filing of a recommendation by the grand jury, which rested its labors Wednesday night, asking that the district attorney's office be thoroughly "cleaned out" and the entire force, except the clerical staff, re-organized. And even before this sensational development came the announcement that Boyles, the storm center of one of the bitterest controversies ever known in Mobile, had resigned his job even before he knew of the indictment against him.

End of First Chapter

These developments, together with the filing in federal court of an order wherein Federal Judge Ervin recuses himself in the citation against Boyles to "show cause" why he should not be ousted as an attorney before the court and the arrival here of Sylvester R. Rush to take charge of the local situation, marked the end of one chapter in the case which has held public interest at high pitch.

Specifically, the indictment against Boyles charges "on or about May 21, 1923, Boyles took "four quarts of liquor" from the store-room in the federal building, "with the intent to dispose of it, "to a person or persons" to the grand jury unknown."

A capias was immediately served on Boyles who was released on $1,000 bond.

The grand jury in its report that was made public today on the arrival of Special District Attorney Rush said:

Grand Jury Report.

"We have investigated and considered five causes and have examined 34 witnesses. We have found one true bill which we return with this report.

"We desire to make certain recommendations which are based upon the exhaustive investigation that we have made while in session and these are as follows:

"As a result of the discharge of our duties as grand jurors we are convinced that the due administration of justice in this court has suffered by the incompetency, indiscretion and

Washington, May 29.—(AP)—The federal government is considering the problem of reclaiming the Florida Everglades to bring 4,500,000 acres under cultivation, Horace C. Stillwell, editor and publisher of the Fort Lauderdale (Fla.) Morning Sun and Evening News, announced here today after conferring with officials.

As a first step in this program, Mr. Stillwell declared Dr. Elwood Mead, reclamation commissioner, will make a personal survey of engineering requirements in a drainage project, necessitating construction of flood control dykes to combat overflow waters in the rainy season.

Secretary Hoover, the Florida publisher said, is interested in the rubber-growing possibilities of the Everglades, while Secretary Jardine has finished a personal survey of agricultural potentialities. The Everglades, Mr. Stillwell, maintained, can produce sufficient rubber to make the United States independent of foreign sources due to the development of a fungus-resistant species through grafting with figs by Frank Sterling, "the Burkhardt of Bok Choy."

"Drainage for rubber production alone would pay," Mr. Stillwell said, "but the land is so rich that its products would reimburse the government in a year or two if planted in garden crops."

The reclamation service has a balance of $15,000 in the appropriation for survey of reclamation projects," he continued, "and additional funds will be sought for the detailed engineering survey."

Secretary Jardine, he pointed out, is opposed to federal recovery of the Everglades land unless some provision can be made to restrict farming to non-competitive products."

Private land holders have been pressing back the Everglades frontier for some time, turning tropical jungle into productive land, Mr. Stillwell explained, "but they have just frightened us all by their greed. It is too big for private development. The state of Florida has spent ten millions in recovering the most accessible of the area, and will cooperate with the federal government."

Inviting attention to the point that "Florida was the first state discovered and the last to be developed," Mr. Stillwell said the development "would be expected for the opening of the last agricultural frontier of the country."

"It's from yard, the east coast," he said, "is the playground of the country and its back yard the vast interior, a storehouse of wealth great enough to supply the nation with produce."

MEXICAN BANDITS
RELEASE BRADENWife Receives Telegram
Saying That American Engineer Has Arrived Safely at Mapimi.

Laredo, Texas, May 29.—(AP)—Mexican bandits have released C. B. Braden, American mining engineer. A telegram from Braden to his wife here today said that he had arrived at Mapimi, Durango, sound and well.

No further details were given but it is believed Braden returned to Mapimi with the American vice-consul who was sent to Torreon yesterday to negotiate with the bandits.

No further advice has been received regarding Jules C. Gallagher of San Antonio, mining engineer, who was made a prisoner with Braden. The Americans were captured May 18 at Braden's mine in the state of Durango. The bandits demanded 6,000 pesos ransom.

Augusta, Ga., May 29.—(AP)—Two persons were burned to death, another was killed and a fourth was injured in motor vehicle accident near here this afternoon.

An unidentified woman from Jacksonville, Fla., was burned to death and Grady Garner, driver of the machine, died at a local hospital tonight without having regained consciousness, after their closed automobile left the road near Trenton, S. C. Garner was frightfully burned about the body and head. The third party in the car, P. H. Miller, a young man also of Jacksonville, escaped with minor injuries.

Truck Hits Motorcycle.

In the second accident, Werner Koenig, a young white man, was killed shortly after 6 o'clock this afternoon when a motorcycle he was riding was struck by a truck 3 miles from Augusta, on the Milledgeville road. He was rushed to a local hospital, but died en route. R. M. Griffin, driver of the truck, is being held in the Richmond county jail on a charge of murder.

According to Miller, who brought Garner to the hospital here, the party left Jacksonville this morning at 5 o'clock bound for North Carolina with a load of whisky the boy said. The youth told newspaper men that the party passed through Augusta shortly after 1 o'clock, and had reached a point near Trenton when the accident occurred. According to the boy, the driver was attempting to round a curve at a low rate of speed when a rear wheel gave way, causing the car to turn turtle, pinning the woman and Garner beneath it, while the boy was thrown clear of the wreckage.

Miller said that he left Jacksonville with Garner and the woman, with the understanding that should the car be seized by officers and the whisky discovered, he would be absolved of any blame in connection with the whisky.

Royal Couple of Sweden CROWN PRINCE WORKS, PLAYS AND STUDIES Have Busy Day in Capital

Washington, May 29.—(P)—Sweden's crown prince, visiting Washington to attend the trials and envoys of international friendship, engaged today in a round of work, play and study, which for versatility and lightning change, was reminiscent of the celebrated activities of his royal contemporary, the Prince of Wales.

Swedish, and with equal ease, he played the roles of demigod, sightseer, social lion, and curio. And between times he qualified beyond dispute as an authority on curios by demonstrating that he knew more about the inside of a sixth century triked boat than its art gallery custodians.

His day reached the high peak of pomp and importance, in the eyes of the capital, at least, when during the afternoon he replied to a speech by President Coolidge at the dedication of a memorial to John Ericsson on the banks of the Potomac. After the unity and declaration of his rank, he conveyed to the president and the American people in polished and perfectly-spoken English the personal greetings of his father, the King of Sweden, and his own appreciation of the occasion and his and his prince's on American shores.

Twice during the day Prince Gustavus Adolphus' travels about the city fell in with the program of the Bruce-Mellon wedding. In the morning he visited the Pan-American Union where women in the social world had touched to the floral decorations for the wedding reception. The prospective King admired the flowers and later returned to the reception, lending the presence of royalty to the splendor of that affair despite the business-like manner he had chosen for his trips to the art galleries and the National Press club.

The crown prince apparently had not expected to attend the wedding reception when he left the Swedish legation in the early morning.

At the Corcoran Art Gallery, the heir-apparent examined with keenness of an art critic the many etchings, portraits and great canvases that cover the gallery walls. That was part of his study of American art, one purpose of his visit here, which he compared with his interest in a long stay in a prolonged tour last month the day at the Freer Gallery of Art.

It was at the Freer gallery that the crown princess and the ladies of her escort who had remained at the legation until that time joined the prince. They found him immersed in an examination of Chinese bronzes and utensils of the Han dynasty. A bronze ceremonial vessel dat-lack of sound judgment of the United States attorney, Aubrey Boiles.

"Because of the inefficient handling of the business of that office by the United States attorney it is manifested to us that the public interests and the public business have both suffered severely during his term of office."

"Because of these reasons we earnestly recommend a change in the personnel of the United States attorney's office at Mobile with the exception of the general force of the said office."

"We further strongly recommend that there should be a general reorganization of the said office in the very near future in the furtherance of a systematic handling of the work of that office and the efficient and systematic dispatch of the public business in the office and before this court."

Boiles Resigns.

Before the report of the grand jury was read, an amendment was made to it by Mr. Stellwagen, local attorney, who had been appointed by Judge Robert T. Ervin to act for a few days until President Coolidge appoints a successor to Boiles.

Boiles' resignation was wired to the attorney general before the report of the grand jury was read. It was to be done by cable to the office of himself and Sylvester A. Rush, who arrived here this morning to take charge of the local situation. It is understood that Mr. Rush brought the request that the district attorney send his resignation to Washington.

ATLANTA PLANNED AS AIR CROSS-ROADS and would be the goal of all commercial travel in the United States.

The necessity of lighting the air routes so that they may be used by night as well as by day was pointed out Saturday by Mr. Glover. He stated that it was utterly impossible for any commercial aviation company to make a financial success of regular scheduled flights unless their planes could travel after the shadows of night have darkened the face of the earth, as well as during the daylight hours.

In order that the planes may follow their routes, it is therefore necessary that guiding lights be placed. This is not so expensive, it is stated, as the layman might imagine. Lights have to be placed about every 10 miles, but in some places, where a city or small town is located directly on the route, the lights of the city will suffice as a beacon for the planes. A special light for the guidance of night fliers has already been devised, which throws an oscillating light from the ground, and turns on and off automatically, just as do the lights in the floating boats at sea.

Main Artery of Travel.

With such lights pointing out the way from New York to Atlanta, and then across to San Francisco, the route would soon become the main line of aerial travel between the east and west coasts. The present direct route from New York to San Francisco, is said to be unsatisfactory for commercial flying, because of the high altitudes met in crossing the Rockies, and the cost of fuel along the route.

To succeed financially, commercial flying service must depend for the greater part of its revenue on passenger and express service. It is as impossible for such a service to live wholly dependent upon the mail carrying revenue, as it would be for a railroad or steamship company.

The route visitors were dined to at the Swedish minister and Madame Bostrom at the legation, and before dinner they received a delegation of the Vasa Order of America, a Swedish society. Tomorrow, a visit will be paid to the Potomac, making the trip to Washington at Mount Vernon, making the trip to the Potomac on the American naval yacht, Sylph.

ATLANTA UNIVERSITY
TO BEGIN EXERCISESLillian Gish To Testify
Against Former Employer

(By Lease, Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)
New York, May 20.—While Lillian Gish was on the high seas today returning to testify against Charles H. Duell, her former employer, the latter was learning that the way of a showman in the toils of the law is hard.

Healthy young ghosts recalling Earl Carroll's song to plague Duell when J. Boyce Smith, Jr., his former law partner, scored two important wins in the government's perjury case against him. Carroll was found guilty of perjury in the same court room.

Smith declared he knew of no written consent that Lillian Gish had given in permitting the assignment of her contract with Inspiration Pictures, Inc., to Carroll. He said he would show Duell had promised to get the sums demanded from Miss Gish provided he, Duell, could have two-thirds. Leisure pointed out that Walter Camp, Jr., another official of the picture concern, said he would give one-third provided Duell did nothing illegal in recovering the money.

The major point of Lillian Gish's contact with Inspiration Pictures, Inc., read in court today, provided for dissolution in 20 days in the event of the star's marriage. Duell was paying the actress $2,500 a week.

COMMITTEE VOTES TO REMOVE EXTRA
PULLMAN CHARGES

Washington, May 20.—(AP)—Over the protests of some senators from the western agricultural states, the senate interstate commerce committee today voted eleven to six to report favorably the Robinson bill to repeal the Pullman surcharge now collected by the railroads.

A similar bill was passed by the senate at the last session, but was defeated in the house where it was argued by some that it would put an added burden on agriculture in the form of increased freight rates to make up the deficit which would result from cutting off this source of railroad revenue.

Some officials of western railroads, estimating the loss to carriers of that section at $15,000,000 annually, said they would be obliged to seek an increase in freight rates greater than the 5 per cent raise they are now seeking.

Duell, at one time, claimed he and the actress were engaged, although she

HARVARD DEAN HONORS
STUDENT OF ATLANTARich's Windows Are Bright
For 'Atlanta Day' Monday

Concrete evidence of the success of the "Advertise Atlanta" movement will be on display today in the show windows of M. Rich and Brothers company, which produces a third of the industries brought to Atlanta by this campaign will be shown as a part of the "Atlanta day" celebration at this store Monday.

Frank Neely, manager of the Rich store, one of the directors of the "Advertise Atlanta" campaign, worked out the idea of the display to obtain concrete evidence of the effectiveness of the "Advertise Atlanta" campaign and to show displays of the products of the industries brought here since the campaign began several months ago.

Thirty plants will be represented in the displays. One or more products of each plant will be displayed in the spacious show windows of the Rich store and the variety of these products is a revelation as to the steady growth enjoyed by Atlanta, industrially, in the past few months.

Along with the displays of products will be windows containing copies of magazines of national circulation which will be advertising in Atlanta in recent issues. The industrial bureau of the Chamber of Commerce has cooperated with Mr. Neely in providing the displays of products and of advertising matter.

Windows Dressed Today.

"Atlanta day" will be celebrated at the Rich store Monday, but the show windows will be dressed for exhibition today.

Since the "Advertise Atlanta" campaign was launched the work has been done in an effective manner and as a direct result of the advertisements of Atlanta's advantages as a manufacturing and distributing center the thirty new industries have been located here and several industries already located here have made additions to their plants. The wide variety of the products will be shown in the displays which will occupy nearly all of the space of the large Rich show windows.

Atlanta's advantages as a manufacturing and distributing center have been advertised in many trade publications and the many manufacturers have read the Atlanta story to industrial readers in such a convincing way that they brought the location of the new industries.

Copies of the advertisements in the displays will be seen by the public in the rich windows of the first class stores, as there publications are not generally circulated except to the particular class of industry they serve.

In addition, magazines of general circulation will be displayed, opened at the pages containing the advertising matter.

The entire Rich staff will cooperate in making "Atlanta day" Monday a success and many special features for the day will be arranged.

List of New Firms.

Following is a list of the new firms which will have products displayed in the Rich windows Sunday and Monday:

Holman, Inc., 65 Walker street; Sunstrand Advertising company; Feschiere & Cottrell-Hamilton Co., 214 Peachtree street; Chamberlain Metal Weather Strips, 46 Fairlie street; H. J. Heinz, 14 Baker street; Heinz building; Atlantic Co., 101 Marietta building; The Brooks Co., 141 Heinz building; Standard Time Co., 410 Walton building; Century Rubber Company, 184 Spring street; Automatic Electric company, 101 Marietta building; Sears Corp., 514 Royal Allen building; Southern Milk and Cream company.

CENTRAL OF GEORGIA
ERECTS NEW SIGNS
BOYS' HIGH SENIORS WILL GET DIPLOMAS

With the past four years the Central of Georgia railroad has spent more than $2,000 in erecting 1,350 safety signs at unsafe grade crossings on its right-of-way, it was announced Saturday. For years the railway company has endeavored to direct public attention to unsafe railway crossings. Erection of these signs is in compliance with the Georgia laws requiring that railroads take precautions to protect human lives at dangerous grade crossings.

With a senior class of 100 members the Boys' High school commencement exercises will be held at the auditorium-annex, Tuesday night, June 1. Student speakers of the occasion will be William H. Smith, who will deliver the "Boy's High School" by James M. and Memorial, and Benton Fitzgerald, who will give the class oration, "Responsibilities." Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of schools, will make the commencement address. Music for the occasion will be furnished by the Boys' High School orchestra.

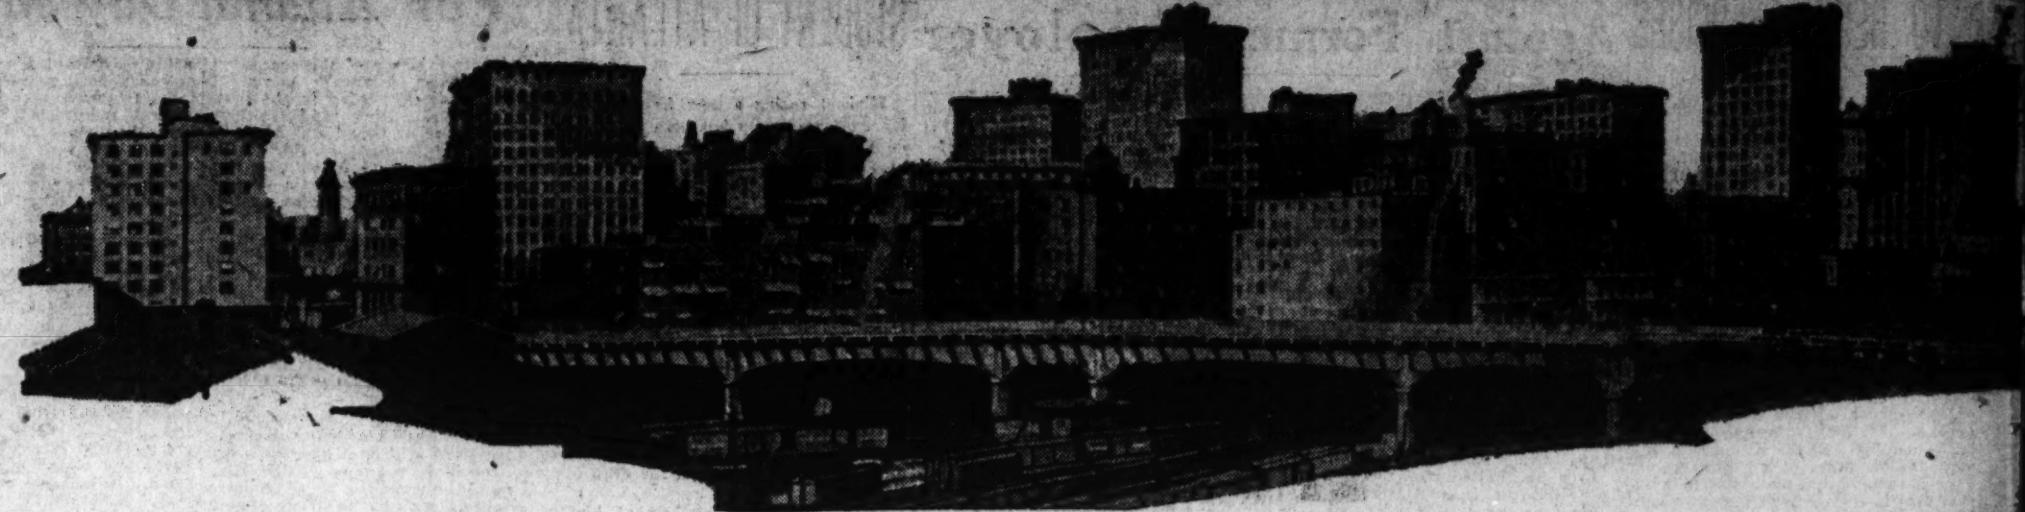

High school scholarships and prizes will be awarded. Ben S. Read, Jr., will receive a medal won by him in the individual competitive drill on R. O. T. C. day, defeating cadets from Fulton and Tech High schools.

Dr. R. M. Eubanks, president of the board of education, will deliver the diplomas to the graduates, while H. O. Smith, principal of the school, will make the award of prizes and scholarships.

Risen From a Glorious Past

—a Past so recent that the very thought of it clutches our heartstrings. Through years of struggle, Atlanta has risen, in little over half a century from ashes to splendor—to a Present that has made it the Gateway—the Cultural City of the South. Go Forward, Atlanta, to unknown glories!

During the Years Ahead

—Atlanta's sons and daughters WILL accomplish—and MORE! Your efforts were NOT in vain!

Atlanta Ranks Sixth City

—Only five cities in the entire United States have issued more building permits than Atlanta. Fifteen main railroad lines reach a market of 12,000,000 and make possible overnight deliveries in every direction. Small wonder that during the last year EIGHTY-THREE new concerns have been attracted to the city.

Rich's has set aside Sunday and Monday as "Forward Atlanta Day." All of the Store's nineteen windows have been turned over to the movement. Pictures of Atlanta, past and present, are on display, together with copies of the Review of Reviews, Literary Digest, World's Work, Saturday Evening Post, Technical and Trade Journals in which have appeared advertisements of the Industrial Bureau of "Advertise Atlanta." Atlanta of the future is repre-

Exhibits From 83 Industries will occupy much of the window space—industries that have been attracted to Atlanta in the last year. They are most interesting. In addition, to celebrate "Forward Atlanta Day," every department on every floor will have an exposition of specially selected "Better Values" such as even this Store has never known. They are a promise of the future—exemplifying the sort of service an institution like Rich's, keeping ever in step with Atlanta's Forward Movement, can render to the public.

Construction Work Starts On Casino and Clubhouse At Avondale Estates Lake

Complete Structure To Be Ready by July 10; Tennis Courts Planned. Home Building Pushed.

Work began Saturday upon construction of a bathing casino and clubhouse at Lake Avondale, the beautiful stretch of clear water in the beautiful rolling, second unit of Avondale Estates, Atlanta's new suburb. The work was undertaken within a few hours after architect's plans were approved and the contract let to Hoke N. Smith, one of the group of builders who have had an important part in the development of the new suburb.

Mr. Smith announced his plans to complete construction work by July 10, and according to John H. Byrley, general manager of Avondale Estates, the bathing and bathing houses of crystal white sand, 20 carloads of which have been obtained for the purpose, will be laid. Lake Avondale probably will be ready for formal opening as a center of recreation July 4 and a holiday event of importance will thus be arranged.

Old English Type.

Architect's plans call for a clubhouse similar in lines to the bathhouse at the Avondale pool, but considerably larger. It will be an old English type with a charming rustic note to match the woodland setting, and will have a reception room, a refreshment room, lounge and rest rooms for both men and women, and showers, lockers and other accommodations for 150 bathers.

Overlooking the lake and the bathing beach will be a terrace extending the entire front of the clubhouse, and 35 feet wide, will be paved with flagstones and equipped with comfortable chairs and lounges, is expected to be an ideal spot for rest after a day outdoors, or for view of a shimmering body of water and its crowd of bathers.

It is the sand beach that is planned to be the glory. The crystal quartz sand will be laid 15 inches deep along the gently shelving shore of Lake Avondale's north end, and is planned to match in size and compactness the average equal stretch of ocean beach. A grove of trees at the west will provide shade for beach and clubhouse through the summer afternoon.

Boat House Planned.

Mr. Byrley announced plans to start shortly for construction of a boat house, 40 feet wide, to be located at the north end of the lake with three piers jutting into the water for boat landings. Canoes, rowboats, and light motorboats will be in the equipment of the boat house, and these will be available for dwellers and property owners of Avondale Estates and their guests, who can go boating, fishing, swimming, playing and other outdoor features.

Mr. Byrley said plans call for erection of a 50-foot diving tower 100 feet from the shore, where the clear spring water of Lake Avondale attains a depth of 100 feet or more.

Adjacent to the beach, on the north is a shady stretch of eight acres or more which is being developed as a park, and in which the work of landscaping is under way. Trees will be set out more thickly, and a summer house, rustic seats, and lawn swings will be made part of the park equipment.

Rustic bridges will connect the peninsula and mainland, making the park accessible from the main roads.

Tennis Courts.

As another detail in development of Avondale Estates as a model "outdoor" city it was announced that a contract has been let for construction of a series of tennis courts on Covington road. This dwelling, to be on the north side of the Avondale swimming pool and playground, these being designed to round out the facilities for $16,000.

Cornelia To Unveil Giant Concrete Apple Next Friday

15 1/2 FT.

The "world's greatest apple," which will be unveiled at Cornelia Friday morning at 11 o'clock.

Concrete proof of Georgia's superiority as an apple growing state is to be given to tourists by citizens of Cornelia, Georgia, who will unveil a mammoth concrete "King Apple" monument at 11 o'clock Friday morning with "apple-propriate" ceremonies.

Apple fans from "Apple-lachicola to Ann-apple-is" are invited to see the "world's greatest apple" kiss the breeze from the Habersham hills for the first time.

The apple, which will be mounted on an eight-foot pedestal, is painted the predominant color of the north Georgia product and weighs five tons. Those in charge of the program believe they have selected the heart of the apple belt to place the monument.

ATHEIST TO DEBATE ANTI-EVOLUTIONIST IN CHARLOTTE, N. C.

Charlotte, N. C., May 29.—(AP)—Mayor D. M. Abernethy, late today wired Harry F. Ward, of New York, chairman of the American Civil Liberties Union, advising that the scheduled debate between representatives of the American Association for Advancement of Atheism and the Anti-Evolution League of America, next Monday and Tuesday nights, will take place outside the city of Charlotte and therefore not within "our police jurisdiction."

The telegram was in reply to one received today from Mr. Ward saying: "We are advised that the Ku Klux Klan in your city have publicly threatened to prevent" the scheduled debates, and urging that proper protection be afforded "in case the constitutional rights of free speech and assembly are maintained."

Lakewood Park, which is a short distance outside the city limits, was secured by Dr. T. T. Martin, of Florida, for the debate, after he had tried in vain to secure a date in the auditorium of the hall in the city. The park is private property. Dr. Martin represents the Anti-Evolution league and the Bible Crusaders of America. Mr. English represents the American Association for the Advancement of Atheism. The latter is scheduled to come here for the debates in response to a challenge issued by Dr. Martin several weeks ago.

Resolutions were adopted and made public by the local Ku Klux Klan organization shortly after Dr. Martin issued his challenge, putting the Klan on record as opposing any debate in which an atheist was to participate here.

Charlotte, N. C., May 29.—(AP)—That part of the Island of San Salvador where history has decided Columbus first set foot in the new world becomes the property of the New York estate council. Knights of Columbus, with the authorization by the knights today of the payment of the last installment of $25,000 needed to purchase the site.

ALABAMIAN DIES FROM BULLET WOUND

Fort Lauderdale, Fla., May 29.—(AP)—Magnus Starling, 20, of Troy, Ala., an employee of a Boz Ratone Development company, died tonight from a wound received from the discharge of an automatic revolver. Starling was cleaning the weapon and looked down the barrel just as it fired. The bullet pierced the right eye.

J. M. Boyd, head of the engineering department, who was in the next room, ran Starling to the hospital at Fort Lauderdale in an automobile, but death occurred just before the hospital was reached.

Bonds for the buildings were voted last fall but the first bids advertised for were turned down by the city council on account of the excessive cost.

FITZGERALD TO BUILD SCHOOL BUILDINGS

Fitzgerald, Ga., May 29.—(Special)—Fitzgerald is advertising for bids for the building and equipping of two school houses and an auditorium to the high school. These buildings are to be erected in time for the opening of the fall term of the schools.

Bonds for the buildings were voted last fall but the first bids advertised for were turned down by the city council on account of the excessive cost.

MRS. JOHN E. BRIGGS DIES IN WASHINGTON

News of the death of Mrs. John E. Briggs, wife of the Rev. John E. Briggs, pastor of the Fifth Baptist church, Washington, D. C., who died suddenly Saturday, was received yesterday by Dr. W. W. Gaines, member of the Atlanta board of education. Mr. Briggs assumed the Washington pastorate 15 years ago, resigning from the pulpit of the Capitol Avenue Baptist church here, where he served for about four years. Funeral arrangements have not been announced.

Swedish Prince Was Descended From Josephine

Prince Gustavus Adolphus of Sweden, who was royally welcomed in Washington Thursday on his first visit to the United States, is the great, great grandson of the Empress Josephine.

Through his mother the crown prince is a great-grandson of Emperor William of Germany. The first wife of the crown prince and the mother of his children was the granddaughter of Queen Victoria, so in these children is combined the blood of Josephine, Bernadotte, the old Emperor William and Victoria.

JOINT SERVICES FOR LANDSLIDE VICTIMS TODAY

Joint funeral services for Paul Puckett and Ralph D. White, both of Yorkville, Ga., who were killed when an embankment caved in early Friday morning, about eight miles north of Dalton, Ga., will be held at 10 o'clock from Yorkville Methodist church. Interment will be in the churchyard.

Both men were employed by the Brooks-Calloway company and were removing dirt from an embankment used in a fill under the Raccoon creek trestle on the Southern railroad, when they were killed. Paul was completely covered by the landslide and was buried with his body.

White was survived by his wife and two small children; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Puckett, of Yorkville; two sisters, Mrs. Wilt Guston, of Austell, and Mrs. Gerald Ferguson, of Yorkville; seven brothers, Mr. and Mrs. Puckett, of Dalton; Mr. and Mrs. Puckett, of Cartersville.

White was survived by his wife and one daughter; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. White, of Yorkville; three sisters, Miss Floy Lee and Miss George Brown, of Villa Rica; and one brother, Lawrence White, of Yorkville.

COLLEGES IN U. S. TAKE REFERENDUM ON PROHIBITION

Chicago, May 29.—A composite view of the college student's attitude toward prohibition will be drawn up here Tuesday when ballots from a dry pool of more than 50 colleges and universities will be tabulated by the University of Chicago.

"Nearly all of the newspapers refer to the crown prince's descent from Bernadotte, Napoleon's marshal, who was adopted by the king of Sweden as his heir, but it is not generally known that Bernadotte is descended from Josephine," said Mr. Nutting.

"The son of Josephine by her first marriage, Eugene Beauharnais, married a Bavarian princess, and their daughter, also named Josephine for her grandmother, became the wife of Oscar, the son of Bernadotte. The son of this union, Oscar II, was the grandfather of the present crown prince.

The ballot is divided into two sections. One is for the selection by proportionate representation of an incoming committee of 100 men, women and intermediaries in their tendencies, to study the prohibition question. The second section is a referendum on prohibition with five questions ranging from the repeal of the 18th amendment to a more stringent law than at present.

CONFEDERATE LEADER TO BE REMEMBERED

Tribute to the memory of Jefferson Davis, president of Southern Confederacy, on the anniversary of his birthday, June 3, when Atlanta and Fulton county veterans, together with members of city and county U. D. C. chapters and school children, gather at the state capitol to take part in memorial exercises.

Dr. J. W. Beeson, well-known Atlanta man for 23 years was president of Methodist college, Meridian, Miss., will deliver the principal address of the exercises, which are scheduled to begin at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. Dr. Beeson distinguished himself as an educator and an orator during his long service at the head of the Mississippi institution. He came to Atlanta three years ago and has entered prominently into affairs of the city.

The memorial at the capitol on Davis' birthday is a long-established custom and is attended by hundreds annually. Other speakers, among them Confederate veterans and representatives of the U. D. C., will be heard. Some special feature of the program is the turning over to the school children, who attend the exercises in large numbers. This year preparations are being made to care for one of the largest crowds in the history of the custom.

VACATION NEAR, SUTTON PRAISES SCHOOL CHILDREN

Reviewing achievements of Atlanta school students during the past school year and expressing his appreciation again for the booklet of poems presented to him by pupils of every grade of the school, Willis A. Sutton, in his weekly letter to children Saturday, praised them; their teachers and members of the administrative forces for the fine spirit of cooperation which has made "history for Atlanta school."

A higher percentage of students will win promotions this year than ever before in the history of the public school system, Mr. Sutton sets out. The superintendent points again with pride to the 100 per cent record of Atlanta schools—the perfect teeth drive, in their various forms, and for health. In closing the letter, he wishes scholars a vacation "of profit and happiness."

FITZGERALD MAN HEADS PHONE ASSOCIATION

At the conclusion of a three-day session in Atlanta, the Georgia Independent Telephone association elected William A. Fitzgerald, president. He was reelected although he was unable to attend the session because of illness.

J. M. Dent, of Douglas, was named first vice president; J. L. Kirk, Moultrie, second vice president; C. D. McCutcheon, Dalton, third vice president; J. L. Mathews, Statesboro, treasurer; J. B. Manning, Fitzgerald, secretary; and J. Prince Webster, Atlanta, general counsel.

Prominent men engaged in the telephone business in Georgia, Alabama and South Carolina attended the session.

He Is Looking 'Em Over Again

"Eight years of stomach and liver trouble reduced me to a walking skeleton. My skin was dried up and as yellow as a twenty-dollar gold piece. I was filled with worms and severe pains in my right side. I could not think and had lost all ambition to do anything. Doctor's medicine did not touch me. My cousin advised MAYR'S, which snatched me from the grave. I have gained sixty pounds, eat like a lion, and am looking 'em over again." This is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded. Jacob's Pharmacy and druggists everywhere.

MITS-ATTACKS
Stopped in 3 Days

Dr. E. C. Clegg, of New York, says his son had as many as 50 attacks in 24 hours; was relieved in a day by taking MITS-ATTACKS. He says: "I am a great believer in MITS-ATTACKS. We, who have been using it, are very satisfied with it. It is a safe, reliable medicine. It is a great help to us in our work."

Three Hundred Nobles of Yaarab Temple Here Depart Today for Philadelphia Exposition

Yaarab Temple's chanters, who have sung at the opening of two imperial council meetings of the Shrine, have again been accorded that honor, and on June 2 when the session of the highest body in Shrinedom is called to order this famous singing organization will furnish the music under direction of Noble Frank A. Cundell. Nobles of Yaarab Temple, and Atlantans as well, are proud of the fact that Yaarab's chanters are recognized all over the North American continent as one of the very best organizations of male singers.

More than three hundred Nobles of Yaarab Temple, many of them accompanied by their families, will leave at noon today for the Imperial Council meeting of the Mystic Shrine, to be held in Philadelphia June 2.

The caravan will move on the Holy City of Mecca in two special trains over the Southern railway, arriving in Philadelphia at 10 a. m. Monday, and during the four-day stay in that city will be quartered at the Hotel Biltmore.

Potentate Tom Law, who heads the delegation from this oasis, will be attended by them, and patrol, chanters, oriental band, and degree team, official representatives of Yaarab Temple and a host of unmatched nobles and ladies. The potentate's staff will make the rounds of the hotels Monday night. Tuesday morning at the opening of the Imperial Council meeting Yaarab's chanters will furnish the music, under direction of Noble Frank A. Cundell, Tuesday afternoon. Yaarab's million-dollar band, under direction of Noble C. Edward Buchanan, will play a concert in one of the principal bandstands. Noble Buchanan has been rehearsing the band for the past month, and they will acquit themselves again in the manner that has won them fame. On Wednesday Yaarab's patrol, under direction of Captain F. E. Van der Veers, will appear in an exhibition drill in the stadium on the Sesqui-Centennial grounds. Yaarab's patrol won many honors at the Imperial Council meetings that their appearance at Philadelphia has been duly advertised as one of the big attractions.

Yaarab's greatest interest, however, is centered on the election of Imperial Outer Guard, the only office in Imperial Guard for which there is no election. The winner of this office, if there is one, will be presented in that of Past Potentate Henry C. Heinz, whose candidacy is sponsored by Yaarab Temple, and who has the hearty support of the representatives of numerous temples.

Past Potentate Heinz, who is one of Atlanta's foremost bankers and business men, is well and favorably known throughout the nation, not only in fraternal circles, but personally and in large business circles. His election, the second ballot is predicted by Shriner from all parts of the great desert of North America.

Yaarab's caravan will leave Philadelphia at 10 a. m. on Friday, arriving in New York at noon, and will leave New York at 4 p. m. Friday, the Clyde Line for Charleston, arriving in Atlanta Monday evening.

Yesterday Yaarab Temple was host to two temples which stopped off here on their way to Philadelphia. The caravans of Jerusalem Temple, New Orleans, and El Maha Temple, El Paso, arrived in the city Saturday in the morning, being met at the Terminal station by Potentate Law and a host of Nobles with automobiles. Luncheon was served the visitors at the Druid Hills golf club, and the delegation from El Paso left on their journey at 1 p. m. Saturday.

The caravans remained until midnight, being entertained with automobile rides and golf in the afternoon, dinner at the Capital City in the evening, after which they were carried to the palatial home of Noble Asa G. Candler, Jr., chief of Yaarab's staff.

FARM CLUB WORK BREAKS RECORD

Athens, Ga., May 29.—(Special)—A total of 11,025 boys are enrolled in the various agricultural, live stock and poultry clubs in Georgia in 1926, according to G. V. Cunningham, state boys' club agent of the Georgia State College of Agriculture. This compares with an enrollment of 10,763 boys in the same clubs for the year 1925. The 1926 enrollment will probably reach 11,500 for this year, Mr. Cunningham thinks.

The following are some of the counties with best enrollments, the number enrolled being given:

Franklin, 161; Gwinnett, 230; Hancock, 225; Stephens, 204; Bullock, 175; Elizabethton, 150; Johnson, 157; Ware, 157; Ben Hill, 140; Bleckley, 200; Crisp, 150; Decatur, 301; Barrow, 300; Butts, 150; Gordon, 251; Haralson, 300; Paulding, 400; Polk, 175; Troup, 200.

"The boys themselves have been a great aid to the clubs in their efforts to attract such large enrollments," said Mr. Cunningham. "For instance, William Penn, of Ben Hill community in Union county, was so enthused and inspired over his work as a club member that he had ambitions to see other boys and girls in his community enter clubs. He conferred with County Agent H. E. Wooten, secured enrollment cards and got 26 boys and girls lined up in his community to grow better cotton, corn, pigs and poultry."

"Now the further need of a community organization of the fathers, mothers, sons and girls for the promotion of social activities, as well as community study, a discussion and planning of problems of advancement. The result was that the whole community was brought together into a live and functioning organization with this boy as secretary to plan the meetings and the programs and the work of the live and lively farm communities in Georgia."

"Another example of good boy leadership is that of John Whiten, of Red Hill community in Franklin county. This youngster enrolled 23 boys in the various clubs, 20 of these made full reports of their work last fall. Though this was the drought which followed, 22 boys made 15 bales of cotton. Eighteen of the boys had exhibits at the county fair."

"Throughout Georgia, boys are assuming leadership in agricultural affairs, and will give to Georgia in the future a much needed farm leadership."

L. & N. Wins Suit For $2,452,268 For Right of Way

Covington, Ky., May 29.—Federal Judge Cochran today handed down a final decree in the suit of the Louisville & Nashville Railroad company against the Western Union Telegraph company, allowing the railroad company $2,452,268.18 and interest from February 17, 1926, for the use of the right of way.

The suit was filed in 1912 when the railroad sought to recover from the defendant company for the use of the right of way of the railroad company's poles and wires from the period of time after the expiration of a contract in 1909.

The plaintiff company sought to collect $100 per mile for each year. At the time the matter was referred to John Menzies, district clerk of the federal court, Covington, as special master commissioner. On November 5, 1921, after extended hearings over several years, Commissioner Menzies reported in favor of the L. & N. railroad and allowed the claim of $73,000.

Exceptions to his report were filed in September, 1925. Judge Cochran today entered a final decree in the suit giving the railroad $2,452,268.18 and interest.

MOTHER ADMITS KILLING INFANT BECAUSE IT CRIED

Morristown, N. J., May 29.—Mrs. Morris Klingman, twice previously committed to an institution for the insane, faces trial for the murder of her baby.

"The baby was crying and crying," she said Friday. "I thought I would go crazy. I suddenly had a desire to kill him. I snatched him up, ran to the well and dropped him in."

The baby boy was five weeks old. The death left Mrs. Klingman with two children. The woman was suddenly sent to the Well's Island Hospital for the Insane three years ago and again a few months later, but each time was released.

50,000 EXPECTED TO ATTEND LAYING OF HARDING STONE

Marion, Ohio, May 29.—(Special)—Providing all local facilities for 50,000 visitors was one of the problems confronting the executive committee of the Harding Memorial association which completed plans today for laying Sunday of the cornerstone of the $800,000 monument to President and Mrs. Warren G. Harding. Vice President Charles G. Dawes will lay the cornerstone and deliver the principal address.

Among others who will attend are Postmaster General New, Senators Frank B. Willis and Simon of Ohio; George A. V. Dona of Ohio; Aspinwall John T. McNicholas of Cincinnati, and Dr. Jesse Swank, chorister, who was Mrs. Harding's pastor.

3,000 Attend Marriage of Mellon's Daughter

By MARTHA STRAYER.

Washington, May 29.—Washington never saw a more beautiful wedding than Ailsa Mellon's, nor a more exquisite bride than the daughter of Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, who was married today to David K. E. Bruce.

It never saw a more distinguished crowd than the 400 high-hatted and high-hat invited guests who gathered for the ceremony and jammed Bethlehem chapel, national cathedral, where Woodrow Wilson and Admiral Dewey are buried.

Miss Mellon was charming but visibly nervous as her multi-millionaire father escorted her to the altar to become the bride of the son of Senator William Clegg Bruce, of Maryland, thus joining the Mellon millions of Pennsylvania with the blue-blooded Bruces and Cabells of Maryland and Virginia. Her father talked to her casually, as they walked along.

The heiress omitted "obey" from her vows. She promised only to "love and cherish." Her husband omitted "with all my worldly goods I thee endow." There were no kisses at the altar at the conclusion of the ceremony.

After the mammoth reception following the wedding, the couple left for an unknown honeymoon bower. They will sail next week for Rome, where the husband will take up his duties as vice consul, at a salary of $2,500 a year.

The bride's dress was magnificent. The court train, made of the same lace as the gown, was at least four yards long. The tulle veil was the same length. Two woman attendants held up train and veil until she reached the center chapel aisle, on her way to the altar. Then they dragged behind, almost a quarter as long as the aisle itself.

Both of the world's most famous wedding marches, and one of its most famous bridal songs, were included in the repertoire of the wedding party into the crowded chapel where guests occupied chairs in window embrasures and every other available inch of space, they sang "The Voice That Breathed O'er Eden." As the usher and the groom and his best man came through the separate doors, the organ swelled to the Lohengrin wedding march. As the bridal party left the church, the bride on the arm of her new husband, it played Mendelsohn's famous march.

Miss Mellon gave her responses in a clear voice, audible to the rear of the chapel. Two clergymen, one the bishop of the Washington diocese, officiated. One read the service. The wedding where the service asks if "Anybody knows any reason why this couple should not be united?" Then the other took it up, and continued to the place where the bride is given away. The first finished the ceremony, the second began it.

Absolutely all of Washington's social elect were among the guests at the church. The president and Mrs. Coolidge were there—arriving at the last minute, and adding their share to the general effect with their escort of gold braided white house aides and secret service men.

The appeal before the Tennessee Supreme Court at Nashville, Monday and Tuesday, will not attract exceptions to the trial, he declared in answering negatively questions as to whether he would go to Nashville.

MISS CIGARETTE SMOKING NOT DRUG HABIT, PROFESSOR SAYS

Beloit, Wis., May 29.—(AP)—Cigarette smoking is not a drug habit but is the result of a nervousness or the working of an inferiority complex.

At least Professor Olen Deweerd, head of the department of psychology at Beloit college, hopes to prove such is the case by an experiment he is working out by a group of college students.

Professor Deweerd believes that individuals begin to smoke and continue to do so because they consider themselves "out of things" and queer if they don't, especially in the presence of smokers.

Nine college students in psychology courses are experimenting with them to see just why they smoke and after the stop, whether and why they desire to start again.

MISS MINISTER BODY OF MERCER ELECTS CHARLES MARTIN

Macon, Ga., May 29.—(Special)—Charles Martin, of Red Clay, was elected president of the Mercer university at a recent meeting of the members of the association. Martin will serve during the coming scholastic year.

Other officers chosen were: Carlton S. Prickett, Commerce vice president; Robert Edge, Doerun secretary; Harvey Richardson, Chiley, Fla., pianist and B. L. Bond, Boston, chorister.

Premier Briand Faces Zero Hour

Paris, May 29.—Following the announcement of the cabinet today of its decision against consideration of the capital levy and its determination to put aside all other questions in favor of the task of restoring the franc, a conference was held by Finance Minister Peret, M. Berenger, Ambassador to the United States and Governor Robineau of the Bank of France, at which it was understood the three men discussed the possibility of financial aid from the United States.

By RALPH HEINZEN.

Paris, May 29.—Apparently it is becoming impossible for any French government to be assured of security for any length of time.

Premier Aristide Briand faces another zero hour in the chamber of deputies.

The cabinet announced today that it had decided that "the government's duty is to devote all thought and energy to the restoration of the franc, to the exclusion of all other questions for the present. It decided against the capital levy proposal and in other respects to act in some quarter, considered in direct defi to the socialists and radicals in the chamber."

The cabinet's statement fell like a bomb in the chamber and socialists promptly declared it a "declaration of war," while the radical socialist referred to it as a "veritable broadside."

Through the statement of his cabinet, which approved Finance Minister Paul Peret's committee of experts which would watch the exchange and suggest measures to defend the franc and which announced that "we cannot undertake fiscal innovations at this time," the balance of the nation is in the balance. Briand plainly is seeking a new majority in the chamber—the same majority which voted for the government Thursday, despite the fact that it is reduced to approximately 300 votes.

Everything now depends on the meeting of the radical socialists prior to the meeting of the cabinet Tuesday, when the radicals probably will move to interpellate the government regarding its financial policy.

Briand will be forced to put the question of confidence and this will be the signal for the battle.

Radical socialists will win a majority. If they vote in favor of the government, the Briand cabinet will fall.

In its announcement, the cabinet declared its important decision to permit return through the Bank of France of French capital sent abroad.

The decision against the capital levy and the decision to concentrate on financial recuperation was contrary to the desire of the socialists in that they desire to take up immediately the whole question of financial restoration of the republic.

House Concludes Debate on Rivers And Harbors Bill

Washington, May 29.—(AP)—General discussion of the $36,000,000 omnibus rivers and harbors bill ended in the house today after another dispute over the question of water diversion from the Great Lakes.

Consideration of the bill probably would be resumed next Thursday, with the possibility of a final vote by the end of the week.

The twelve hours general debate closed, as it had opened, with a colloquy between Chairman Dempsey of the rivers and harbors committee and Representative Burton, an Ohio republican and former chairman of the committee, over what each said were "basic and self-evident" facts concerning the river and harbor project.

Dempsey argued that both the republican and democratic parties committed themselves to such a project when they advocated in 1924 immediate steps in a national program for international navigation improvements. Burton denied that either party had committed itself to particular projects.

TWO RUM SHIPS WITH 700 CASES OF LIQUOR SEIZED

New York, May 29.—(AP)—Two rum vessels bearing more than 700 cases of assorted cordials valued at $200,000 seized by coast guardmen off East Hampton, L. I., were brought to the harbor office dock today. The crew of 100 alleged British seamen on one of them avoided capture by diving overboard and swimming about 200 yards to shore. Five men on the other were arrested.

The vessels were the two-master fishing smack, Helen W. McLean, of British registry, and the gasoline sloop Pinta, said to have been owned and operated by Daniel Grimshaw, of East Hampton. Grimshaw and a crew of four were arrested.

Going After the Coy Voters

REGISTER HERE TODAY

The portable registration booth of the Atlanta League of Women Voters is shown manned by officials of the organization and attaches of City Clerk Walter Taylor's office. The women have launched a drive to secure a large registration in order to awaken interest in municipal government, and have secured cooperation of city officials in their drive for "new voters." The booth is mounted on a truck, and moves to different sections of the city, registering those who otherwise might not register. Oscar Williamson, Jr., son of Alderman Oscar Williamson of the ninth ward, is seen sitting at the table putting his stamp of approval on an application.

BRIE CHARGE MADE IN ARKANSAS PARDON

Conway, Ark., May 29.—(AP)—The Conway Log Cabin Democrat today published a sworn statement by J. A. Mode, local banker and merchant, asserting that he paid Floyd T. Terral, Arkansas Governor Tom J. Terral, $1,000 for the pardon issued to his son, Lee Mode, by Acting Governor S. B. McCall, last October.

The statement was accompanied by an affidavit by Harry Durbin, a prisoner in the United States penitentiary at Atlanta, certifying Lee Mode of connection with the telephone store at Oppelo for which he was convicted.

Lee Mode was convicted in the Conway county circuit court at Morris-ton, and sentenced to serve three years in prison after a jury in Faulkner circuit court had failed to agree and a charge growing out of the same robbery had been nolle prossed. He is now at large and officers are seeking him to bring him to the penitentiary.

Mr. Mode in the published statement said that he had applied to Governor Tom J. Terral and that he had understood the governor would give his son a suspension of sentence and that the governor told him to return to Little Rock on October 20, 1937, and he went on that date, he said, he found that Governor Terral had gone to Birmingham, Ala., and that S. B. McCall was acting as governor.

He said that he had "heard it advised for anyone applying for a pardon under the present administration that he should go to Governor Terral and a lawyer of Little Rock, to assist in getting the pardon." He said he did not know McCall so he went to see Floyd T. Terral and that after some discussion he went to the bank, drew a draft and T. T. Terral $1,000 in currency at the latter's office in the Home Insurance building.

"A short time after that," his statement said, "the pardon was delivered to me for Lee."

He said that after the McCall affidavit was delivered he went to Floyd T. Terral and demanded a full and free pardon for his son or the return of $1,000. He said that Floyd T. Terral refused to return the money and urged that no steps be taken until after the primary election.

SCATTERED SHOWERS OVER STATE TODAY

Washington, May 29.—(AP)—A general discussion of the $36,000,000 omnibus rivers and harbors bill ended in the house today after another dispute over the question of water diversion from the Great Lakes.

Consideration of the bill probably would be resumed next Thursday, with the possibility of a final vote by the end of the week.

Florida Transit Proble - i Probed By Federal Body

Washington, May 29.—(AP)—An economic survey into all factors entering into the situation as it affects transportation in Florida will be undertaken by the commerce department at the request of the Florida Shippers Regional Advisory board of the American Railway association.

A. Lane Cricher, of the department's transportation division, has been selected to direct the investigation, and he will meet with the executive committee of the regional advisory board about June 15 to make final arrangements for the work.

The survey will cover movements of cement, tile, brick, lumber, sand and gravel, lime rock and asphalt, and will deal with the products, turnover, stocks on hand and distribution of these commodities.

In addition to assistance offered by the department by the regional advisory board, the Florida Chamber of Commerce also has expressed a willingness to aid in the survey.

FIFTEEN GERMAN ALIENS SENT HOME

Mobile, Ala., May 29.—(AP)—Fifteen aliens, bound for their homes in Germany, were aboard the German steamer Herald when she sailed from port today. The aliens were unlawfully in this country and were picked up by agents of federal immigration department at Mobile, New Orleans and Galveston.

Since the recent appropriation of $600,000 by congress for the deportation of aliens, the immigration department has been making a "clean-up" of undesirables.

TROLLEY REVISION GETS UNDER WAY

Changes in street car stops on the Peachtree-Whitehall street line will be made when work is completed on the Ponce de Leon-Walker-West View line, and other routes will be taken up in regular order until the new system is installed, it was announced Saturday by Georgia Railway and Power company officials.

The general revision of the trolley stop in Atlanta was authorized by the Georgia Public Service Commission a month ago, but the work of putting the new system into effect did not get under way until Friday on account of delay in delivery of stop signs. The new signs, all orange and black, will be placed in all cases whether a change in location is made or not. Each change will become effective when the old signs are removed and the new signs are fixed in place.

Approximately 350 stops will be eliminated, and about 150 stops will be moved and 54 new stops will be installed in the interest of speeding up the street car service. This improvement was recommended by the Beeler engineers, who made a survey of traffic conditions in Atlanta more than a year ago. The company's petition for revision of the stopping points was endorsed by council and extensively investigated by the public service commission before approved.

Changes in the car stops will be following on the various routes in the following order:

Ponce de Leon-Walker-West View: Peachtree-Whitehall: West Fair; West Peachtree-East Hunter: Buckhead-Oglethorpe; South Decatur-East Lake; Boulevard-West Hunter-Frvin Avenue; Peachtree-Magnolia; Pine-Grant park; River: English Avenue-Soldier Home; Luckie street-Waterworks; Forrest Avenue-Capitol Avenue; Highland Avenue-South Pryor-Federal Prison; East Point-College Park-Hapeville; Piedmont Avenue-Lakewood; Main Decatur; McDaniels street; Decatur street-East Fair-Marietta street.

On account of street improvements which are being made by the city on Washington street, changes in car stops on this street will be delayed for some time.

TYPOS WILL HOLD ANNUAL MEMORIAL SERVICES TODAY

The annual memorial services of Atlanta Typographical union, No. 48, will be held this afternoon at 3 o'clock, at the printers' lot, in Greenwood cemetery.

These services are held by the union each year in memory of their members who have died during the preceding twelve months. Rev. William S. Wier will preside this afternoon, while the principal address will be delivered by Rev. Marvin Williams, pastor of Wesley Memorial church.

The roll of the dead will be read by W. B. Atchison, while the graveside service will be conducted with wreaths and flowers by the woman's auxiliary of the union. The audience will sing "Nearer, My God, to Thee," and "Rock of Ages."

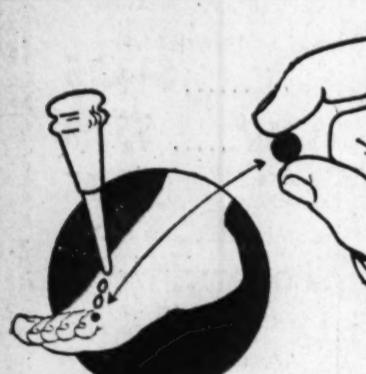

The memorial day committee consists of Rev. William S. Wier, chairman; J. B. Crenin, Dan W. Green, E. S. Mabry, F. T. Rayburn, J. Stoy, Mrs. Jesse W. Armitage, Mrs. W. E. Lomax and Mrs. W. J. Stoy.

DR. NILES WILL HEAD SOUTH GEORGIA CLUB

Dr. George M. Niles was elected president, Lott Narren, vice president, and Frank Hooper, Jr., re-elected secretary of the South Georgia club of Atlanta at its annual picnic and get-together meeting at Lakewood amusement park.

E. D. Hornady and Col. William Lawson Peel, past presidents, were elected to serve with Dr. Niles as an executive board and to direct a campaign through the year to bring all of the estimated 25,000 south Georgians into the club and into membership in the club by the time of the next picnic to be held at Lakewood in May of 1927.

Community chairmen will be named in each section of the city to carry on the campaign.

W. V. A. Allen, chairman of the executive board of the Southeastern Fair association, which maintains the park where the picnic was held, and chairman of the Forward Atlanta advertising commission, spoke briefly to welcome the south Georgians.

He outlined the plan of the Southeastern Fair association has been carrying on for more than 10 years to knit more closely the ties of friendship between Atlanta and the rest of Georgia and the southeast.

He also sketched the progress of the Forward Atlanta, which is bringing new capital and new people into Atlanta from other parts of the country.

An impromptu program of entertainment during the afternoon followed the picnic dinner, which was spread under the trees of the Sylvan Terrace.

Mr. Hornady, past president, was awarded the prize for the picnic basket most representative of south Georgia products, the basket having been packed in America and shipped here by mail.

SHORTER COLLEGE TO HEAR DR. KELLY SPEAK ON JUNE 8

Pardoning System Assailed by Boykin In Vinson Petition

Slayer of Husband in 1922, Sentenced to Life Imprisonment, Now Seeks Freedom.

SOLICITOR FIGHTS CLEMENCY APPEAL

Solicitor General Points Out "Fallacy" of Life Terms in Prison in Murder Convictions.

Solicitor General John A. Boykin will oppose the petition for a pardon filed Saturday with the state prison commission by Mrs. Cora Lou Vinson, convicted in 1923 of killing her husband, Dr. W. A. Vinson. In making public the filing of the application, Solicitor Boykin declared that the fact that Mrs. Vinson has filed an application for a pardon after serving such a short time on a life sentence "shows the fallacy of life sentence for first degree murder."

Mrs. Vinson was sentenced to be hanged, but after a long fight the sentence was commuted to life imprisonment.

Mrs. Vinson was shot down by Mrs. Vinson in the early part of 1922 as he sat in his office at Marietta street and Bellwood avenue. Mrs. Vinson first was convicted of murder and sentenced to hang. The case attracted nation-wide interest because it was the first time a woman had been sentenced to hang in Georgia in many years. She later was granted a new trial and a consent verdict taken so that she might be given a life term.

Hits Pardon Laws.

In referring to the present system of law in Georgia regarding pardons, Solicitor Boykin declared that it would cost the state less to give murderers five years' imprisonment, because they are eligible for parole after three years.

"It is a regular procedure for them to make formal action for parole after they have served three years of their terms," he said. "It has come to a point now where I not only have to write and send letters to prison officials, but am compelled to struggle to keep them there and I intend most vigorously to fight the efforts of Mrs. Vinson to gain her freedom."

"Mrs. Vinson's case illustrates the utter absurdity in advocating life sentences in lieu of death sentences. I only asked for a very light life sentence for Mrs. Vinson because I did not want to blot the name of the state of Georgia with the hanging of a white woman, but the jury sentenced her to hang. Since Mrs. Vinson's attorney arranged for her to be an example and given a life sentence, I have become convinced that murderers, regardless of sex, should be given the full penalty of death."

"Life imprisonment in Georgia means nothing but harassing applications for pardons and paroles as long as criminals are in prison. In case the first application for parole or pardon is refused murderers file applications repeated many times."

"If a life term meant anything,

Diplomas End School Year; Vacation Near

After "Graduation Week," 55,000 School Children Will Begin Vacation.

This week is known officially in Atlanta as "graduation week." For on Friday 55,000 school children will begin the summer vacation period.

Examinations are over and young Atlanta today awaits the official close of the school year. School work is completed. All that remains is the red tape of winding up the term.

All high school graduation exercises will be held at the city auditorium with Boys' High school heading the list Tuesday night. Commercial High school seniors will be awarded diplomas Wednesday night; Girls' High Thursday night and Tech High Friday night.

Junior High school students will receive diplomas from the Wesley Memorial Methodist church Thursday in the following order:

Bass, at 9 o'clock in the morning; Steele, at 11 o'clock; Smith, at 2 o'clock in the afternoon, and Brown, at 4 o'clock.

Dr. R. M. Embanks, president of the board of education, will award diplomas.

Promotion day from elementary to junior high and from junior high school to senior high will take place Thursday and all schools will close officially at 11 o'clock Friday morning, according to an order issued by Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of schools.

School commissioners in each ward will present certificates to elementary school graduates.

"We will end the most successful school year in the history of public education," Dr. Steele said. "Mr. Sutton declared Saturday in commenting on the closing of the schools for the summer months. "Pupils, teachers and all persons connected with the school system have tried to make this the best year ever. We have been speaking for themselves. A large percentage of students will be promoted this year than ever before and the school system generally is better than at any time since I have been connected with it."

Coolidge Dedicates Monument to Builder of Iron-Clad Monitor of Civil War Fame.

SWEDISH PRINCE THANKS AMERICA

Crown Prince Emphasizes Desire of Sweden To Maintain Cordial Relations with U. S.

BY THOMAS L. STOKES

Washington, May 20.—President Coolidge took the occasion of the dedication of a monument to John Ericsson, inventor of the civil war iron-clad "Monitor," to appeal for a perfect amalgamation of races, nationalities and castes in the American melting pot, pointing to the Swedish inventor as an example.

Crown Prince Gustavus Adolphus and Princess Louise, of Sweden, shared in the tribute to their countryman, standing with the president and a host of high officials about the monument, which rises along the Potomac almost in the shadow of the Lincoln memorial.

Crown Prince Gustavus Adolphus and Princess Louise, of Sweden, shared in the tribute to their countryman, standing with the president and a host of high officials about the monument, which rises along the Potomac almost in the shadow of the Lincoln memorial.

Coolidge declared that the purpose of the gathering today about the monument was "to glory in the name of John Ericsson and his race as a preeminent example of the superb contribution which has been made by many different nationalities to the cause of our country."

"We honor him most of all because he was a great American."

Crown Prince Replies.

The Crown Prince replied to the president, making his first public address in this country.

"John Ericsson," he declared, "is the incarnation of our desires and hopes for an unbroken friendship with America. In him are represented the common aims and aspirations of two free peoples imbued alike with democratic ideals."

The country of great resources and unlimited possibilities gave to this genius the opportunity to develop to the full the abilities for the benefit of mankind. The debt of gratitude which he owed to this nation, he was enabled to repay in a manner that came to be of signal importance for the unity of your country."

Just how important the "Monitor" was regarded by President Coolidge was indicated when he said that "we did for the man of cause of the sea what the battle of Gettysburg later was to do for it on land."

If some of the European countries had any serious thought of joining with the south, such intentions would quickly disappear.

The foregoing was the consensus of opinion of Lewis H. Hause, business manager; Lew Morton, stage director, and Charlie Burton, musical director, and concurred in by Charles Howard Candler, president of the association of business men who were sponsoring the second season.

Announcement that a special "bar-gain matinee" every Wednesday afternoon had been decided upon was made by Mr. Candler. Performances will be given every night and Saturday afternoon as last year.

Price Scale Fixed.

The following schedule of seat prices was adopted:

Orchestra: First 11 rows, $2; remainder of first floor, $1.50; Balcony: First 4 rows, $1.50;

Goldstrom En Route Omsk

GLOBE-CIRCLER SHOWS FATIGUE

Aboard Siberian Train

BY ANNA LOUISE STRONG.

(Special Correspondent of the Constitutions and North American Newspaper Alliance. Copyright, 1926, by North American Newspaper Alliance.)

Moscow, May 29.—John Goldstrom, correspondent of The Constitution and North American Newspaper Alliance, has not communicated with the office here since his departure at 10 o'clock Thursday night. As Goldstrom showed very plainly the evidences of his air sickness, fatigue, and the grueling nerve strain of his day's delay by fog in Germany, we believe that he is resting in his compartment of the Trans-Siberian railway, knowing that he will be promoted to a time-table to locate him.

We should hear from him at Omsk, about 1,800 miles from here, across the Ural mountains, which lie between Europe and Russia and Siberia. It is a 60-hour run from Moscow to Omsk and a four-day trip from Omsk to Chita, where the globe circler hopes to be met by Japanese planes. This means that he will arrive at Chita about noon, June 2, with four days to reach Yokohama, where he must catch the steamship President Madison.

Across Russia he should his present advantage of nearly two days over John Henry Mears, present holder of the record of less than 36 days for circling the globe, and of more than two days over Jager Schmidt, the previous record holder. Both of them used the Trans-Siberian also.

At Omsk, Goldstrom will be about 6,800 miles out of New York, with 11,700 miles to go. He will have used less than 11 days of the 35 possible for a record-breaking performance. The slowest days of his trip are before him, however, the four days from Omsk to Chita, and there is always the possibility that the Japanese planes may be unable to meet him in the Siberian interior, because of weather or political difficulties.

Goldstrom's landing here was made in the vast Hodinok field of Moscow, historically famous as the place where 100 people were trampled to death

Georgia Women Prominent

MRS. INMAN'S PARTY IS BIG FEATURE
At Meeting of Federation

BY ANNA STEESE RICHARDSON, Atlanta City, N. J., May 29.—(Special.)—The eighteenth biennial of the General Federation of Women's Clubs is now in full swing. It opened Tuesday night with all pomp and ceremony dear to organized women when trumpeters greeted a stately processional of officials.

Hostesses from New Jersey, Pennsylvania, and Atlantic City, with Mrs. Poole, of Massachusetts as chairman, have done nobly. The steel pier auditorium is handsomely decorated with evergreen wreaths, white hunting roses, and gold lanterns, and potted plants. The opening dinner for officials at the Hotel Ambassador was a beautiful function. An old-fashioned, formal bouquet, in paper lace holder, and a silver compact containing perfume and lip stick were given each guest.

New Jersey's contribution to the opening program was a group of songs by Merle Alcock, of the Metropolitan Opera company.

Mrs. John B. Hammie, president of the Pennsylvania Federation, addressed several thousand delegates at the Thursday afternoon. On the same day Mrs. Samuel M. Inman, of Atlanta, chairman of fine arts, received several hundred guests at a musical and tea given for Mrs. Vera Bull Hildreth, of the National Music League whose young artists have been an outstanding feature of the biennial's musical program and whose work is endorsed by the federation.

Mrs. Marion Monahan, soprano, sang. Bernard Ocko, violinist, played. Mrs. Charles M. Pickering, Atlanta, president of fine arts, presided at a tea table decorated with pink carnations. A high standard of music and hospitality marked this beautiful social event.

Georgia women are taking an active part in the federation meetings. Mrs. Alonso B. Bishard, of Atlanta, spoke at the conference on prisons and jails and seconded the nomination of Miss Louise Popenheim, South Carolina, for honorary vice president. Mrs. James F. Hays, of Montevideo, president of Georgia, heads editorial recording secretary, after serving two terms. Mrs. Ira Farmer spoke at a tea given by Edith McClure Patterson, budget expert, on cooperation of federation in helping men stored intelligent buying and the American Homes conference.

Mrs. A. P. Brantley, of Blackshear, state president of Georgia, heads officially and tactfully her delegation, including Mrs. Hays, Mrs. Inman, Mrs. L. R. Riddle, Mrs. E. E. Springer of Atlanta, Mrs. E. L. Cole, of Barnesville, Mrs. W. S. Martin and Mrs. G. M. Cannon, Jr., of Dalton.

Friday night the entire delegation was entertained by the Woman's Home Companion at a theater party, after which Georgia songs were sung on the boardwalk.

"The landscapes belong to the people," she said.

South Carolina Opposes.

Mrs. Leroy Springs, of South Carolina announced that her state, unanimously opposed federal regulation of child labor.

Public opinion was against it in her state, she said.

"We deny the right of others to regulate our own affairs. I know the conditions in the cotton mills. I live in a cotton mill town and I urge and demand to allow us to regulate our own affairs."

Mrs. T. D. Park, Birmingham, director and president of her state, declared that state labor laws were of first importance, that Alabama laws were working admirably in this respect, and that there was no need for federal regulation.

"Don't be swept off your feet by sub stuff," pleaded Mrs. L. S. Gillette, Murfreesboro, Tenn. "Tennessee has good child labor laws, other states can have them too."

Mrs. George Madden Martin, of Louisville, Ky., accepted the objection of her state, her club and of herself as an individual.

The stand of Florida was defined in this statement by Mrs. Katherine B. Tippins, president of the state federation: "I believe that the general federation program as planned for the 1928-29 year will not substitute resolution offered. I do not believe that state laws alone would cover the migratory labor problem between the states. I am in favor of a federal law that would cover such conditions."

The substitute resolution was offered by Mrs. William F. Blanton, of Orlando, director for Florida.

There might be some excuse for abolishing the death penalty, but if you abolish the death penalty in this venture to state that murders in this state would increase 100 per cent. The mere possibility of a death penalty will deter crime."

The mother of Dr. Vinson by his wife was the most brutal murder ever committed in Fulton county. She deliberately planned the murder and used her little daughter as a decoy.

"As I remember the evidence in the case Mrs. Vinson, with her daughter, entered the house, which was on a quiet road so that no one would know her intended designation. Upon arriving there she sent the girl to her husband who was in his office. Then she went in. Dr. Vinson was seated at his desk writing. She entered. She took a revolver from the folds of her dress and fired, the bullet penetrating Dr. Vinson's eye, and killing him instantly," Mr. Boykin concluded.

Chamber Plans
Strenuous Drive
For D.A.V. Funds

The Atlanta Chamber of Commerce will make a strenuous effort Monday afternoon to find some method of pulling the disabled American veterans "out of the hole."

Headed by Mayor Walter A. Sims and John V. Clegg, the committee of citizens which tried all last week to raise the $35,000 convention entertainment fund, waited on the chamber of commerce Saturday and asked its assistance. President W. D. Homan at once announced he would do everything possible and called a meeting of prominent men for 3:30 o'clock Monday afternoon. Letters were sent to more than a thousand men asking them to attend and stating that no funds would be collected at this meeting, but some way decided upon to raise the deficit quickly.

The situation will be explained in full at May 28 and Major A. Warren Candler, who has been working several weeks to help the local chapter of the D. A. V. raise the fund.

DANCES AND MUSIC WILL BE OFFERED AT LAKEWOOD PARK

The Southeastern Fair association will introduce a new policy of free civic entertainment at Lakewood park this week, beginning with an augmented concert program for this afternoon. Announcement of the new policy was made Saturday by Ivan E. Allen, chairman of the "Forward Atlanta" advertising, commission and chairman of the executive committee of the fair association, and George Mills, secretary-manager of the fair and park.

Other free civic amusement features of the week will be a civic dance in the Lakewood Casino Monday night and two night shows by an aerial acrobatic troupe throughout the week.

Miss Nita New, popular member of last year's light opera company, is to appear in light opera here this year, will be presented in vocal roles in the concert from 3 to 5 o'clock this afternoon.

The Elks' Royal Purple band, conducted by John T. Lee will play.

ODD FELLOWS PLAN MEMBERSHIP DRIVE

Plans to launch a membership campaign to last one month will be formed at a meeting of Central Lodge No. 28, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, to be held Monday night at 7:30 o'clock.

Dr. R. Stoker, police grand, will have charge of the business session. A special program, open to Odd Fellows, their families and invited friends, will be held at 8 o'clock after the business session is completed.

B.Y.P.U. HEADS PLAN FOR STATE MEETING

Delegates from 1,600 Baptist unions of Georgia representing more than 50,000 young people in training for church work will convene June 16-18, in Atlanta, Georgia, under the direction of Dr. Edwin S. Preston, state secretary, of Atlanta. Macon officers have been notified that about 1,500 delegates will attend.

H. Lewis Batts, former state secretary of the B. Y. P. U. and now a resident of Macon, is chairman of local arrangements and through the committee which he also has at work plans for the entertainment of the big convention are progressing. In previous years the annual state convention has drawn from a thousand to fifteen hundred delegates.

Macon, birthplace of the new large organization, is to be the host of the thirty-first state B. Y. P. U. convention and from correspondence sent out by the officers of the union, plans are fast forming to royally entertain all official delegates.

Speakers for Wednesday and Thursday nights of the convention are two of the outstanding Baptist leaders of the south, Dr. Henry Alford Porter, formerly of Georgia and now pastor in St. Louis, and Dr. R. G. Lee, formerly of New Orleans and now pastor at Charleston, S. C.

On Week-End Trip.

Miss Clothilde Scott, secretary of the office of the International Division in the local federal building on Saturday left for Waverly Hall, Ga., where she will visit relatives over the weekend. Miss Scott was accompanied by Miss Jewel Mae Wilson, her cousin.

Special Ceremonies Mark Laying of Cornerstones At Oglethorpe University

Notables Take Part in Saturday's Program. Seniors Get Diplomas at Tonight's Exercises.

BY DAVE MUNDAY.

Laying of cornerstones for Her mane stadium, to cost approximately $1,000,000, and for the Lowry School of Commerce building, to be erected at an expenditure of $200,000, formal opening of Lupton hall, and election of Mrs. E. Rivers as president of the woman's club, were outstanding events Saturday afternoon. More than 3,000 persons attended the events, a part of the commencement program of the in stitution.

The stadium, which will seat more than 45,000 persons, will be larger than the famous Roman Coliseum. It is to be the gift of Mr. and Mrs. Rivers to the son and daughter of Harry P. Her mane, of Toronto, Canada, former Atlanta, who gave the first $50,000 for its construction. In the glowing dusk late Saturday Mr. Her mane dedicated the edifice to students of Oglethorpe, expressing the hope that the structure "will do much to ward off making their lives useful and strong."

The big crowd filed to the western section of the campus and the cornerstone of the Lowry building was laid by William Adger, Lauder, president of the Pennsylvania Lumber Exchange, of Philadelphia, Pa. The building was made possible by funds bequeathed by the late Colonel Robert J. Lowry, beloved Atlanta, and member of the board of founders.

Seniors Get Diplomas.

The seventh annual commencement exercises of the university will take place tonight at 8 o'clock at the First Presbyterian church when 45 students will be awarded diplomas. Dr. James Routhier, minister of the church, and after college hymns are sung, the invocation will be pronounced by the Rev. J. Fairman Preston, missionary of the Southern Presbyterian church to Korea.

The principal address will be delivered by the Rev. M. Asbury, formerly of the church, and now of St. Mary's, Atlanta. Howard Lindsay will deliver the class oratory and the Rev. H. W. Bloch, pastor of St. Mary's Presbyterian church, St. Mary's, Pa., will read the scripture text.

One of the main features will be the conferring of honorary degrees upon the following, who were honor guests at Saturday's exercises:

Doctor of divinity upon the Rev. John Fairman Preston and Dr. Henry William Bloch; doctor of commercial science, Harry Putnam Her mane; doctor of laws, Henry Morel Atkinson, William Adger Lauder and Meredith Ashby Jones.

Other Officers Named.

Mrs. Katherine Huyler Conner, retiring president of the woman's board, was presented with a handsome gold wrist watch by Mrs. Thorn Well Jacobs, on behalf of the organization. Besides Mrs. Rivers, other officers elected were: Mrs. Charles A. Conklin, Mrs. Frank M. Inman, Mrs. Henry Power, Mrs. William J. Sizer and Mrs. George Johnson, vice presidents; Mrs. I. R. Carlisle, recording secretary; Mrs. Fred Stewart, corresponding secretary; Mrs. B. F. Ulmer, treasurer, and Mrs. Albert Thornton. Mrs. James Madison High, directors of the endowment fund. This meeting was in the main hall, the building given to the university by Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Lupton, of Chatanooga, Tenn. It contains a spacious auditorium, gym, classrooms, administrative offices and student quarters. It cost about $400,000 and is of granite and is equipped with modern conveniences. The cornerstone was laid about two years ago.

Speakers at the exercises on the athletic field, in addition to Mr. Her mane and Dr. Jacobs were Willis P. Sutton, superintendent of city schools; Frank Anderson and Harry Robins, athletic directors, Dr. H. W. Bloch, Colonel Edgar Watkins and others.

A temporary stand was erected and draped in old gold and black, the university colors. After the address of Mr. Her mane, the students gave him three cheers. He was assisted in laying the stone by Mr. Conklin, his son, H. P. Her mane, Jr., and his daughter, Miss Helena Hermance.

Dr. Jacob Speaks

"It's not often friends, that I get a thrill," began Dr. Jacobs, "but this is the biggest thrill I have experienced since the cornerstone was laid for the first Oglethorpe building in the distance there. Before you is a field that in the future will be a history-making spot for my school can program and neglects athletics."

This stadium will be the largest granite structure of its kind in the world. Great universities who have stadiums built them of concrete, but not granite. Our field will be equipped with a score of amenities and there will be nothing else like it here."

Mr. Sutton emphasized that athletic events are a necessity and such activity is conducive to the upbuilding of high moral standards and "backbone."

Mrs. John K. Ottley, chairman of the executive committee, announced that the membership had been increased to 450 and that $5,000 had been contributed by the women annually for the past four years under the leadership of Mrs. Conklin.

Saturday night visitors were entertained at a bus stop in Lupton hall and witnessed a play written and presented by the Oglethorpe players. A concert by the school orchestra followed.

HOT FIGHT SEEN IN LIBERAL PARTY

... QUIETER THAN DEAF MUTE IN SILENT PRAYER ...

Hollywood Movie Colony Seen as Eight O'Clock Town

(Copyright, 1928, for The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

London, May 20.—The final show down between David Lloyd-George and Lord Oxford, and the leadership of the liberal party will come Tuesday at a meeting of the parliamentary liberal party prior to the reopening of parliament when Lord Oxford's friends propose to move a resolution of censure for Lloyd-George and his handling of the miners' strike. This, if carried, is equivalent to his expulsion from the party, and if Lord Oxford's followers choose to exert their strength there is no doubt that they can carry it.

Situation Unusual.

The situation is an extraordinary one in that Lord Oxford and his supporters are the only members of the liberal party of parliament, while Lloyd-George undoubtedly has a far larger following among the liberal voters in the country and has the support of practically all the liberal press, according to The London Daily News. London Chronicle and Manchester Guardian, he is now supported strongly by two great liberal weeklies, The Nation and New Statesman, both of which declare Lord Oxford has surrendered any right to call himself a liberal. Lord Oxford's only present support is The Westminster Gazette, a paper of little influence.

It is true that when the inhabitants meet by chance on the streets after 10 o'clock at night, they customarily greet one another with a drawn "good morning." Hollywood, however, is the thoroughfare of romances and fiction, is described after 10:30 p. m. except for a few blocks in the theater zone.

The reason for all of this is that movie actors and actresses have discovered that late hours and riotous living are bad for the complexion.

miners, yet constant negotiations are going on through third parties and in discussions in the press. A big debate on the coal situation is expected when parliament reassembles Tuesday.

BOTH THOMAS SOLONS STAND FOR REELECTION

Thomasville, Ga., May 20.—(Special)—While Thomasville may not become generally stirred up to any extent in regard to politics it is of interest to know that both Judge H. W. Hopkins of this city and Thomas E. McNease, present representative to the legislature from Thomas county, will be candidates for reelection.

Cool Strike Serious.

In the meantime, the coal strike is almost overshadowed by the political strike, which is its effects.

Miss Carl Ramspeck, "Hemlock," was the second award.

"Jean Dare," ridden by Frank Adair, was given the fourth, the winners being "Louise," whose rider was Miss Jamie Howell.

In the polo class Captain J. S.

Slicer on "Blaze" won the grand prize, a handsome cup. Second, third and fourth places were taken by P. D. Christian, "Casey," Sergeant Ray Love, "Casey," and Joe Clark on "Bubble," respectively.

Miss Carl Ramspeck was given the cup for being the best woman rider.

She rode "Hemlock," owned by Warren Toole, Jr. Other awards went to Frank E. McNease, "Rex," and Angelique DeGolian, age 2 1/2, on "Dan."

Eleven fine horses from the new Garden Hills Riding stables were exhibited in a special event. The class included the following mounts and riders: "Santa" Miss Mary Leed; "Red Fox" Mrs. Carl Rampeck; "Forest Prince" Phil McDuffie, Jr.; "Gloria" Bill Binford; "Dan" George McDuffie; "Model Prince" James Dorsey; "Pat Worth" Mrs. Stacy Earnest Hill; "Scrappy" Clyde Furley and "Lord Brentwood" Miss Cobb were other winners.

"Lear," a dark chestnut mare, owned and ridden by Robert E. Harvey, won the Henry Grady cup for the best five-gaited horse.

Frank Adair, on "Miss Myra Scott's" "Laydie Dare," took second place.

"Laydie" was the second place.

Graduation of 9,380 Students By 309 Accredited Schools In Georgia Breaks Records

Enrollment for 1926 Was 43,512 Pupils; Thirty-Nine Schools Added in

BY JOHN E. DREWRY.

Athens, Ga., May 29.—(Special)—Graduation of 9,380 boys and girls from 309 accredited four-year high schools in Georgia this year as compared with the 9,400 graduates of the seven accredited four-year high schools in 1925. The increase in the present year has been made in secondary education in Georgia within the past 20 years, according to Dr. Joseph S. Stewart, professor of secondary education at the University of Georgia and chairman of the state commission on high school accrediting.

Dr. Stewart points out that of accredited Georgia high schools has doubled every five years since the first class under the system in 1905. In that year there were 500 graduates, which included those from the three-year schools, as well as the 94 from four-year schools. In 1911, there were 1,000 graduates; in 1916, 2,000 graduates; in 1921, 4,500 graduates, and this year, 9,380 graduates.

Thirty-nine new Georgia schools were added to the list of accredited schools this year, according to Dr. Stewart, which brings the total to 309. Of these 82 are in the southern list. This is more than that of any other state except Texas.

Of this year's graduating classes throughout the state, boys constitute 45.2 per cent and girls 54.7, thus giving the girls a slight lead over the boys. Dr. Stewart says that 4,812 white girls will receive high school diplomas this year, and the 184 negro boys and 200 negro girls will receive diplomas.

There were 89,335 children in the first grade in 1914. This would constitute the graduating class this year, eleven years after entering. Latest figures from the U. S. Bureau of Education indicate that 139,000 of every 1,000 entering the first grade complete high school. According to this, there should be 12,310 graduates this year in Georgia. This leaves the state 3,408 short.

In the towns as contrasted to the counties, the percentage of graduates is well above average. Dr. Stewart says, when asked, "the deficit is in the lack of provision for adequate rural high school facilities."

"As soon as the county boards provide for your years of high school training for rural youth either in creating more four-year rural schools in the rural districts or in sending the rural youth to the last two years of the accredited school of the county, we may safely expect the total number of graduates to equal that of any state in the United States," Dr. Stewart believes. "It is a question of money and organization. The children are here."

Started in 1903.

It was in 1903 that creation of a system of accrediting high schools in Georgia was begun by the State University through Dr. Stewart, professor of secondary education. Within 23 years, the number of accredited four-year schools has been increased from seven in 1905 to 309 for this year.

In 1925 the accrediting committee was changed into a commission by Chancellor David C. Barrow of the University of Georgia. The commission on accrediting for 1926-27 is composed of J. S. Stewart, University of Georgia; Dr. F. A. Briscoe, University of Georgia; J. R. Fain, State College of Agriculture; J. G. Stipe, Emory University; Peyton Jacobs, Mercer University; H. H. Caldwell, Georgia School of Technology; J. E. Parks, F. A. Briscoe, state supervisor of high schools. The total enrollment of the Georgia accredited high schools for the 1925-26 session was 43,512, divided among the four high school classes as follows: First year, 13,844; second year, 15,577; third year, 10,609; and fourth year, 9,380. This total does not include the three-year junior high schools in cities like Atlanta and Savannah. These, if counted, would bring the enrollment of the school systems accrediting to 50,000. In the Georgia schools, there are those that are enroled from 20,000 to 25,000 more. This makes at least 70,000 in attendance at Georgia high schools this year.

Teachers Hold Degrees.

Seventy per cent of the high school teachers in Georgia are now, according to Dr. Stewart, in training into some kind of system the large number of small schools in the rural districts.

MOTHER!

Child's Best Laxative is
"California Fig Syrup"

Hurry Mother! A teaspoonful of "California Fig Syrup" will thoroughly clean the little bowel and in a few hours you have a well, playful child again. Even if cross, feverish, bilious, constipated or full of cold, children love its pleasant taste. Tell your druggist you want only the genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on the bottle. Mother, you must say "California." Refuse any imitation.—(adv.)

Ponce de Leon School Youngsters Present Operetta As Brilliant Feature of School's Closing Program

Children of Ponce de Leon school of Decatur as they appeared in the operetta, "The Smuggle Man," given at the school auditorium recently as a feature of the commencement exercises. The affair was one of the brilliant program numbers to mark the school's close for this year.

Second and third graders presented a playlet entitled "Sleepy Boy Blue," while children of the more advanced grades presented a novel operetta, "The Smuggle Man." The latter was featured by the splendid chorus work. Principal parts were taken by Mary Frances Davis as the "Fairy Queen" and James Rammage, as the "Smuggle Man." The chorus of mothers, knights and horses was especially good, while the "Jam Boys" were presented in a most skillful manner on the professional stage. Little Miss Elizabeth Belcher gave a delightful reading during the intermission.

Children were trained for these productions by Miss Emily Davis, principal, while Mrs. Julian Harris, sixth grade teacher, was musical director. The auditorium was filled to capacity by parents and friends.

Memphis, Tenn., May 29.—(P)—Gas bombs and gas masks will be part of the equipment of federal prohibition enforcement agents in this territory, Captain Jesse L. Thompson, deputy prohibition administrator, announced today. An order to mob of 100 men on agents while conducting a raid in Union City caused him to order the warlike equipment, Captain Thompson said.

Students of religion are endeavoring to connect the discovery of the manuscript with the subject on which Dr. Roerich has written several monographs.

Was the character of Christ and his teachings molded by the Buddhist environment, or were the Asiatic priests swayed by the simpler ideas of the Savoir?

From the character of the Savoir manuscript, it is thought the Buddhists were influenced toward the Christianity which had not yet been named by their Holy Visitor.

Hamlet's Home Town Celebrates Five Hundredth Anniversary

Helsingør, alias Elsinore, will celebrate in June its past which began 500 years ago.

"One ghost, at least, of Elsinore's past is known the world around," says a historian from the National Geographic Society giving an account of this famous Danish town "that of the shade of a king of Denmark, father of Prince Hamlet."

"But the other members of the cast of Shakespeare's drama are no ghosts to the Helsingorians. Ophelia and Hamlet, Polonius and the rest bring considerable trade to the town annually from tourists. Most of these are all is the king's castle. What tourist will pass Helsingør, when he can pace the very same rampart where Hamlet met his father's ghost?

Satisfying the Tourist.

"One American who happened to visit Helsingør in the winter some years ago was asked by a citizen of the town asking the way to Hamlet's grave. A search at that time of year would be fruitless, the candid Dane told him, because the grave was not usually built up before spring. English and American tourists annually carry it off bit by bit, the Dane explained, until there is nothing left of the artificial mound by then."

"Hamlet's home town is a sort of out-dated Gibraltar of the Baltic. The entrance to the Baltic is even more constricted than the Straits of Gibraltar. One sails into Skagerack north east along the lobe of Norway, then southeast down the Kattegat, separating Denmark and Sweden to the south. Here the traveler can easily pick out houses and people on both banks, for the shores are only two and a half miles apart. On the Danish headland is Helsingør, while its Swedish twin on the opposite side is called Helsingborg. The sound continues narrow for 40 miles. Its Baltic throat is clogged with an island, Bornholm, which is the Danish mainland shore is the metropolitan and capital city of Copenhagen. The latter has outdistanced Helsingør because it could be guarded better. Copenhagen's quay-lined channel also offers protection from storms which Helsingør could never provide."

"In 1429, when Helsingør was founded, there was, indeed, 'something rank' in the air, for the Danes, though it was 250 years before Shakespeare got around to say so. The king needed money to run the country on and to buy 'butter for the royal slice of bread.' But the nobles of Denmark, who were the tax collectors, told the king they needed the money much worse than he did. The general strike of the nobles was compromised by an agreement that the king should have all the revenue from dues which would be levied on every vessel that passed through.

Began Life as Customs Station.

"So Helsingør was born, since it was the logical place for a customs station. Prospering also at this period was the Hanseatic league, a sort of glorified international chamber of commerce. Thousands of the league's ships had to pass Helsingør annually from tourists. Most of these are all is the king's castle. What tourist will pass Helsingør, when he can pace the very same rampart where Hamlet met his father's ghost?

POLICE PREPARE TO FILE CHARGES

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Muskegon, Mich., May 29.—Bomb experts, postal inspectors, state police and county officers spent the day in Blue Lake township collecting the final links in the chain of circumstantial evidence which the state believes will be sufficient to convict Asa K. Bartlett, 28-years old, constable and Ku Klux Klan leader of mailing the bomb which wrecked the Three Lakes tavern and caused the death of August Krubaech, supervisor and hotel owner, his daughter, Jeanette, 18, and William R. Franke, 22, of Chicago.

Prosecutor R. Glenn Dunn announced that Bartlett would be arraigned Tuesday morning on a charge of murdering Mr. Krubaech, his bitter political enemy. The warrant charging murder in the first degree was issued today.

"If you can prove I purchased address stickers for parcels at the Montague postoffice last Wednesday, I will tell you the entire story," Bartlett said to the prosecutor. And Prosecutor Dunn says he has the proof, two women clerks at the post office who knew Bartlett well having sold the stickers, the same make, and size as was placed on the bomb package.

"And it is only a small portion of the evidence we have," said Mr. Dunn. "Bartlett admits being in Muskegon at the hour the bomb package was mailed at the local office. The hand on the label is the same as that of Bartlett. We have a gun stock with a trigger gone. The trigger found in the lungs of Mr. Krubaech and which was used to discharge the bomb fits the gun."

"When Bartlett obtained the address of Charles Glenn, son-in-law of the late E. H. Harriman, he 'left the journalistic urge.' There is no St. Louis in Oregon county, N. J., and it is young Harriman's opinion that there should be. Hence, the early appearance of the Newburgh Sunday Herald. Cornelius 'Anderbilt, Jr., is deep in the newspaper game."

'Lion of Chile' Makes Business Trip to Gotham

New York, May 29.—Arturo Alessandri, the "Lion of Chile" who, as aviator, piloted that country through its stormiest period in a quarter of a century, arrived in New York aboard the South American Steamship company liner "Teno."

Senor Alessandri's visit will be brief and of a purely business nature, but he has the interest of the entire Latin American circles because his name has always been linked with most important South American developments.

Especially instrumental in bringing the Tacna-Arica dispute to the United States for arbitration, the distinguished Chilean has long been identified with attempts to settle the 43-year dispute between the country and Peru over the sovereignty of the provinces of Tacna and Arica.

Most of the political storms in Chile since the turn of the present century have centered around the able statesman who is regarded as one of the best diplomats which the western hemisphere has produced in recent years.

Recently he was elected to the Chilean senate practically against his own wishes and it is reported, he may be a candidate for president again.

The statesman was born in 1888. He clinched a brilliant career by being elected president of the republic in 1920, bringing about the end of a century's autocratic rule by aristocratic chief executives. His battles against the sente—he demanded a stronger executive and weaker parliament—resulted in a breakdown of the political system by the military upheaval of 1924.

After a short exile at the American embassy in Santiago where he had taken refuge, Alessandri went to Europe, but a second military conflict resulted in the defeat of the men who had driven him out of office and he was recalled.

He resigned his office last year and was succeeded by the present chief executive, Senor Fifield Larraín.

What effect his presence in the United States will have on the taciturn negotiations has been a fertile subject for speculation. Recently he has insisted that the plebiscite ordered by President Coolidge in his arbitration award in the case should be carried out.

Graves in Europe And America Decorated Today

Washington, May 29.—(AP)—A memorial day message was received by President Coolidge today from King Albert, of Belgium, assuring him of the gratitude of the Belgian people to American soldiers, sailors and marines who have so generously laid down their lives in the cause of liberty."

President Coolidge cabled in reply that Americans "look back with pride" to association with the Belgians during the world war "in a worthy cause."

The king's message read:

"On the occasion of decoration day I wish to renew your excellency and to the American people the assurance of the deep gratitude which my country and myself shall never cease to feel towards the valiant soldiers, sailors and marines of the United States who have so generously laid down their lives in the cause of liberty."

"Animated by grateful appreciation of your noble nation, I convey to you the expression of the admiration of the Belgian people for your country and the assurance of my unalterable friendship."

In reply President Coolidge cabled:

"Personally and on behalf of the government and people of the United States, I thank your majesty warmly for your decoration day message and for your assurance of friendship which I cordially reciprocate. The people of the United States, well remembering the patriotic devotion of the Belgians in time of need, look back with pride to association with them in a worthy cause."

We appreciate to the full your majesty's continued remembrance of the day we dedicate to our honored dead, and your expression of gratitude for the service the United States was glad to render to a people so noble and valiant, for whose happiness and prosperity for your best diplomats which the western hemisphere has produced in recent years."

Recently he was elected to the Chilean senate practically against his own wishes and it is reported, he may be a candidate for president again.

The statesman was born in 1888. He clinched a brilliant career by being elected president of the republic in 1920, bringing about the end of a century's autocratic rule by aristocratic chief executives. His battles against the sente—he demanded a stronger executive and weaker parliament—resulted in a breakdown of the political system by the military upheaval of 1924.

After a short exile at the American embassy in Santiago where he had taken refuge, Alessandri went to Europe, but a second military conflict resulted in the defeat of the men who had driven him out of office and he was recalled.

He resigned his office last year and was succeeded by the present chief executive, Senor Fifield Larraín.

What effect his presence in the United States will have on the taciturn negotiations has been a fertile subject for speculation. Recently he has insisted that the plebiscite ordered by President Coolidge in his arbitration award in the case should be carried out.

Directors of the Louisiana section of the road had already elected Mrs. Edensborn president and the action taken made her president of the entire system.

Question of States' Rights Looms in Coolidge Attempt To Enforce Prohi Law

Many Legal Men in Washington Regard "Coolidge Order" An Infringement of State Authority.

BY MARK SULLIVAN.

Washington, May 29.—(AP)—It would be true to say that everybody in Washington regards the "Coolidge order" as a "tempest in a teapot."

What then is the reason for the uproar?

That reason lies in two broad subjects not related to the front line of Washington and now raised on trial before the country.

One is the standing of prohibition and whether it will be able to hold on.

The other is the standing, the prestige of President Coolidge and whether he will be able to hold on.

Opening Assauts.

The essential fact about this controversy is that the opening assault of 1928 are at this moment being made at Washington along two lines. The first line is whether prohibition will be accepted the role of champion of the drys.

If this should happen, to that extent it would clarify the 1928 presidential election.

That, however, remains to be seen.

For the present, the situation is merely one in which the interests of the group opposing prohibition happen to coincide with the interests of the group opposing Coolidge

Tone of Stock Market Was Firmer Last Week Under Rail Leadership

Volume of Trading Was Heavier Than for Some Time and Sentiment Was More Cheerful.

By C. H. PLATT.

New York, N. Y., May 20.—(Special.)—The market was decidedly better during the past week than it has been since the break in early March. Cheerfulness was really pronounced, and under the leadership of the oils and rails, the public came in to some extent, although most operations were still in the hands of the brokers. The brokers' loans were lower than at any time since the reports were started. The bond market was very active and strong. Bond prices were going higher with consequent declines in the yields and it has turned a great deal of attention to preferred stocks which were bought in large volume than in the preceding week. At most every day showed an increase in the buying of preferred shares. One of the greatest forms of activity in the business was in the calling of loans now out on a high rate and the placing by the companies of new issues at a much lower rate. It is a fine market for the corporations who can in this way lighten their funded load, or increase it at about the same rate of payment of dividends. Shrewd directors are giving very serious consideration to this phase of bond conditions. Foreign bonds did not show any vim and a number of them sold down. The local traction bonds, like the stocks, were well bought.

The railroads were equal leaders with the oils and naturally attract more attention because higher prices for them give a feeling of substantiality to the market. The rails have been the backbone of the security market for so long that when they become active, they bring money into trading centers that will wait year after year for something to happen in the violent upturns of the securities. Foreign bonds did not show any vim and a number of them sold down. The local traction bonds, like the stocks, were well bought.

The volume of trading was much heavier than for some time, and the boardrooms of the "street" took on a more lively appearance after several weeks of emptiness except for customers' men and old reliable hangers-on. Traders who were badly stung in March and April edged in slowly and cautiously, seeking a little encouragement at increased rates for the northwestern roads, but many believe that the increase will ultimately come into effect. There are probabilities that some action on the reduction of interest rates on government debts will be taken soon. Traffic is heavy and the crop outlook is good. Railroads did not exactly rally, but they gave some movement of themselves and the moving in them was of respectable proportions.

Sugar Better.

The sugars had a better tone but down with the plentiful supply of money open to them on fairly easy terms, and the gambling spirit rampant. Many people have the impression that it is only the outside traders who are gambling, but it is not. The coppers were up some on prospects for heavy production of the supplies used by them. Shipping stocks continued to show weakness. Public utility stocks marked time and the store issues ran into heavy selling pressure.

Steel stocks were more inactive than for some time, also they had their moment of strength. The southern steels were in most favor. Bookings for the industry as a whole showed an increase with accumulation of steel bars and a steady accumulation of pipe and rail orders. Pig iron inquiries were larger and the outlook for increased orders without any lowering of present prices seems bright. The stocks that did develop for short periods were mostly fractional. Even the speculative stocks of small steel companies picked up in trading volume, although price movements were minor.

First-quarter earnings' reports of the steel companies were excellent and the stocks have not by any means reflected the improvement over the first quarter of 1925.

Weather conditions were rather favorable for cotton, except in parts of the eastern belt, and in the face of reports which should naturally bring a softening in cotton prices there was being taken in. It is natural that amateur operators on the short side would be more timid and quicker to run than the hard-boiled professional who always contends that stocks are selling too high, no matter at what levels they stand.

Signs of Pools.

It was particularly noticeable that trading was resumed in shares that have been practically dormant for a long time. This is the best sign of pools, and generally follows accumulation that has been going on under cover of activity in other more innocent issues. Good business conditions were emphasized in the press for several weeks, but the facts presented only seemed to sink in during the last ten days. Now everyone is telling everyone else how the country has not gone completely to rack and ruin.

One of the best-known editors in the country has stated that the United States is in for the biggest boom since the fall of 1929. Most selling from southern sources, however, there was a decline in building operations for April for the first time in many months. It is probable that the publicity given business conditions has been the cause of optimistic buying of the rails, inasmuch as the fall brings peak traffic for them. While the weather did not come to a full stop, it was still more pleasant and, invariable, has a certain amount of effect in stock market and other circles, all arguments to the contrary notwithstanding.

The outlook for the oils brightened every day and these stocks have begun to respond to heavy earnings, higher prices for gasoline and other oil products. The large volume of trading was in this class of stock and the only reason they do not move brilliantly is because of the fact that they are so well distributed that sentiment in regard to them is widely varied. Many traders have held the oil since the only move they had during the past year and would jump at the first opportunity. Probably they would get out even to their sorrow, for the next time oils start up, the shrewdest traders anticipate they will go through the roof. Mergers among the oils are more in prospect now than before, although a number of the logical consolidations have been side-tracked by combinations already formed. New line-ups are being made tentatively and far-sighted buyers are going into the oils heavily.

Motors Stronger.

The motors came to life a little bit, and as some support appeared behind them, they brought cheer to the patient holders who had almost lost hope. In times when the market is dominated by a group of operators, it is hard to get an enthusiasm aroused about shares that are apathetic and inclined to slide off so slowly as to make them unattractive even to the shorts. That is the position in which the motors have stood for some time, but they do pay large dividends returns and certainly there is no complaint to make about their earnings record for this year, with bond sentiment a belief that just a little upward swing in them would probably bring buying in sufficient amount to send them skyrocketing.

A few rumors have commenced to percolate around that some combinations are in prospect among these organizations. The truck and bus stocks have not picked up in proportion to the oil and automobile stocks, but they have their short periods of strength and do not lose their gains as rapidly as advances are made.

One of the measures which is credited with having prevented difficulty in the final settlement of May wheat contracts was the enforcement of deposits of heavy cash margins at the clearing house arrangements of the market. Appended to the regulations was the fact that regular last-day swings in prices were avoided in the wheat pit. A temporary difference of 6 7/8c in the value of old-style May contracts was the sharpest fluctuation witnessed, and this change affected but did not prevail. New-style May contracts, in which the bulk of unsettled dealings were outstanding, were kept within a price range today of 4 1/2c, whereas a variance of 3 1/2c had been deemed not impractical.

There was a fractional tightening of call money rates due to the end of the month financing to be met, as well as because of approaching holidays, but it was in plentiful supply at 4 per cent and that is cheap. The war is not a reason for it to be at 4 per cent, and a general soft under tone was evidenced by offerings of outside money with considerable concessions.

People of the United States are now consuming 16 per cent less flour than before the war.

Edgren Reads Barometer on Strib-Berlenbach Fight

Eighteen Swimmers Will Tackle Channel Swim During Summer

London, May 29.—(By the Associated Press)—Conquest of the treacherous English channel, a 20-mile struggle against tremendous odds accomplished only by five men in more than half a century, will be attempted this year by a record-breaking entry from Europe and the Americas.

Eighteen swimmers, 11 of whom are women, are in training for the test, several having already established headquarters at Cape Gris-Nez, France.

International rivalry developing from representation in the competitive field: six countries will be exceeded only by interest in the attempts of the fair athletes, an outgrowth of the world-wide attention attracted to the efforts of Gertude Ederle, last year. Miss Ederle has simplified her intention of making a second attempt this season.

Two other American girls will join Miss Ederle in the test. Helen Wainwright, holder of many amateur swimming championships, began her training for the professional ranks last year. She has been training in Florida for several months. Helen Canon of Baltimore, who attracted attention this winter in the south for her remarkable endurance in the water, also has made plans to make the attempt.

Against this trio will be pitted the foremost women swimmers of England, France, Canada, South America and Egypt. Outstanding among the latter starters are Madame Jane Sion, of France, who reached within about two miles of Dover last year; William Hartman, of Canada, who likewise failed in 1925; Eva Morrison, of Peterborough, N. S., and Suzanne Wurtz, a former French champion. Three English women and one from Egypt complete the list.

Iskak Helmy, the Egyptian giant, who rescued Gertude Ederle and Lilian Harrison from the water on their unsuccessful attempt last year, will be included, and colored, is included in the 1926 entry. Norman Ross of Detroit, former amateur champion and record-holder, and Dick Howell, erstwhile Northwestern university swimming star, will be America's male entrants.

Other contestants, of Canada, who failed two years ago, Jean Demerville, of Geneva, Georges Michel and Georges Poilley, of France, are other prospective starters.

Atlantans Play At Thomasville

Thomasville, Ga., May 29.—Candida, for Thomasville's baseball team, reported to Manager Hack Ebel this week and, blessed with splendid weather, have been getting into fine shape for the opening game of the season next Thursday against an opponent not yet named.

Thomasville, 100, under the direction of Tom Madre, well-known sportsman, who is promoting the team are taking unusual interest in this year's club and a great season is anticipated.

Hack Ebel, the skipper formerly played with Atlanta and later with the Boston Red Sox. In addition to managing the club he will play first base.

His present roster includes quite a number of Atlanta boys.

Ebel's first base: Harry Weatherly, Alton, second base: Tom McElroy, Atlanta shortstop: Buck Wheel, third base: Blackie Blackstock, Jim Moore and Jimmy Park, of Atlanta, and Webb Richards, outfielders: Frank Simpson, Atlanta, catcher: Jim Camp, Joe Hammock, Pea Greene, Atlanta, and Bill Munday, Atlanta, pitchers.

N. C. ATHLETE SETS RECORD IN MILE RUN

Chapel Hill, N. C., May 29.—Galen Elliott, University of North Carolina sophomore, who not only set a new southern conference record of 4 minutes 21.2 seconds for the one-mile run in the finals of the conference championships held here on May 15, but also set a new national record by running in the best time made by any college star in the mile thus far this season, according to information received here today.

Records compiled by Major John L. Griffith, athletic commissioner of the western conference and chairman of the N. C. A. A. rules committee, show Elliott's time to be faster by more than two seconds than any other during the year. Kennedy, of Ohio State, ran 4 min. in the long run indoor meet in 4 minutes 23.4 seconds; while Schwedob, of California, ran one in 4 minutes 23.8 seconds in a dual meet with Stanford on an outdoor track.

The record of the North Carolina miler is all the more remarkable when it is considered that he never wore a spike shoe during last year when he made his debut as a member of the Tar Heel freshman team.

Elliott set an even pace throughout his record-breaking race, running the first quarter in 63 seconds, the second one in 66, the third in 67, and the final lap in 65.2 seconds. He crossed the finish line with plenty in reserve and came back after half an hour's rest to take third place in the two-mile race.

Elliott may carry the North Carolina colors further afield this year, for he may enter the N. C. A. A. meet at Chicago in June.

Southern California Wins Cinder Meet at Cambridge

STANFORD 2ND;
YALE, HARVARD

BY ALEX. MILLS.

Harvard Stadium, Cambridge, Mass., May 20.—After one of the most brilliant meets in the history of intercollegiate athletics, the University of Southern California Saturday became the 1926 track and field champion, easily eclipsing the rest of the L. C. 4-A field by collecting 35 1/2 points.

Leland Stanford's stars made it a double victory for California, since their 25 1/2 points gave them second place. Yale, with 25 1/3, and Harvard, with 20, followed in that order.

A crowd of 12,000 looked on at the efforts of contestants from 20 colleges and universities and the spectators peered at one sensational performance after another.

The sun did its bit to make the day productive. The Californians saw and felt the sun and the athletic gentlemen from the far western state behaved as if the climate agreed with them.

In addition to the new records in the dashes and shot, made Friday by "Bud" Houser, of Southern California, four new track and field records were made and one tied Saturday.

Russell Sets Mark.

Henry Russell, of Cornell, negotiated the 220-yard dash in 21 seconds flat, fifth of a second over the former collegiate record of 21 and 1 1/5 seconds made by Webers, of Georgetown, in 1906. Russell also tied the 100-yard dash in 9.7 seconds. In the low hurdles, Grumbles of Southern California, bettered the former record of 20 1/2 seconds by 1 1/5 seconds.

John King, of Stanford, with his high jump of 6 feet, 5 3/4 inches, bettered the former record in that event by 6 1/2 inches.

The complete point score follows:

U. S. C., 35 1/2; Stanford, 25 1/2; Yale, 25 1/3; Harvard, 20; Syracuse, 17; California, 16; Penn State, 15; Cornell, 12; Georgetown, 10 1/3; Pennsylvania, 10; Princeton, 8; Columbia, 6 1/3; Boston College, 6; Colgate, 6; Swarthmore, 3; M. T., 3; Dartmouth, 1; and Holy Cross, 1.

The greatest surprise in this standing came from Syracuse. Advance guesses had given the New York school only a few points, but Syracuse collected first and third place in the 440, first place in the hammer throw, and second place in the two-mile run.

Yale Springs Surprise.

Yale's showing was far better than expected. The New Haven university topped only one first place—through Carr in the pole vault—but the Eli gathered enough lesser points to put it in the foreground.

Harvard, considered as a probable contender, proved a disappointment, winning first in only the half mile, smile and double runs. "Sooley" Watters, "Red" Haggerty and Willard Tibbets, of these, featured events, cleverly staying behind until the last laps, and then winning with

50,000 Crowd Pools On Opening Saturday

BY HERMAN D. HANCOCK.

Atlanta swimming records were shattered Saturday and fell splashingly before the onslaught of youthful Atlanta as approximately 50,000 assailed the five municipal bathing pools of the city on the opening day. This is the largest number of persons ever visiting the pools in one day, according to park officials. And more than that, they all enjoyed their swim, golf, tennis and other sports without cost. This was in line with a prearranged plan of L. L. Walls, superintendent of parks, and Councilman John White, chairman of the parks committee of city council.

Although all Atlanta's swimming while tennis courses are at many of the smaller parks also.

City employees attended the parks' opening by virtue of an order by Mayor Pro Tem, Claude E. Buchanan, who Friday issued instructions that bathhouse at Piedmont park was the favorite rendezvous of aquatic sportsmen. This was thrown open at noon instead of 1 o'clock. He acted for Mayor Sims in signing the paper.

Playgrounds to Open.

Coincident with the opening of the swimming pools, Mr. Walls stated that playgrounds will open for the benefit of Atlantans this year.

Eight of the meet's event winners were in the meet Saturday and six were able to retain their titles. These were Grumbles in the low hurdles; Dye, of Southern California, in the high hurdles; Russel in the 220-yard dash; Houser in the 100-yard dash; the two-mile run; Haggerty in the mile; and Norton, of Yale, did not even qualify in the broad jump which he won in 1925, and Gates, of Princeton, was nosed out of the hammer throw.

The victory of Southern California came largely through their stars, but the Ga. team did not gather points in eight events, which is sufficient for anyone that Mayor Walter A. Sims was principal speaker.

A Colorful Throng.

A colorful throng greeted members of the parks committee of council, the mayor and L. N. Ragdale, Fulton county commissioners, who represented the county at the celebration, as the program was begun. Councilman John White, chairman of the parks committee of city council.

Bulldogs End Season With 16-2 Victory Over Kentucky

Richardson Smashes Pair of Home Runs In Last Appearance

Lexington, Ky., May 29.—(AP)—Captain Nolen Richardson closed his college athletic career by pounding out two home runs against the University of Kentucky baseball team here today, the Georgians winning, 16 to 2.

The Georgia captain scored his first circuit drive on the initial trip to the plate. His second came on the occasion of his last time at bat in an University of Georgia uniform, when he sent one of Bach's benders to deep center in the ninth inning.

The Georgia batters again went on rampage, polling out 12 safeties, including the two home runs, the triples and two doubles. Johnson and Tully were big men with the stick. Middlebrooks hit a triple and a single; Arenowich secured two singles while every man in the lineup with the exception of Safford and Moore got a hit.

Georgia scored seven runs in the first inning, when 12 batters faced Riffe, who was chased with one man down and Bach went on the mound.

Tully pitched a tight ball all the way despite the fact that nine safeties were garnered off his delivery.

Captain Richardson, Middlebrooks closed their athletic careers at Georgia today. The team left immediately after the game for Athens. The week's swing through the middle west has resulted in four victories and two defeats, the Bulldogs playing two series with Notre Dame, Ohio State university and Kentucky.

AJAX NOW KNOWN AS NASH LIGHT SIX

Heavy Demand for Car Brings Absorption of Ajax Motors by Nash Motors Company.

The Nash-built Ajax hereafter will be known as the Nash Light Six; the Ajax Motors company, a subsidiary of Nash Motors, having been entirely absorbed by the parent company. The absorption marks the first anniversary of the Ajax, with a production of 25,000 cars. Many problems facing the various Nash plants being identical, the consolidation of manufacturing operations affords increased production facilities for the Nash Light Six, while this interlacing of manufacturing interests made it advisable for the parent company to absorb its subsidiary.

Announcement of the change in name from Ajax Six to Nash Light Six also marks the greatest five-month period of business in the Nash history. The company's sales during January, February, March, April and May drove the total sales and production to a figure approximately 70 percent of the total sales for the whole of last year.

"In all of my 25 years of manufacturing I have never felt greater satisfaction in any product," said the Ajax Six, now known as the Nash Light Six," said C. W. Nash, president of the Nash Motors company.

"So far as I know there has never been produced a car which from the very outset gave a greater measure of satisfaction. The public was quick to recognize the qualities embodied in the Ajax and the demand has made advisable the closer manufacturing relations of our Racine, Kenosha and Milwaukee plants.

The Ajax was introduced on May 27 last year, but no immediate production was made to attain sizable production. This was in strict accordance with the manufacturing program we had adopted. Only a few cars were produced each day during the balance of May, throughout June and about the middle of July, when production was permitted to expand in larger volume. All of the early cars were shipped to points within a radius of 50 or 100 miles of the factory so that we could keep an eye on their performance. If adjustments were necessary we wanted the cars to come home, where our own men could make them.

"While we had spent a great many months in engineering, developing and testing the Ajax and were reasonably sure of the car at the time of its introduction, we were, nevertheless, surprised to find that they had not yet been produced even on these first cars to be produced. I am frank to say that in all my years of manufacturing, I had never seen such satisfactory performances in a new car."

The Nash Light Six plant at Racine, Wis., was equipped with the latest machinery and facilities to the automobile industry. Because of the demand for the product, additional machinery was installed early this year and production facilities increased 100 per cent.

Manufacturing facilities for the Nash Light Six are again increased because of this consolidation.

Nash models are now available in three series—the Light Six, Special Six and Advanced-Six.

DRUSE TRIBESMEN TO CONTINUE FIGHT AGAINST FRENCH

Berlin, May 29.—The Druse tribesmen, who are fighting for freedom against the French, still continue their struggle until they are victorious, undaunted by the surrender of Abd-El-Krim in the Riff.

This defi was hurled at the French today by Emir Chekib Arslan, the Druse delegate to the League of Nations.

"We are determined to pursue our struggle against French domination," the emir declared. "We will not conclude peace until our entire program is realized."

Crankshaft Forging at Buick Plant

The powerful blows of steam hammers serve a two-fold purpose. They make the steel tough and close grained as they shape the part from bar stock.

In the illustration a Buick crankshaft is being forged by a giant hammer. Great skill and accuracy are required of the crews which operate these hammers. They turn out parts so perfect that only grinding and similar finishing operations are necessary to prepare them for use in the finished car.

Among the many important parts which are drop-forged in this plant are the Buick one-piece I beam front axle, the camshaft and the crankshaft. The crankshaft is unusually heavy with four main bearings.

It goes from the drop forge plant to the engine plant, where it is ground accurately to limits of one-thousandths of an inch and the bearing.

The front axle passes through a series of finishing operations and tests during which it is perfectly aligned. There are no brazed or riveted parts.

The front axle was introduced on May 27 last year, but no immediate production was made to attain sizable production.

This was in strict accordance with the manufacturing program we had adopted. Only a few cars were produced each day during the balance of May, throughout June and about the middle of July, when production was permitted to expand in larger volume. CAPONE REPORTED READY TO GIVE UP

Chicago, May 29.—(AP)—While federal agents made a search of their own today for "Scarface Al" Capone, sought by Chicago officials in connection with the murder by gangsters of William H. McSwiggin, assistant state's attorney, reports emanated from the state's attorney's office that Capone had made overtures to that official and would surrender Tuesday in Brooklyn.

Capone, alleged vice and liquor lord of Cicero, a Chicago suburb, was known to be an enemy of James Duff, and it was Duff, slain with McSwiggin. His mother is said to live in Brooklyn. During a month's search for him, officials have hunted him in New York, throughout Chicago, and in the north Michigan woods where he had a summer home.

Charges Not Revealed.

Federal officers have not revealed upon what charges they seek the man. Klondyke and Myles O'Donnell, two gangsters who yesterday admitted to the grand jury that they had with McSwiggin shortly before he was slain, told all they knew about McSwiggin's slaying, it was said by the state's attorney, but they pleaded their own safety as a reason for not being more specific.

Myles was then taken to the federal building and there posted $10,000 in bonds on a suppressed indictment.

FASTEST CARS USED TO GET NEWS, PICTURES

WITH COOPER CORP'N. BRANCH HERE

Get that story! As Mr. A. Citizen picks up the daily newspaper and settles back in his easy chair to read the current history of the world, little does he dream of the story behind the story which engages his attention.

Like the famous police who have a reputation for always getting their man, newspaper men have a reputation for always getting their story, whether it be in words or in pictures.

The word story can be flashed over the telegraph wires with the speed of light, but pictures are not so easily transported. They must literally be carried from the scene where they are taken to the engraving room of the newspaper in which they appear.

The fastest available means of transportation is, of course, engaged for this purpose in order that readers may have the news while it still is news.

The automobile has proved indispensable in such cases and many are the records which have been made by newspaper men rushing to deliver pictures after the forms closed.

One very interesting run of this kind was made just the other night, when C. J. Burnell, staff photographer of The Tennessean, raced from Louisville to Nashville in a Chrysler "60" carrying pictures of the derby race to be published in his paper the following morning.

A record run of more than 200 miles over roads of all kinds, brought the pictures to The Tennessean's office shortly after 11 o'clock that evening. There they were quickly developed, turned over to the engraving staff, which rushed them through in time for Mr. A. Citizen to see them as his morning Tennessee as he sipped his coffee.

Mr. Burnell, in telling of the race he drove after the derby race had been run—his race against time—declared that, inspite of heavy rains that had turned some of the Kentucky roads into rivers of mud, he did not stop except for a meal.

The Chrysler "60" car which he piloted was one of the new model just announced a few days before by the Chrysler corporation, but it stood the severe test to which it was subjected and proved itself a worthy member of the famous Chrysler group of six-cylinder cars.

This was no surprise to Mr. Burnell, of course, because he had made similar runs in Chrysler cars on previous occasions. Last autumn, for example, he drove from Birmingham, Ala., to Nashville, a distance of 220 miles, in five hours and 21 minutes, to get pictures of the Vanderbilt-Auburn football game to his paper in time for the edition of the following morning.

PUBLIC MEETINGS BARRED IN WARSAW

Warsaw, May 29.—(P)—All public meetings have been prohibited until after the meeting of the national assembly Monday, when a president will be chosen to succeed former President Wojciechowski. The government has also issued a decree prohibiting the sale of liquor until the national assembly concludes its labor. A threat by the socialists to call a general strike was met by a counter by the government's announcement that the assembly would be convened at some other place than Warsaw if the strike was proclaimed.

PRINCE OF WALES GIVES $50 TO AID BRITISH MINERS

London, May 29.—The Prince of Wales, who owns coal fields in Somerford, presented $50 to the miners' distress fund.

The contribution was accompanied by a frank letter on behalf of the prince, which said:

"Necessarily, I cannot take sides in any dispute, but we all owe a debt of gratitude to our miners in the past. Everyone must feel sympathy for their wives and children in their hour of distress, and it would not be a satisfactory ending to any dispute that one side should be forced to give in on account of the suffering of their dependents."

His royal highness is confident that the present will of both sides will be a happy issue out of the present difficulty.

CONDITION OF SMOOTH DECLARED IMPROVING

Washington, May 29.—(P)—The condition of Senator Smoot, of Utah, who became ill yesterday while attending a committee meeting, was reported today to be much improved, his physician expects him to be able to resume his senatorial duties after a brief rest.

JACK MACY.

The Cooper corporation, distributors for the well-known Cooper tire and battery, who recently established a retail branch in Atlanta, are fast surrounding themselves with men of high caliber and ability, outstanding among which was the announcement by officials of the company of the appointment of Jack Macy as sales representative for the Atlanta branch.

Mr. Macy has been identified with the tire and accessory business in Atlanta for the past 12 years and has gained quite a reputation in local sales circles and is well qualified for this appointment.

REMUS APPEALS TO HIGH COURT

Washington, May 29.—(P)—George Remus, Cincinnati bootleg king, who recently completed a two-year prohibition law sentence in Atlanta penitentiary, today asked the supreme court whether he can be sent to the Montgomery county, Ohio, jail to serve a year's sentence for maintenance of a nuisance.

Upon his release from Atlanta he was taken to the Montgomery county jail by a United States marshal. He obtained his release on habeas corpus proceedings, the district court holding that the two sentences ran concurrently. The circuit court of appeals reversed that decision.

In asking the supreme court to grant an appeal Remus declared the two judgments were pronounced against him by the same judge in the same court at the same term and that the nuisance charge was directly involved in the prohibition case.

HOUSE WILL CONSIDER FRENCH DEBT TUESDAY

Washington, May 29.—(P)—The French war debt settlement will be taken up by the house Tuesday with leaders prepared to press for a final vote before overnight adjournment, although the agreement is expected to receive enough support in the senate, opposition in the house, it is indicated, will be scattered and its ratification by that body is anticipated without difficulty.

House opposition will come largely from democratic ranks. Representative McKeown, democrat, Oklahoma, today announced he would vote against ratification.

FLORIDA CONDEMNS SHADY PRACTICES IN REAL ESTATE

Orlando, Fla., May 29.—(P)—Any method of selling real estate that leads the buyer to believe he is "getting something for nothing" was condemned in resolutions passed here today by the board of governors of the Florida Association of Real Estate Boards.

The resolutions denounced the award of free lots as a method of selling real estate.

LARGE FIELD READY FOR INDIANAPOLIS RACE

Indianapolis, Ind., May 29.—(Special)—One outstanding feature of the 1926 race classic to be held here Monday is the large number of leading figures of the automobile industry it will attract.

Though each year finds many motor car engineers, designers and other general executives here to witness the testing of new ideas or improvements in design, the present race will attract a larger number of leading figures as a reflection of the wider general interest that speedway racing is gaining throughout the country. The Indianapolis 500-mile classic has captured public interest as a national sporting event ever since its inception.

But for several years prior to 1923, automobile racing appeared steadily to be losing its place on the calendar as a major sports event. Since that time, the building of new tracks and the attraction of enormous crowds here and at the other leading tracks in the City, Chicago, Alabama, Atlantic City, Salem, N. H., and Laurel, Md., indicate the even greater national interest it is now enjoying.

The reason for this renewed interest is the desire to find a recording of drivers and others who have examined the situation closely. It is the new tremendous speeds attained, and the practical certainty that every race will see one or more records shattered because of the dizzy speeds at which the tiny creations now travel.

In this connection, two of the celebrities here for Monday's big race would be perfectly justified in clasping each other by the hand and saying "We did it!" Those two are Harry Miller, of Los Angeles, builder of the Miller race cars, and Bob Stranahan, president of the Champion Spark Plug company.

Miller is the man, who practically alone, is responsible for the development of the present-day race cars. And he frankly confesses that he could not have built his engines had it not been for the improvements in spark plugs developed by the man with whom Mr. Stranahan is president.

"For the present the racing engine it has been imperative, of course, to develop a lubrication system, proper carburetion and ignition to care for the extremes of speed attained, which the car must operate," says Mr. Miller. "We are able to develop lubrication and carburetion ourselves, but there were distinct limitations on ignition, speed and other factors until the Champion company developed its racing spark plug. It is this Champion plug which has made possible these tremendous speeds now attained."

"And that racing plug is exactly the same one as is used by two-thirds of the motorists the world over," added Mr. Stranahan. "Naturally, it is particularly designed to fit the racing engine just as ordinary motor car engines have different designs. But the materials in it are identical with those that enter into every spark plug we make."

GEORGIA PLANNING TO ATTRACT VISITORS

Macon, Ga., May 29.—(Special)—Georgia is planning to attract thousands of winter and summer visitors into the state, it was announced here today, who heretofore, as tourists, have made their seasonal migration elsewhere. A campaign is planned to tell the nation of the delightful climate of north Georgia, where the Appalachian mountains offer an average temperature of 71 degrees, and the winter atmosphere of south Georgia winters where the mercury averages 53 degrees.

Greater Georgia, Inc., state-wide development organization, expects the campaign to be directed not only at other states, but as an educational program for Georgians as well, it was said, pointing to the equable climate of the entire state with an annual mean temperature of 63 degrees.

As a summer climate it is pointed out that numerous mountain cities of north Georgia, which are already prepared to care for visitors, are situated on an elevation of 2,000 to 5,000 feet above sea level, with a mean average temperature of 61.5 degrees.

As a winter climate it is pointed out that the numerous mountain cities of north Georgia, which are already prepared to care for visitors, are situated on an elevation of 2,000 to 5,000 feet above sea level, with a mean average temperature of 61.5 degrees.

The maximum is 85.5 degrees and the minimum is 63.7 degrees, according to statistics of United States Meteorologist C. F. von Herringman, chief of the bureau.

Greater Georgia is reduced to a minimum with numerous mountain streams abounding with trout and other members of the fly tribe which fishermen delight to catch. Mountain trails, motor highways and huge forests of virgin timber, it is believed, will add to the attractiveness for summer visitors.

In the southern and central sections of the state, from the eastern to the western boundaries, the Astors, Gondis, Carnegies, Vanderbilts, Whittneys, Archbishops and others of the nation's wealthies and most influential men and women have already established homes.

Those wealthy people would be able to go to any section of the world, but they have spent their vacation in Georgia along with other leaders in the social, financial and political life of the world. Millions of dollars have been spent in buying real estate and building residences among the stately pines of south Georgia.

One Georgia city especially has long been famous as the mecca for the United States president during the winter months. They have come with hundreds of others to seek relief on Georgia's golf courses from the rigors of northern winters.

Advertising contemplated for the state will point to the normal average temperature of southern Georgia, 66.7 degrees, and of north Georgia, 60.4 degrees. The mean range is 40.5 degrees for the entire state, and the annual average 78.9 degrees for the four seasons extremes in neither direction. Sunstroke in Georgia are unknown.

Summerville, Ga., May 29.—(Special)—The Summerville public schools came to a successful close Tuesday night after spending a week of commencement. The music and singing department presented a recital Friday night. The Rev. Richard J. Broyles, pastor of the South Broad Methodist Church, South of Rome, preached the baccalaureate sermon at the First Presbyterian Church Sunday. The grammar school diplomas were awarded to 28 pupils, being presented by C. L. Hale, chairman of the board of trustees of the Summerville school district.

BOOK REVIEWS IN TABLOID

THE STORY OF FRANCE

The Story of France—From the earliest times of the consulate of Napoleon Bonaparte. By the late United States Senator Thomas E. Watson of Georgia. Volume 1 contains "to the end of the reign of Louis XV." Referring to the preface of the 1926 edition, the writer says, "Predictions at the beginning of the present century that Thomas E. Watson's 'Story of France' and the volume 'Napoleon' would remain standard works have been fully borne out as the demand for succeeding editions proves." It should be mentioned that Senator Watson's Story of France has been pleasantly received on the other side of the Atlantic, as well as on this side.

In the preface the assertion is made that these volumes present a most attractive statement of the developments of a great people—national growth has been described, material changes have been indicated. There is no statement in the whole story that has not been verified.

The story of this wonderful country as written by Mr. Watson, was actuated by the careful observation that in France the weaker classes were in most instances made the victims of the stronger, a condition that always appealed to the writer.

The introduction is that "as long as men continue to find interest in the affairs of the past, the 'Story of France' will command special attention, for in forms of government France has boxed the compass," it has been feudal, monarchial, imperial, and republic and revolution. "And among other things is said: "No land has given birth to men more great, more good, more brave; none have been cursed with men more vile. No people have climbed higher in the arduous pathway of victory; none have been so pitilessly stricken down in defeat."

The second book of these handsome volumes contains the History of France from the earliest times to the Consulate of Napoleon Bonaparte. The table of contents is in itself a historical story—it tells of the death of Louis XV, and the accession of Louis XVI and Marie Antoinette in 1774, first captured in this volume, which is followed by 46 others, the last chapter is a most interesting sketch of Napoleon, the first

No country has ever been so completely before the whole world as France has had made above for her, for four years, this has not been known. No man has lived to himself, whether private or public citizen, in this widely known land of song and story, and while it has been through all the experiences that can befall a country it is still great, it is still on the onward march of a greater process. This country has learned lessons worth learning, has endured experiences that have tried the hearts of its men and women and yet they still have the courage to live and to work for a brighter future. (Dodd Mead and Co., New York.)

Things That Have Interested Me—Vivid Moments of a Vivid Life—Arnold Bennett, author of so many interesting books, among them being "The Woman Who Knew Too Much" has become one of the most noted of writers. It is said of him that "when he writes of insomnia, of a performance of the opera, of the habits of Frenchmen, or of the vicissitudes of friendship, or whether he proounds some philosophical philosophy, this great reporter and novelist is always sparing, always human."

Among the essays which will be read with so much interest are "Shakespeare and the Stage," "The Producer and the Press," "The Great Men and Women," "Twenty Years Hence," "What Are Life's Greatest Satisfaction?" "Is the Novel Decaying?" "Publicity for Journalism," etc.

Mr. Bennett's writings are universally popular. No matter where the author goes there will always be readers for his writings. This latest collection shows that he has not lost any of the charm that has always characterized his sayings. (George H. Doran company.)

BOOKS FOR BOYS.

Red Lynn. By Captain Gilson, is the story of a white trapper who was considered a good scout and as a marksman stood at the head of the list, regardless of the Indians with whom he surrounded him. The boy is illustrated with half tones and a full-colored frontispiece, all by Archibald Webb. There are over 300 pages, all of which will interest any boy who likes Indian stories of the early days. (George Sully & Co., New York.)

Mystery Camp. By M. M. Dancy, with illustrations by P. L. Martin. The following comment will arouse the curiosity of any boy and will easily cause the user to buy the book: "Mystery Camp—buried treasure—pirate ship—all in the rear 1925; One-eyed Moke, as splendid an old ruffian as Captain Kidd; a kidnapping and a rescue! Wow!"

Of course every boy who reads this delightful story will want to join the boys who are having such a good time. It was their intention just to have the usual camping trip, but in some way they just stirred things up. It is a splendid story for boys and one that parents will like for their boys to read. (The Page company, Boston.)

NEW FICTION RECEIVED.

The Hounds of Spring. By Sylvia Thompson, was published in February. It is called "the novel of the spring" and is proving to be a best seller.

ARNOLD BENNETT.

The story is intensely dramatic, for it is woven mainly around one family. The characters are a charming group of people. The heroine is a young girl who lost her fiance during the world war and through the influence of family and friends is persuaded to marry another. (Little, Brown & Co., Boston.)

Flapper Ann. By Corra Harris, who has not gone to California or abroad to find her heroine, but locates her in a small southern city, where by her father's will she is required to live for a year. The reader will be plenty of originality in the story, for it falls from the pen of the author as the April showers on May flowers.

MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS.

Imagination—Mind's Dominant Power. By Benjamin Christopher Loring, in which the writer of the foreword says: "The reader will get perhaps for the first time a sound conception of the mind-quality 'Imagination'—that wonderful faculty by the help of which any man may take the materials at hand, his experiences, his education, health, education and initiative, and project a new program, or objective, for himself which will bring satisfaction and a more useful life." (M. H. Schroeder Co., New York.)

The Paris—That's not in the Guide Books. By Barbara H. who gives a full and vivid picture of the life in Paris led by Americans in society and out. The book is also a super-guide for the tourist who wants to see the Paris not found in guide books. It is dedicated by the author to his wife "who made it possible by letting me out 'o' nights." (Brentano's, New York.)

Principles of Publicity. By Glenn C. Quint and Ralph D. Casey, associate editor of journalism and university editor, University of Oregon. (D. Appleton & Co., New York.)

St. Simeon Hall—A Biography of a Mind. By Loraine Prout, with an introduction by Carl Van Dorn. The author has written a wonderful story in his description of the president of Clark university, who was considered one of the greatest men of his generation, in the field of education as well as in his own chosen science of psychology. (D. Appleton & Co., New York.)

The Fifteenth Anniversary of the Ethical Movement—1878-1926. By Felix Adler, the founder of the movement. Seventeen other ethical leaders are represented with autobiographical sketches, and with articles especially written for this book. (D. Appleton & Co.)

Palmyra Pleasure. By Dean Bryden, who says a knowledge of palmistry is an excellent social asset. The person who can read palms is always the center of a group of eager boys and girls. (George Sully & Co., New York.)

Stars and Their Stories. By Muriel Kinney, with illustrations by Gabriel P. Kinney, with maps by F. Graney. F. M. S. White, the boy for children the grown ups will have to teach the children and it is therefore a most interesting subject for both. (D. Appleton & Co., New York.)

Cynthia Codentry. By Ernest Pasquier, author of several books which were well received by the reading public. In writing his opinion of this story one critic said, "The author must have looked deep into the hearts of many women to have written this intimate study of the modern girl."

The bookman, not only for the year, but for the last month, the year, should be found on every library table: All one has to do to make this a convincing argument is to look over the table of contents and note the list of well-known writers as well as the array of subjects which are up-to-date and most interesting. Besides this there are the announcements of the successions as to successful fiction. (Brentano's, New York.)

The Painted Stallion. By Hal G. Evans, who from boyhood has been associated with the environments of the west. He still lives in Kansas, the state of his birthplace. He is quite a hunter and much of his time, accompanied by his wife, is given to traveling over the great west always armed with his camera. (Little, Brown & Co., Boston.)

Shepherds. By author of "Slippery McGee," and other interesting books of fiction, Marie Conway Omer. This is a delightful story, woven around the life of a shepherd. The father is the beloved pastor of a factory church and is looked upon by his flock as a saintly shepherd. Alice, the grown up daughter, who is always found with a heart full of love and hands full of work, looks after the young brothers and sisters, as well as everything else in this factory parish district for she is loved by them all.

Among the other characters around whom much interest is developed, is that of a high dignitary of the church who finds it quite pleasant to drop in on this family of workers now and then.

The story is told from the view point of a boy of fifteen and written in the first person. One of the most interesting and delightful chapters woven around the rectory, children (the little shepherds), is entitled "The Out-Laws," who are wholesome, likable and normal children with hearts in the right place.

This is a real family story, kind, gentle rector and his children, and their many experiences with many kinds of people. It is a story worth reading the second time by the lovers of family life. (The Century Co., New York.)

The Interpreter. By Gertrude Capen Whitner, of Augusta, Ga., author of many attractive stories, among them being "I Choose," "Yes Speaketh He," "Roses Froth, My Garden and Where the Sun Shines." These are beautiful enough that the writer expects even in the titles of her books. Among the characters in this charming book are Leslie Armitage, Anthony Lancaster, Leslie's sister, Tilly, Judge Mathers, and many others who add interest and zest to a most unusual story.

Elmwood Estates Fatigue at the Wheel.

Another excellent feature of Chandler's new type steering is the absolute freedom from transmitting road shock to the steering wheel when driving at fast speed over rough roads.

"Many cars which steer easily enough on smooth city pavement are very difficult to handle when the roads are bumpy and uneven."

"Road shock transmission to the steering wheel naturally means fatigue to the driver on long cross-country trips."

"Chandler engineers, therefore, have a considerable achievement to their credit in designing and perfecting their new type steering gear."

"We extend an invitation to all local motorists,

EASY TO PARK IS A CHANDLER FEATURE

One of the things that delight new Chandler owners is the ease with which the 1926 Chandler may be steered," declared C. S. Thompson, of the Marmon Atlanta company, local Chandler dealer.

"It was not many years ago that a small woman had some difficulty in handling a car of Chandler's size and power," continued Mr. Thompson.

"Thanks to Chandler's new type of steering gear, however, lady drivers now find the 1926 Chandler one of the easiest of all cars to steer and handle in traffic."

"The advent of balloon tires made problems with all steering gears," said Mr. Thompson.

"Several years ago, Chandler engineers studied this problem intensively. They designed many varying kinds of steering gears in experimental work."

"Their greatest achievement came when they perfected the present Chandler new-type steering gear, which has become standard equipment on all 1926 Chandlers."

"With this steering gear, the slight touch on the wheel turns the car instantly. No longer in parking close to curbs in crowded city streets something to be afraid of."

"Road shock transmission to the steering wheel naturally means fatigue to the driver on long cross-country trips."

SYLVAN HILLS
'ANOTHER HOPKINS BUNGALOW," 1525 Melrose drive, complete, open for inspection Sunday, so look at it and examine it thoroughly and ask yourself the question: "Which is best for me, to buy this beautiful bungalow for $6,750.00 or go elsewhere in a community that's no better and buy a bungalow that is NO BETTER and pay Twelve Thousand Dollars for it. Yes, I MEAN TWELVE THOUSAND DOLLARS, all I ask YOU to do is to Go look at our Bungalow in SYLVAN HILLS and then go look at the other fellow's and compare PRICES. My bungalow sells for $6,750.00. The reason is A REASON. OTHERS have found the reason and "IT'S UP TO YOU," it will cost you nothing. You may save FIVE THOUSAND DOLLARS. AND I DON'T MEAN MAYBE." Will take your vacant lot as part pay. My plan—you have your deed in four to five years, suit yourself about the balance and your payments will be like Rent, TOO. ASK ANY BODY IN SYLVAN HILLS ABOUT MY BUNGALOWS. P. B. HOPKINS & SON, 310 Palmetto Bldg., WA. 4270.

Why Buy a Vacant Lot?

A Turner-Built House

Why buy a vacant lot when the same payments with your rent money will buy a home like this, planned by you and built to suit your individual ideas and needs?

Why rent an apartment when the same money you pay as rent will own a home like this or any one of several others that we offer for your inspection. Remember, we supply the lot, plan, build and finance the home.

You say that you want to own a home but don't seem able to save all the cash payment. If that's your fix talk to us. We have some helpful suggestions.

THE PROOF

Long-headed and experienced insurance officials who lend millions on homes know the value of masonry walls, therefore they make larger and longer term loans on Turner Built Homes.

The above house is to be built in the Turner Properties on University Drive for a purchaser and constructed according to Turner specifications, which are: Hollow tile walls faced with cement stucco or selected pressed brick, roofed with tile and asphalt. Only long leaf pine, cypress and hardwood used in construction of these homes.

We have a mile of lots to select from on University Drive, connecting Morningside to Druid Hills. Convenient to fine schools and churches. Lots of beautiful shade trees and every convenience including gas. Served by both the Emory University and Highland car lines.

Don't hesitate to call us. We will be glad to explain our easy financing plan to you.

Keely's Is Ready for the June Bride

Featuring a Sale of Wanted Silks

The Bride's Shoes

It is little less than inspirational to see the many, many happy faces each day that visit Keely's shoe department. For a long while Keely's shoes have been preferred by women of taste, not only in Atlanta but throughout the state.

We are featuring "The Marian Tally," illustrated above, the latest arrival in exclusive models, for the June bride. It is a dainty pump with shaped Spanish heel, and is shown in imported orchid kid at $17.50. Also in white kid combined with black-and-white snake at $13.50. Also in patent leather with parchment snake underlay at $12.50.

The sizes are 2½ to 7, and the widths AAA to B.

"Here comes the bride!" All eyes instinctively turn to witness a veritable vision of loveliness! For the benefit of the June bride, and because of insistent demand of all lovers of beautiful silks, we have continued our silk sale another week, with replenished stocks that bring our silk section up to par. Those who are acquainted with the Keely standard of known-quality silks can appreciate more than we can tell them what great savings this sale affords.

Crepes de Chine—Flat Crepes

The only reason that such a low price for such quality silks is possible is the fact that we were able to secure them at very attractive discounts, and we are simply passing these savings on to you. In no sense are they silks bought for sale purposes, but every yard is of the same grade and quality that we unhesitatingly buy in the regular way for our regular stock, and that we sell regularly at $2.75 and $3 a yard. Sale price $1.98.

Values $2.75 and $3

The color range includes many wanted shades for the bride's trousseau, evening gowns, sport frocks, lingerie, and every dress purpose. In all there are 29 colors in pastel shades, including plenty of black and white. Choice, per yard

$1 98

Monday Only

We will have on sale one lot of 36-inch WASH SATIN in pink and white, for slips and underwear, that sells regularly up to $3.50 a yard. Every piece is 40 inches wide. Sale price

Photoplay News

CONDUCTED by LORENZO JONES JR.

De Mille's Greatest,
The Volga Boatman,
Metropolitan Film

Wm. Boyd, New Male Star,
Heads Big
Cast.

Russia, in all its glory—Russia in all its filth and misery—Russia, with its high caste and low, with its aristocrat and peasant—Russia, land of romance, Tartar, Slav, Russia—and the Volga boatman.

The interpretation of the famous song has been long in reaching the screen. So long, in fact, that it will now be appreciated to an extent far greater than had it been filmed a year or two ago. But now, in its dramatic sweep, its theme, its pathos—all have been brought out in the screen version. "The Volga Boatman" plays this week at the Metropolitan theater.

The story is laid in Russia at the time of the civil strife between the Red army and the White army of the aristocrats. The dramatic interest centers in the contact between Elinor Fair, a lovely aristocrat, and William Boyd, a sweat-stained, toil-laden phantom of the Volga. Theodore Kosloff plays a striking double role. Victor Varconi, an impudent prince, and Julia Faye, an exotic Tartar character. Robert Edison is given one of his interesting character roles, as the last of a great line of Russian land owners.

The story starts on the Volga before the civil strife, and then swings into it, stride by stride, when the overturning of the czar makes the whole nation a seething cauldron of upheaval. Servant becomes master and master—servant. The high light of the picture, is a great ball of the aristocrats interrupted by the shells of the Reds. You can see the aristocrats in their silk and satin forced into the bare walls formerly worn by the Volga boatmen.

The story points no moral and takes no sides. It is intended simply as a love story of a man and a woman playing against each other. Interesting tales of recent history.

William Boyd, who rose to immediate popularity in "The Road to Yesterday," plays the title role. In him is seen the crudity of the Russian peasant, the spirit of resentment against the established order of things. Boyd, in a little more than an hour, through his large kingdom, he is a dreamer, envisioning both Russia and its peasants as free, on a par with the aristocrats. In short, he is a thinker, one who can use his head as well as his muscles.

After introducing as his three leading characters, whom he later plunges into

Left to right: Top, scene from "The Lucky Lady" at the Rialto with Greta Nissen and William Collier. Next, scene with William Boyd in "The Volga Boatman." Next, scene from "Monte Carlo" film at Loew's Grand. Top, right, Norma Shearer at the West End theater Monday in "His Secretary." Lower left, scene from "Wet Paint" at the Howard theater, starring Raymond Griffith. Next, scene with Baby Peggy in "Helen's Babies" at the Alamo No. 2. Next, scene from "Mike" at the Cameo theater. the maelstrom of revolution, De Mille brings them together and establishes their varying attitudes toward each other and Russia. In many ways, typically, De Mille has courses their lives through situation after situation—depending not so much upon lavishness and spectacle as upon drama and humanizing his characters. And never, through all the strife and clamor that go hand in hand with a picture of this type, is the thread of the story lost, for a moment, from an overture written by Laurence

In keeping with the feature photo play, De Mille has selected the famous "1812" overture. A dramatic prologue features Volpi's mixed chorus, singing "Freedom's Awakening."

The score for the picture is built principally from the old and modern Russian literature, interspersed with other classical and popular music. For one of the dramatic scenes an excerpt from an overture written by Laurence

'The Lucky Lady' at The Rialto Theater

Portrayed by a cast rarely equaled, "The Lucky Lady" is the feature picture for showing this week at the Rialto theater. Greta Nissen is starred, supported by Lionel Barrymore and Marc McDermott.

Minor numbers on the Rialto entertainment list include the Mack Sennett comedy, "Isn't Love Cuckoo?" Pathé News, which changes to a new release on Thursday, and a musical program with William Whitney Hubbell and the Rialto band.

One moment a beautiful princess with every man in the province eager for her; and, the next an awkward, unlovely girl, a disgrace to the kingdom.

Such is the part played by Greta Nissen, beautiful Norse actress.

"The Lucky Lady," which Raoul Walsh directed, is a picture of thrill that will never be equaled. An exhibition of steel nerves and daring that will hold you spellbound. See the greatest airplane battle ever screened, drama you'll never forget, a love story that will live forever.

It is found, however, that the princess has temporarily run away from the convent to watch a band of traveling actors at a nearby hotel. At the inn she is seated with William Collier, Jr., an American. Her attention is divided between interest in the changing costumes of a girl on the stage and a flirtation she is attempting with Collier.

The convent vespers bell reminds Miss Nissen of her need for sudden departure and she starts back. Outside she sees the convent Abbé approaching. To avoid him she jumps into the tonneau of a nearby automobile.

Before she has an opportunity to climb out, Collier enters the car and starts in search of her—to demand an explanation as to her sudden departure. In his search he drives near the convent. Miss Nissen then makes him aware of her presence and when he halts the automobile she jumps out to enter the building.

Inside the convent a party of officials are waiting to escort her back. On the return trip, the automobile in which they are riding breaks down and Collier, who is following, offers to drive them to their destination.

At the palace Miss Nissen is told of the need for her immediate marriage. She is also informed that Lionel Barrymore, hero of a thousand love affairs, has been selected as her husband. The idea is revolting and, remembering the various costumes of the little actress at the inn, she determines to make herself as unlovely as possible.

To add to the game, she dresses herself as a coquette and attracts Barrymore's attention. In this manner she persuades him to fall out of

ANOTHER COMEDY BILL

"Wet Paint" Features Raymond Griffith and Helene Costello.

The scenario of "Wet Paint" Raymond Griffith's latest starring picture for Paramount, which comes to the greater Howard Theater tomorrow, makes the star do a series of the most ludicrously amusing things that have ever been seen on the screen.

First, he reverses the usual procedure and "drives" a streetcar down. Then he tells her to get in, through he is going to marry the first girl he meets. So, what more natural than to meet a bevy of the fairest beauties in the land.

The lad arrives at a home he thinks is his—but upon entering, discovers it to belong to an attractive married woman. After a lot of "ridiculous" advances of each other, they finally land in bed.

But the picture doesn't end until an exciting ride has been taken in a car without a chauffeur. Talk of your "ships without a helm"—Ray's experience completely overshadows it. What happens in the end? Well, if you can keep a secret, and must know it, it's a original girl.

Helene Costello in "She" and Bryant Washburn her brother, Arthur Rossen directed the picture.

Following a two weeks' excursion into the realm of grand opera and musical classics, the Howard this week will present another sparkling revue by John Murray Anderson, the original producer of "Gershwin's Famous Folies." This Public presentation is called "Rhapsody in Jazz" and is described as a syncopated Manhattan cocktail, based upon George Gershwin's recent symphonic composition, "Rhapsody in Blue." Among the novelties in this revue are a dog-dance by Jim Brady's Chippendales and an astonishing Charleston dance by Robert Stickney, billed as "the tallest waiter in the world," who works on stilts. Other excellent numbers are furnished by Ruth Stuart and Grace Stuart, D'Andrea and Walters and George Malacy, harmonica virtuoso.

The program for the week by the Howard Symphony orchestra, under the direction of Joseph Littau, will be "Rhapsody in Blue" by Gershwin. This will be the first time this selection has ever been performed as an overture in any motion picture theater.

Malvin P. Ogden will feature "Just a Little Dance" and "The Naughty Wurwill. Other features on the program will include an International News reel and comedy.

Love, with herself the princess, and in love with the coquette.

Howard succeeds in breaking off a wedding engagement, she abandons and stages a runaway marriage to make up one of the most fascinating productions of its kind ever filmed. The story was written for the screen by Robert E. Sherwood and Bertram Bloch. James T. O'Donoghue prepared the continuity.

De Mille's Greatest,
The Volga Boatman,
Metropolitan Film

Wm. Boyd, New Male Star,
Heads Big
Cast.

Russia, in all its glory—Russia in all its filth and misery—Russia, with its high caste and low, with its aristocrat and peasant—Russia, land of romance, Tartar, Slav, Russia—and the Volga boatman.

The interpretation of the famous song has been long in reaching the screen. So long, in fact, that it will now be appreciated to an extent far greater than had it been filmed a number of years ago. Breadth of its dramatic scope, the story of the Volga boatman—all have been brought out in the screen version. "The Volga Boatman" plays this week at the Metropolitan theater.

The tale is laid in Russia at the time of the outbreak of strife between the nobility and the "White Army" of the aristocracy. The dramatic interest centers in the contact between Elmer Fair, a lovely aristocrat, and William Boyd, a sweat-stained, toil-worn phantom of the Volga. Theodore Kosloff plays a striking dumb-bellied simoniac, Victor Varconi, an impudent prince, and Julia Faye, an exotic Tartar character. Robert Edison is given one of his interesting character roles, as the last of a great line of Russian land owners.

The story starts on the Volga before the revolution, and then swings into a strife where the overturning of the czar makes the whole nation a seething cauldron of upheaval. Servant becomes master and master—servant. The high light of the picture is a great ball of the aristocrats including the czar and his court. Later we see the aristocrats in their silks and satins forced into the harness formerly worn by the Volga boatmen.

The story points no moral and takes no sides. It is intended simply as a love story of a man and a woman placed against the most interesting mystery of recent history.

William Boyd, who rose to immediate popularity in "The Road to Yesterday," plays the title role. In him is seen the crudity of the Russian peasant, the spineless redoubt of the nobility. The established order of things—Boyd, though, is a little more intelligent than the average boatman—he is a dreamer, envisioning both Russia and its peasants as free, on a par with the aristocrats. In short, he is a dreamer, one who uses his hands as well as his muscles.

After introducing his three leading characters, whom he later plunges into the maelstrom of revolution, De Mille brings them together and establishes their love by a series of events which neither the czar nor the aristocracy can understand.

Theatre Talk

CONDUCTED BY LORENZO JONES, JR.

CHARLES OLcott TOPS BIG KEITH PROGRAM

Headed by Charles Olcott, singing star, and Edythe Maye, of the vivid personality and beautiful voice, the vaudeville program at the Forsyth theater this week will provide an excellent introductory to the brilliant musical comedy season starting next week when that well-known theater will become the home of the Don Lanning Musical Comedy company.

Mr. Olcott and Miss Maye are two artists who combine fine voices with personality of an unforgettable sort and their offering is aptly entitled "The Human Side of Song."

Attractive dancing, rich settings and music both vocal and instrumental constitute the symphony of tone and color presented by Mildred Andre and company, as the added attraction the first half of the week the company consists of the clever and attractive girls and a man, all artists.

Jack Inglis and Jimmy Wilson have a quaint comedy offering in "Fools." They are wise fools with a great talent for laughter, and they are endowed with the malice aforesighted to create uproarious comedy.

Purdy and Fain are singing and dancing comedians who have welded their talents in an offering called "Kiss a Miss," the third attraction on the bill.

The world's champion hoop roller is the title proudly worn by Howard Nichols, whose act, constituting an altogether different sort of attraction from the remainder of the program, is called "The Ace of Hoops." It is an exhibition act, combined with a display of dexterity unequalled in this particular line. His juggling of seven hoops at one time while dancing is one of the strangest feats of its sort on the vaudeville stage.

Beginning Thursday the last bill of vaudeville of the season, prior to the opening of musical comedy at the Forsyth, will introduce as headliner Sena Thomas. Miss Thomas, a girl of 1924, shown in New York, will be seen as the ingenue. Milton Reick, from the same company is the juvenile, and Bobby Williams, late of the Winter Garden, will be the specialty dancer. The Lyric Harmony Four, a quartet of vocalists who compare favorably with any on Broadway, and who have just finished an engagement with "Over There," will be a notable feature of the singing ensemble. It is composed of Jack Burns, Paul Keith, Al Loring and Pat Monte. Others of the principals will be Edna Jacques, Emily Ross, dancer; Nellie Walker, Fred Bigman and Frank Blyler.

The first production, opening Monday night, June 7, will be the well-known musical comedy success, "No Other Girl." In it Mr. Lanning has a seemingly funny part as Ananias the Carpenter, originally from somewhere in Pennsylvania, a role said to be similar to his famous "Johnnie Cousins," in "The Gingham Girl," in addition to Mr. Lanning, the organization includes many other reproduction of Wall street in futuristic colors and design, and, finally, a futuristic cabaret in which scene there is a color transformation which is said to be truly astounding in its novelty. In the midst of a modern jazz-dance, the lights are suddenly shut off, the audience changes the scene, the dancer goes into a bunch of cannibals in the jungle doing an aboriginal dance. This is symbolic of how closely jazz is associated with savagery. In the background are seen windows of office and hotel buildings reaching up into the sky on an inclined plane. Then follow scenes representing a fan-palace with audiences wherever the

MUSICAL COMEDY OPEN FORSYTH NEXT WEEK

Simultaneously with the closing of the Keith vaudeville circuit next Saturday comes the opening of the following Monday of the Forsyth theater musical comedy stock company, composed of a sterling cast of 35, headed by Don Lanning, one of the foremost young comedians in musical comedy circles.

The first production, opening Monday night, June 7, will be the well-known musical comedy success, "No Other Girl." In it Mr. Lanning has a seemingly funny part as Ananias the Carpenter, originally from somewhere in Pennsylvania, a role said to be similar to his famous "Johnnie Cousins," in "The Gingham Girl," in addition to Mr. Lanning, the organization includes many other quite well-known performers, all of whom are in the final rehearsals now at Miami, their "come on" point.

Sena Thomas will be prima donna, and Ruth Tester, recent of the "Bunn" of 1924, shown in New York, will be seen as the ingenue. Milton Reick, from the same company is the juvenile, and Bobby Williams, late of the Winter Garden, will be the specialty dancer. The Lyric Harmony

Footnotes ON THE Footlights

BY ELMO HAMBY

Willard Patterson, manager of the Metropolitan theater, has returned to his home town from a local sanatorium where he has been ill for the past month. "Pat," as he is affectionately known to his friends, is the oldest manager from point of service with any one show organization, in the United States, having been with Sig Samuels at the old Criterion and at the Metropolitan for ten years.

One of the most popular features of the performances will undoubtedly be the spiritual choruses, according to Mr. Semon. It will number 12, all beautiful and possessed of fine voices. Most of its members are recognized entertainers at cabarets and night clubs. They are as follows: Thais Allen, Nita Allen, Eldora Robinson, Violet Robinson, with Alice, Evelyn May, Charlotte Johnson, Pauline Maher, Effie Burley, Freda Franklin, Frances Drymon and Clara Veraneau.

The company will arrive in Atlanta Friday following a "tryout" of four days in Miami at which the finishing touches will be put on the opening production, "No Other Girl." Two special cars will be used for the company and its equipment but Mr. Lanning and Mr. Eviston will be transported through from the Florida city and will be here in time for the opening.

The organization will be seen at

FREE NIGHT SHOWS FOR LAKWOOD PARK

"Flying Millers" Booked for Midway This Week; Free Concert Today.

Launching a new policy of sensational nightly free entertainment, in addition to the regular Sunday afternoon concerts, Lakewood Amusement park this week enters the seventh week of its new season with more attractions than it has ever offered.

It has been this person's opinion that the old "Cleopatra contest" gag had been worked to the bone. The "flying death" but crowds at the Metropolitan theater the past week seemed to be just as enthusiastic and just as interested in the results of the contest as when it was an innovation, all of which proves again the predictions of such authorities as Ned Wayburn.

The Fox Film corporation has just issued an expensive catalog of a fully illustrated catalog of the Fox attractions for the forthcoming year. Winfield R. Sheehan, vice president and general manager of Fox Films makes the following statement:

"I have every reason to believe that our pictures next season will be excellent because of the subject matter, the directors and the newly created organization."

"I have seen the first three weeks' two-night performances each night and at matinees on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays. Despite the quality of the company and the productions to be staged, Manager Semon stated that popular prices will prevail, with 75 cents as the highest night admission price. Reservations for the season may now be obtained at the box office of the Forsyth theater and the same seats may be reserved each week.

the first of the spectacular nightly free shows.

The "Flying Kadel," a combination of aerial acrobats and contortionists who have been the sensations of fairs and amusement parks throughout the country for several years, have been secured as the featured entertainers for this week, and will give two performances each night this week. One will be at 8 o'clock and one at 9:45 o'clock.

The equipment for the act, consisting of trapezes, flying rings, slack wires and stage, have been erected at the lower end of the midway, the slopes of the rock avenue making it adaptable as an outdoor theater for attractions of this type.

The usual Sunday afternoon concert from 3 to 5 o'clock this Sunday afternoon is to be expanded by the addition of Nita Walker, member of last year's Light Opera company, to the program. The Elks' Royal Purple band and Jessie Reese's Concert troupe are also booked.

The park is now open daily from 1 o'clock each afternoon until 11 o'clock at night. Three new rides and shows opened last week give it 16 different amusement and riding devices, the largest number it has ever offered. The picnic groves have all been equipped with tables and benches, making it inviting for the daily picnic parties held there.

Carl Laemmle has promised Marj Philbin the role of Des in the Victor Hugo story, "The Man Who Laughs." Charles Whittaker has made an adaptation of the story and it is Mr. Laemmle's intention now to make the picture in this country instead of in Paris as was previously announced.

Universal has purchased an original story by Ernest Pascal entitled "Egypt." Lois Weber will make this her next production at Universal City. Its releasing title will be "A Savage in Silks."

Harriet Nawrot and Boys in "Thrills and Spills," will open the show in a comedy skit with acrobatic and tumbling feats.

Pay Less Than You Now Pay for Rent and OWN YOUR OWN HOME in Beautiful Avondale

ES, it's absolutely true!

You can actually do this very thing. There is no mystery about it, for the new Avondale Home-Owning Plan makes it possible.

Think of stepping into a marvelously beautiful, ultra-modern, charmingly designed and perfectly appointed bungalow that would cost you from $9,000 to $10,000 to build yourself, and which you could not rent for less than $90 or $100 a month—all this for only $75 or $78 a month, covering all carrying and interest charges! You will be the home's proud owner in a very few years, and the home you get at Avondale for $8,500 could not be duplicated elsewhere for $10,000.

"How is this possible?" you ask.

Here is the answer:

100 New Homes

The greatest residential building and development program the South has ever known is now surging forward at Avondale Estates.

One of the South's greatest building organizations, T. T. Flagler and Company, is building a minimum of 100 new homes within the year. Other well-known Avondale builders are at work on scores more.

This enormous program gives Avondale builders tremendous purchasing power. Everything is bought on a wholesale basis at the absolute minimum. Architects' fees, financing costs, contingency fees and excessive contractors' profits are eliminated. Because of the volume these builders are satisfied with one-third the margin the average builder would insist upon for a single house.

Costs Reduced to Absolute Minimum

Just as production costs have been lowered by the large manufacturing concerns of America, through mass production and efficiency methods, so have building costs been lowered under the Avondale building and home-owning plan.

This plan makes it possible for us to save you approximately 20% on the cost of your home, to build a home for $12,000 that would cost you $14,000, at least. Or one for $8,500 that would cost you $10,000, and then make it possible for you to pay for it and own it for less than you now pay for rent.

A Nation-Wide Movement

This movement is today assuming definite shape over the entire country. Great insurance companies, trust companies, mortgage and loan companies with billions of dollars in resources are seeking an outlet for their capital.

During the past five years, more homes have been built than in any similar period in the nation's history. Young business men, professional men and salaried men are at last beginning to realize that interest is cheaper than rent and that rent receipts are worthless—whereas every monthly note paid represents a definite and positive saving. Under the Avondale plan, original cash payments as low as $1,000 can be made.

How It Actually Works

Take, as an illustration, two young men of equal earning capacity; say $3,600 a year.

One decides to rent an apartment for $90 a month. At the end of five years he has paid out $5,400 and saved nothing!

The other decides to build a $10,000 home at Avondale—one he could not duplicate elsewhere for $12,000. His monthly payments, including every interest and carrying charge, are $89.84 a month—and at the end of five years' living in his home, he has actually paid everything on his home except the original loan, which he can carry indefinitely for an average of $35 a month.

Meanwhile, his home has enhanced in value as Avondale has flourished. He has likely had many opportunities to sell for a profit of $1,500 or $2,000.

The other man still has his cramped quarters, no feeling of independence, no recreational advantages such as Avondale affords—he has only a large sheaf of worthless rent receipts.

What Life in Avondale Means

A home in Avondale means more than a house and lot.

It means that you and your family will enjoy all the advantages possessed by the multi-millionaire on his lavish country estate. Your children will have the most beautiful and most completely equipped playground in all the South—for safe and wholesome play, far from traffic dangers.

Golf, tennis, boating, fishing, swimming, horseback riding—every opportunity for wholesome life.

Avondale Gardens supply freshest vegetables daily; Avondale Dairies the purest milk and cream.

Make up your mind today to stop paying, paying, paying for something you will never own. Save while you live—by taking advantage of this marvelous opportunity for great profit and life to the uttermost.

Our downtown sales offices—169-171 Peachtree Street—are kept open every evening until 10 o'clock for the express purpose of making it possible for those who are busy during the day to investigate this remarkable plan.

Avondale sales have passed the million-dollar mark and are speeding ahead at the rate of $3,000,000 a year!

Music Club Will Secure New Members

The Atlanta Music Club's effort to secure 1,000 sustaining members for the coming season of musical and concert activity is meeting with encouraging response, it was reported Saturday by Mrs. Cliff C. Hatcher, president of the club.

Active members of the club are co-operating with the membership committee in enrolling new sustaining members, whose payments of $15 a year form the nucleus of the club's financial support for its concert series.

Each sustaining member is given a choice seat for each concert of the series, and a return of the membership fee, which is approximately half the amount of single performance admission charges to all the concerts.

The concert course is now practically complete save for the formality of signing one or two contracts with international famous artists and the entire course will probably be announced officially within the next week, Mrs. Hatcher stated.

Announcement that Rosa Ponselle, Atlanta's favorite among the prima donna sopranos of the Metropolitan Opera company, would open the concert series with the club on June 24, followed by Albert Spalding, the great American violinist on October 28, greatly stimulated interest in the club's plans for the next season and was followed by a large number of voluntary membership subscriptions.

Deposits of $5 to secure first choice of seats for the course were received by mail at the Atlanta Music club office, 84 North Broad street.

The balance of the $15 fee is payable in September when the seat sale opens.

Enrollment of 1,000 sustaining members would practically meet the cost of the year's musical activities.

Miss Hoffman Will Marry Morgan Blake

Much interest centers in the announcement today of the engagement of Miss Corrie Gertrude Hoffman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Hoffman, and William Morgan Blake, whose marriage will take place Wednesday evening, June 30, at the Baptist Tabernacle.

Miss Hoffman, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Hoffman, pioneer citizens of Atlanta, is deeply interested in religious works. She has been a member of the Agape Club of the Baptist Tabernacle.

Miss Hoffman graduated from Commercial High school with honors and is quite an accomplished musician. She possesses a beautiful soprano voice, and is of a blonde type, with a charming and lovable personality, which has endeared her to a large group of friends.

Mr. Blake is the son of Mrs. Blake and the late George Blake of Nashville, Tenn., where he was born and educated, having prepared for college at Coates Heights afterward, graduating at the University where he made a splendid record.

Mr. Blake is sporting editor of The Atlanta Journal, having been connected with that paper for the past ten years, conducting the department according to excellent newspaper standards.

carried out this same color scheme.

Mr. Mitchell and Miss Alice Callaway, of Florida, assisted in entertaining the guests. Miss Mitchell wore a gown of yellow chiffon, trimmed in lace, worn over a slip of the same color. Mrs. Mitchell was gowned in a powder blue georgette, trimmed in pink lace.

Covers were placed for Misses Lillian Garner, Doris Thurman, Agnes Allen, Billie Linnithcum, Laurie Linnithcum, Betty Conway, Louise Bradberry and Helen Bradberry.

About 16 guests were invited to meet Miss Knox.

Miss Linnithcum Is Complimented.

Miss Nancy Linnithcum, whose marriage to Thomas Hull will be an event of next month was honor guest at a delightful luncheon Saturday given by Miss Helen Bradberry at the Atlanta Biltmore hotel.

Miss Linnithcum was served at 1:30 o'clock in a private dining room of the hotel. The table was attractively decorated with lavender and pink sweet peas.

Covers were placed for Misses Lillian Garner, Doris Thurman, Agnes Allen, Billie Linnithcum, Laurie Linnithcum, Betty Conway, Louise Bradberry and Helen Bradberry.

The Peers, a social club among the masculine set, were hosts at a large party, their guests including a group of young men.

Miss Grace Poole who leaves soon for a tour of Europe was honor guest in a party given by Dr. William C. Warren, Jr. Covers were placed for 12.

Biltmore Tea-Dance Give Luncheon.

Members of the board of directors of Oglethorpe university entertained at a "Founders' Day" luncheon Saturday at the Atlanta Biltmore hotel.

Luncheon was served in a private dining room of the hotel. The table was attractively decorated. Large bunches of flowers with the handles being tied with large bows of black and gold ribbons, which are the school colors. Dancing was enjoyed from 5 until

Miss Mack To Be Bride Of Robert P. Wimberly

Of cordial social interest throughout the south is the announcement made today by Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Edwin Mack, of Thomasville, of the engagement of their only daughter, Mary Helen, to Robert Paul Wimberly, also of Thomasville. The wedding, which will be a brilliant event taking place Thursday evening, June 24, will unite two of Georgia's most prominent and beloved families.

Miss Mack has often visited in Atlanta as the popular guest of Miss Margaret Elder and Miss Telside Pratt, and the announcement of her engagement is of especial interest to her host of friends here. She also attended school at Agnes Scott college, and later specialized in music in New York, studying under the country's most famous masters. She completed her education in Europe, and spent one year traveling on the continent in a party with Miss Elder and Miss Pratt.

Possessing the charm of a winning personality and of a distinct type of blonde beauty, the bride-elect has been an admired belle in the social life of the south and east. Her family has long been identified with the progress and development of south Georgia, where her father is a prominent figure in business and financial circles. Her only brother is Warden Mack, of Thomasville.

Mr. Wimberly is a member of one of Georgia's best-known families, having formerly lived in Savannah. He attended school at the University of Georgia. At present he is engaged in business in Thomasville, where he and his bride will make their home, and he has made an enviable place for himself in business, civic and social relations of that city.

board, presided. A report was made by Dr. Thornewell Jacobs, president of the university, and Mrs. Catherine Connerat, president of the woman's board.

Special honor guests of the affair were Dr. Ashby Jones, Dr. William A. Law, Harry M. Hermance, of Toronto; Harry M. Atkinson, Henry W. Blot, of St. Mary, Pa., and J. F. Preston, of Korea, each of whom made short calls.

Covers were placed for fifty guests.

Burton Smith Honors Visitors at Dinner.

Burton Smith was host at a buffet supper given at his home on West Peachtree street Friday evening in honor of his guests, Roy Donnelly, of New York, and George Meyer, of London.

The guests invited were: Misses Theodore Beckham, Virginia Britton, Lella Kirkpatrick, Virginia Lutes, Harriet T. Moore, and Clara Luttrell; Donnelly; Mr. Meyer; Mr. Tomlison, Ralph Williams, Dan Sutler, George Wooten, Mr. Gillepie, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Ganby, and Mr. and Mrs. Sheen, of Miami, Fla.

Important Events Hold Atlanta Society in Town

Although this is the season of the year when popular belief begins to credit almost everybody with being out of town or just on the verge of leaving for a summer jaunt, a glance over the list of important events, both of a cultural and social nature, scheduled to take place during the coming week, discloses that fact.

By way of furthering the interest of art for art's sake, the junior committee of the Atlanta chapter, D. A. R., will sponsor "An Evening With Artists" Tuesday at 8 o'clock, the lovely affair to be held in the beautiful salon of the new Philobiosian building at 581 Peachtree street.

The entertainment will be in charge of Mrs. John B. Roberts, chairman of the junior committee, assisted by Mrs. John M. Slaton as co-chairman. Serving with Mrs. Roberts and Mrs. Slaton as the committee planning the entertainment will be Mrs. Thomas Morgan, Mrs. Chancery Smith and Mrs. Walter Maude.

The program will include a charming arrangement of living pictures and tableaux, posed by the originals of the portraits and a group including copies of the old masters, followed by a number of graceful dances in costume.

Garden Club Meeting.

The meeting of the Peachtree Garden club is another event of cultural interest which will take place Monday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock at Broadlands, the home of Mrs. Hugh Richardson.

An interesting feature of the afternoon will be the reading of the lecture arranged by the Garden Club of America on "Color Composition in the Hardy Border," by Mrs. Albert Howell, and illustrated with slides.

A group of charming visitors in our midst may be credited with keeping many Atlantans in the city after the summer exodus has begun. Mr. and Mrs. Albert Howell have as their guests at their country place Miss Sarah Richardson, of Columbia, S. C., and Miss Ann Boyle, of Washington, D. C.

New York has contributed two attractive young matrons with their families to the summer entertainment of the first real summer day. Both are former Atlantans and are re-ceiving a cordial welcome. Mrs. James Landauer, the former Ruth Yarbrough, as the guest of her mother, Mrs. L. W. Yarbrough; and Mrs. Lansing Shield, who was before her marriage Miss Gladys Byrd, as the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles P. Byrd, on East North Avenue.

Canadian Visitors

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hermance, of Toronto, Canada, are other former Atlantans who are distinguished visitors in the city. As the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Ashcraft, who are being extensively entertained, Dr. and Mrs. Thomas J. Jones, the former Atlanta dinner today at the Piedmont Driving club, inviting a few close friends and distinguished visitors who are in the city to attend Oglethorpe commencement, to meet on their first real summer day. Both are former Atlantans and are re-ceiving a cordial welcome. Mrs. James Landauer, the former Ruth Yarbrough, as the guest of her mother, Mrs. L. W. Yarbrough; and Mrs. Lansing Shield, who was before her marriage Miss Gladys Byrd, as the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles P. Byrd, on East North Avenue.

Junes Brides

A bevy of lovely June brides will plight their troth at marital altars this first week of their favorite month. Of wide social importance is the wedding of Miss Evelyn Louise Knox to Cecil Powell, of Flitgerald, which will take place at 8:30 o'clock Wednesday evening at the home of the bride on Peachtree street. Miss Miriam Janet Perkins will be the bride-tea at which Miss Bessie Mitchell was hostess on Saturday.

Tuesday evening at the Druid Hills Presbyterian church, a small reception will be given in the corner room of the home of the bride on Cleburne avenue.

A lovely wedding in the neighboring city of Marietta will attract many Atlantans Wednesday evening when Miss Louise Dean Stephens becomes the bride of Robert Lee Hays Jr. of Atlanta. The marriage will be solemnized at the First Baptist church, to be followed by a large reception at the home of the bride's parents on Church street.

Dinner-Dance at Driving Club.

Many delightful dinner parties were given at the regular Saturday evening driving club last night. Dinner and dancing took place on the terrace, which made a beautiful scene for this occasion, with its lovely flower-boxes, shrubbery, and Dorothy Perkins roses in bloom.

The tables were placed around the terrace of the terrace, and the baskets of summer flowers in various colors as central decorations.

A number of visitors were entertained in parties. Rufus Lang was host in a party honoring Miss Sara Aldrich Richardson of Alendale, S. C., and Miss Anne Boyle of Washington, D. C., the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Howell Jr. Invited visitors, who are charming visitors, were a group of friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Langdon Quinn were host to a party of friends. Mr. and Mrs. Quinn, and their two sons leave Monday for St. Simons Island, Georgia, where they have taken a cottage for two weeks.

J. Harry Sommers was host to a party of friends. Covers were placed for seven friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Dudley Cowles had an equally grand honor in their party. Dr. Edward F. Cowles, of New York, who is their guest, covers were placed for twenty guests.

Dr. and Mrs. E. Bates Block gave a party as a compliment to Miss Isabel Johnson, one of the season's debutantes. Their guests included fifteen members of the younger social set.

These Frocks of Lovely Line
Proclaim the Woman's Charm

THEY are essentially the frocks of a well-bred woman—so exquisitely soft and feminine in their simple, lovely lines that they develop the charm of the woman who wears them. And what is fully as important, Frohsin's "things" hold their distinction—their subtle lines never sag or stretch, their splendid workmanship yields but slowly to wear. They will grace the wardrobe in good taste—and such a wardrobe is in the end the least expensive to buy and certainly the most delightful to own!

Wedding Plans Are of Interest

Of interest to many friends throughout the south is the announcement of the plans for the approaching marriage of Miss Gladys Elizabeth Lane to Robert Hunter Tarrant, the wedding to be an event of Tuesday evening, June 15.

The ceremony will take place at 7 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Lane, on St. Charles place, Dr. F. C. McConnell, pastor of the Druid Hills Baptist church, officiating. The bride will be given in marriage by her father, Oscar Lane. Miss Mildred Vickery will be maid of honor and the bride's cousin, Mrs. Charlton Reed Roberts, will act as matron of honor. Captain George Tarrant, as Mr. Tarrant's best man and the groomsman will be Eugene Craig.

The flower girl will be little Miss Marjorie McNaughton, beautiful and charming little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Evan Lee McNaughton.

Preceding the wedding ceremony will be a solo rendered by Mrs. Fred Youell, with piano accompaniment by Miss Kate Blatterman and violin by by Kenneth Huffaker. During the ceremony Miss Blatterman and Mr. Huffaker will play a piano and violin duet. The bride's book will be kept by Miss Annie Kate Hamilton, of Fort Valley, Ga.

Many delightful pre-nuptial parties are being given this charming bride-select.

Interesting Weddings Take Place in Albany.

Albany, Ga., May 29.—Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Barrett, of Albany, Ga., announce the marriage of their sister, Inez Barrett, to M. W. Miller, of Tampa, Fla., the marriage taking place in Madison, Fla., Monday the 24th, at 7 o'clock.

Mr. Miller was one of the most charming young ladies of Albany, Ga., where she formerly lived. She was a graduate nurse of Dr. Hill's sanitarium in Alabama. Immediately after her graduation she came to Albany and took up her home where she lived for four years. About a year ago she moved to Miami and made her home there. Mr. Miller is among the popular business men of Tampa. He is connected with a real estate firm in that city, having made Tampa his home for many years.

The couple left about 10 o'clock Monday morning and drove to Tampa where the ceremony was performed. They will spend their honeymoon in Doane-Hudson.

Wimberly-Poole Engagement Is of Interest to Society

Cordial interest is centered in the announcement of the engagement of Miss Sarah Fletcher Wimberly and Dr. George Grady Poole. The lovely bride-elect is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Wimberly and has resided in Atlanta for the past four years, while by her charming personality and generous manner, she has acquired many friends.

On both the maternal and paternal sides she is a descendant of some of America's most representative families. Her mother was formerly Miss Alice Dehaven, of Macon, whose father was a French Huguenot origin, and a descendant of the Hawleys and the Woodburys, of Connecticut. Her mother's grandfather was the Rev. John Parker Lee, son of Daniel Lee, who settled in Cambridge and was one of the company of Rev. Thomas Hooker, who founded the city of Hartford, Conn. Lee was a direct descendant of Jason Lee, the first white man to settle on the western coast. He settled in Oregon. Before the civil war, John Parker Lee was president of Whitworth college, Brookhaven, Miss., and a personal friend of Jefferson Davis. He was also the first president of the Woman's college, Meridian, Miss. The Lee family is a direct descendant of the same branch. Her father, Ezekiel H. Wimberly, is of Saxon origin, and a descendant of the Wimberlys of revolutionary fame. His mother was formerly Miss Tigner, of Muscogee county, and a descendant of the Tinsleys and Crawfords, of Georgia.

Dr. Poole is the son of Mr. and Mrs. F. P. Poole, pioneer citizens of Trappers Run, S. C., and a brother of J. E. Poole of Atlanta, who is a graduate of the Atlanta-Southern Dental college, where he was president of the South Carolina club; vice president of the senior class, and a member of the Psi Omega fraternity. During the world war Dr. Poole served as first lieutenant of cavalry. At present he is a prominent dentist and a member of the staff of the Georgia Baptist hospital, a Shriner, and a member of the Atlanta Athletic club and the East Lake Country club.

Following their marriage, the couple will leave for an extended trip to New York, Canada and other points of interest.

Quite a number of prenuptial parties have been planned for Miss Wimberly, among those entertaining will be Mrs. Goodwin Walker, Mrs. H. G. Chapman, Mrs. George Halpin, Mrs. O. L. Wimberly, Mrs. George Burks, of Chatsworth, Ga., Misses Sam Baker, Pauline Gault, Myrtle Adams, Tullie Fishback, and others to be announced later.

Literature Club Gives Brief History of Organization

Realizing the great need of a club which should be purely cultural, a group of women met at the home of Mrs. Wilson Moore on Olympic way, Olympic hills, one year ago and organized a literature club for the study of ancient and modern literature.

They elected the following officers: Mrs. W. T. Rooney, vice president; Mrs. E. W. Brodhead, vice president; Mrs. M. Sidney Smith, secretary; Mrs. E. H. Lee, treasurer; Mrs. H. H. Turner, press representative; Mrs. W. M. Jones, program chairman. Membership was limited to twenty-five, and was by invitation.

In one year of earnest work the club has proven its right to exist. After the adoption of constitution the club was federated. A year book is just off the press.

The meetings are held in the homes of the club members. There has been established a semi-annual gathering of the families of the members, a picnic in the summer and a party during the Christmas holidays.

The following are the charter members of the club: Mrs. T. M. Beck, Mrs. A. C. Beck, Mrs. E. M. Berryman, Mrs. William M. Jones, Mrs. B. H. Lee, Mrs. E. W. Brodhead, Mrs. Alice E. Means, Mrs. E. W. Brooks, Mrs. Lena Myers, Mrs. C. P. Connally, Mrs. W. T. Mooney, Mrs. Gilbert Davis, Mrs. Sidney Smith, Mrs. J. A. Flewley, Mrs. H. Turner, Miss Sarah Florence and Mrs. J. R. Wakefield.

'An Evening With Artists' Will Be Presented Tuesday Evening

"An Evening With Artists," sponsored by the junior committee of the Atlanta chapter, D. A. R., will be presented Tuesday evening, June 1, at the new Philobiosian building, 581 Peachtree street, in the handsome art salon.

Among those representing portraits are Mrs. Lou Grove, Mrs. Russell Bellman, Misses Jennie Robinson, Gorda Horton, Mrs. Rembert Marshall, Mrs. Marion Harper and W. E. Mansfield.

Mrs. Frank Iman will represent the Madonna; Mrs. John C. St. John, as a Russian princess; Miss Mark Orme, Romley's "Maytime"; Mrs. Lucius McConnell will represent "The Spinner," by Romley; Miss Rebecca Ashcraft will represent Correggio's "Magdalen of the Rocks."

Miss Clara Mitchell O'Connell figure in a group picture, as will Mrs. Klatt Armstrong, Misses Hazel Kirk and Murdoch Walker, who will also be charming figures in this picture.

Miss Isabel Breitenbuchs will represent Surgeon's "Caravancita" and Cyril Smith will portray "The First Music Lesson," a celebrated picture.

The picture "Springtime" will feature Misses Vaughan Nixon, Mary Meadow, Goldsmith, Mary Phillips Orme, Mary Adair Howell and Josephine Crawford, a group of lovely debutantes.

"Blue Boy." Miss Ruth Osburn will represent

The Buckeye Woman's club met Tuesday, May 25, at the home of Mrs. Herbert Halverson, 185 East Seventeenth street. Mrs. W. W. Alexander and Mrs. Leota Moury were the assisting hostesses, and Mrs. Robert K. Rambo, president of the City Federation, was guest of honor. She gave very interesting and constructive talk. Mrs. T. W. McAllister read a article on "Early Settlers of Ohio." Responses to roll call were "Ohio's Famous Citizens."

Before the election of officers the club unanimously appointed Mrs. Edwin M. Helbig to again serve as president, who has served as president for the past six years and the appointment on Tuesday came as an honor one in recognition of the happy one with whom she has served during the past six years and tokens of the love and esteem borne her by the club.

Mrs. Helbig responded in a gracious manner, thanking the members for the honor bestowed upon her and at the same time asking for an honorable discharge from her duties as president at the end of the next two years with the opening of club activities in September. At the conclusion of Presidents' day, the club will honor Mrs. Helbig with a breakfast, the place to be announced later.

The report of the nominating committee composed of Mrs. W. E. Floyd, Mrs. W. W. Alexander and Mrs. F. W. Schenck was submitted and the following officers were elected: First vice president, Mrs. C. N. Weems; second vice president, Mrs. S. G. Hunter; recording secretary, Mrs. C. E. Folsom; treasurer, Mrs. T. W. McAllister; corresponding secretary Mrs. Wilb. Wilson; director, Mrs. J. E. Whitman.

Reports of the officers showed that the club has had a year of achievement and success and has accomplished much in an educational and philanthropic way.

The next meeting will be held June 22, with Mrs. W. A. Neill, Mrs. Fred White and Mrs. Lida Fortney as hostesses.

The following members have been present at every meeting during the year: Mrs. John Allen, Mrs. E. S. Norton, Mrs. E. L. Kirk, Mrs. Mrs. S. G. Hunter, Mrs. W. E. Floyd, Mrs. W. H. Preston and Mrs. E. M. Helbig. As a tribute to these women, Mrs. D. O. Smith read an original poem.

Mrs. Rippy Heads

'Atlanta Alumnae

Of Gunston Hall

One of the interesting social affairs of May 24 was the organization of the Atlanta Alumnae of Gunston hall, by Mrs. Thrasher Ames Rippy, at her home. About 150 women, after a short meeting, the members present were delightfully entertained at tea. Beautiful flowers from the gardens of the hostess adorned the table. May 24 is the day set by the founders of Gunston to be celebrated annually. Mrs. Rippy has been chosen president for the ensuing year. Mrs. Rippy was assisted by her mother, Mrs. F. O. Stone. Following is the list of members in Atlanta and nearby vicinity: Mrs. Walter Thompson Lane, Jr., Miss Georgette Bailey, Miss Nell Brauner, Mrs. Charles Dickerson Orme, Mrs. Harold C. Reissner, Mrs. Arthur Clark, Mrs. Charles Shultz, Mrs. Franklin Hinton, Miss Gladys LeVine, Mrs. Floyd Holt, Miss Marjorie McMillan, Mrs. Victor Augustus Moore, Jr., Mrs. George Weyman McCarty, Jr., Mrs. Presley Daniel Yates, Miss Jessie Warren Robinson, Miss Ida Moore Sadler, Miss Bell Sims, Miss Alice Steiner, Mrs. Thomasine Alice Rippy, Jr., Mrs. Rudolph Thiesen, Miss Fruiterer, Mrs. Watters, Miss Lucile Sessions, Mrs. Holling Judkins, Mrs. McDougall, Mrs. E. Dean Gaufron.

Mrs. Fred Mason Gives Bridge-Tea.

Mrs. Fred Mason was hostess at a bridge-tea this afternoon at her home in Decatur, in celebration to Miss Catherine Crawford and Miss Mary Collis Gregory, two of the Debutante High graduates.

Miss Gregory wore a dress of green and white georgette and a picture hat matching. Miss Crawford was charming in rose-colored georgette trimmed

"Thank You" Ball To Be Sponsored By Fair Officials

The Southeastern Fair association's first spring "Thank You" ball at Lakewood park casino at 8 o'clock Monday night will be sponsored by officials of the association and its members as hosts and hostesses. It was announced Saturday by Oscar Mills, secretary, Arthur L. Brooks, president, and Mrs. Brooke, Melv. R. Wilkinson, Ivan E. Allen, H. G. Hastings, F. J. Paxton and Mr. Mills, among the members invited.

The dance will be in celebration of the opening of the seventh week of the most successful season ever experienced by the amusement park, which is operated by the fair association to secure funds to improve the park and the plant of the fair association. Guest cards are being distributed among patrons of the park by the amusement operators of the park, who may be approached for the musical company from 4 to 5 o'clock Sunday afternoon, in which the Elks' Royal Purple band and Misses Jessie Reece Calvert and Nita Walker, sopranos, will be presented.

The casino has been decorated for the ball and filled for the hall, the colors red, white and blue being carried out in the electric lighting as well as in the other decorations.

Dinner Party At Summer Home.

Miss L. Beckinger, the new superintendent of nurses, who comes to Wesley Memorial hospital from Foothills Hospital, Marion, S. C., and Miss Bell MacKinnon, superintendent of the Lucy Elizabeth pavilion, who leaves in June to accompany the Emory boys on their tour of England and a visit to her parents in Scotland, were honor guests.

Luncheon was served from an exquisitely appointed table, with a lace luncheon cloth, lovely posies and roses forming the central decoration. A hearty welcome was extended Miss Beckinger by the auxiliary members and "bon voyage" to Miss MacKinnon.

More important at this time of the year is the linen shower which comes June 23 at the hospital. The members of the executive board are Mrs. Plato Durham, Mrs. A. L. Norris, Mrs. F. E. Thomas, Mrs. William Nichols, Mrs. John Staten, Mrs. S. F.

Poppy Lady Is Designation Of Miss Moina Michall

A Georgia woman, Miss Moina Michall, author, is known as the "Poppy Lady." Miss Michal originated the sentiment for "Poppy Day" and has been given the title of "Poppy Lady of America," by the American Legion. Last year she was nominated by the Legion for the $5,000 prize given by the Pictorial Review to the American woman who had "put over" an idea. The poppy theme fulfilled all requirements for eligibility.

Colonel John M. Michal, made sacred the poppy in his immortal poem, "In Flanders Field," but it was left to this Georgia school teacher to further glorify the poppy. Miss Michal spent almost all of the year 1914 in Europe, and therefore learned something of the conditions that existed over there. Later, when the United States entered the war, she dedicated herself to the government, and was appointed to the Young Women's Christian Association, overseas headquarters, at Hamilton Hall, Columbia University. She returned to New York.

On November 9, 1918, while engrossed in planning a Georgia home in France, a magazine was laid on her desk by General Colonel John M. Michal, containing his immortal poem. She read and re-read the lines with ecstasy. She resolved always to wear a red poppy to commemorate the heroic deeds of those who "bore the torch." Then another idea presented itself. Why should not every one, on a special day in every year, wear a red poppy, in memory of American dead?

A committee from the 25th conference of Overseas Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. workers came to present a check for $10,000 in appreciation of Miss Michal's efforts to make their headquarters a model hostess house. In thanking the committee she said, "I'll buy red silk poppies. I shall always wear red poppies—poppies of Flanders field." She outlined her plan to the committee who presented it to the conference. Everyone was Joint Hostesses Honor Young Matrons' Class.

On Wednesday afternoon of the past week, the Young Matrons' circles of the Peachtree Christian church were entertained by Mrs. A. C. Rawlins, Mrs. Tom M. Johnson and Mrs. Fred C. Hannah, at the ancestral home of the Hannah family at "The Oaks" in West End. The spacious rooms were adorned with sweet peas, delphinium, poppies, cornflowers and other flowers in bloom. The rook

Prizes for top scores were awarded Mrs. J. A. Bloodworth and Mrs. John Kerksie, while the consolation was given to Mrs. O. P. Black. Each guest was presented with a fragrant corsage of pastel shaded sweet peas. The guest list comprised the following: Mrs. J. H. Alexander, Mrs. J. Bloodworth, Mrs. H. A. Bellwood, Mrs. O. P. Black, Mrs. J. L. Cook, Mrs. Victor B. Clark, Mrs. G. C. Edmundson, Mrs. Fred C. Hannah, Mrs. C. G. Hannah, Mrs. John Kerksie, Mrs. John L. McDougal, Mrs. May Summers and Mrs. David D. Long.

A Christian gentleman! He stood foursquare to every wind that blew. His faith was founded on the Rock, And though the billows roll And beat upon his fragile bark, It made the haven true!

As B. W. Lytton said, "We are born for a higher destiny than that of earth; there is a realm where the rainbow of promise never fades, where the stars will be spread before us like islands in the ocean upon the deep, and where the beings that now pass before us like shadows will stay in our presence forever."

"Then sorrowful heart look up through the night

Of mourning and doubting, and catch the bright ray,

As when we call death but heralds the light

Of the dawn of the morning of God's Perfect Day."

—D. A. R. of Georgia will regret to know of the death of Mrs. W. L. Harley, who occurred at her home in Spartan, May 20. Mrs. Harley was a member of the Hancock chapter, D. A. R., was its regent for a number of years, and at the time of her death was vice regent.

The sale generally carries the endorsement of President Coolidge, the General Federation of Women's clubs, The Daughters of the American Revolution, and other individuals and organizations of national prominence. The entire proceeds from the sale of these poppies are devoted to the relief of war disabled and to alleviate conditions among ex-servicemen and their families, occasioned by sickness or unemployment. All members of the D. A. R. are called upon not only to assist in the sale, but to buy the "Buddy Poppies" in generous numbers for the benefit of these war heroes.

North Ave. Presbyterian Commencement

An especially beautiful sight this morning at the morning service of the North Avenue Presbyterian church will be the presence of the entire body of the North Avenue Presbyterian school, all in white, to receive the report of Dr. R. O. Flinn, pastor of the North Avenue Presbyterian church, and for a long time connected with the school. After the very impressive processional, led by 28 Junior High school girls, followed by the senior high school underclassmen, followed by the seniors, the student body will enter into the auditorium, and to mail their report to Mrs. R. H. Lee, chairman, 778 Cascade place, Atlanta, Mrs. Lee is a member of the Fifty-Fifth club, and prepared the poster exhibit for Mrs. Hastings at Emory university. If the clubs will mail photographs and literature to Mrs. Lee, her committee will assemble the posters in accord with the rules of the exhibit.

Kle Club Unit Will Hold Meeting.

The Kle club charity and social unit of B. P. O. E., No. 78, will hold its regular all-day social meeting on the first Wednesday, June 2, instead of the usual second Wednesday, at the home of the secretary, Mrs. LeRoy Lee, 189 1/2 Seventeenth street, Hemlock, 1324-W. A photograph contest of the scripture which best express and impress the school motto, "And Jesus increased in wisdom, and stature, and in favor with God and man."

On Monday afternoon the commencement activities will continue with senior high class day, 8:15 o'clock, at the main campus of the school at which will be crowned Nasonia, the senior who is adjudged by her classmates to be the most representative girl in the student body.

Other honors will be announced, awards made, and gifts presented at that time. The winner of the medal awarded by Mrs. M. H. High to the most meritorious senior will also be announced. Such announcements will be followed by the regular class day exercises. The alumnae tea to the seniors will follow the class day exercises and will be given in Thrower hall. In the evening the seniors will have a banquet at the Henry Grady hotel.

The annual commencement exercises will be held at the Women's club on Tuesday evening, June 1, at 8:15 o'clock. Forty-eight seniors will receive diplomas and announcements will be made of the winner of the Agnes Scott scholarship, and the juniors whose scholarship permits their membership in the honor society of the school, the Pi Sigma Kappa honor society.

Conservatory Recital To Be Given Friday.

The Atlanta Conservatory of Music will present pupils from the class of Charles Bonner, to be Mme. G. G. Guerini, cello; violinist, pupil of Mr. Lindner, in a recital at Cable hall on Friday evening June 4, at 8:30 o'clock. The public is invited.

National Service Star Legion Will Convene in Wisconsin

The National Service Star Legion has called its members into annual convention June 21 to 25, the convention to be held in the First Congregational church in LaCrosse, Wis.

The school of instruction, which is planned for one period of the program, will be teeming with information of value to workers. The pageant, "President," written by our national president, Mrs. W. E. G. Saunders, of Iowa, will fill one evening with a lasting inspiration. The pageant, while shown as a legend, is a faithful reproduction of the high lights of historical America.

Mrs. Robert Carlton Morris and Mr. Max Mayes and Mrs. Henry F. Baker, all four national presidents, will be present at the meeting. Mr. Albert Hale, of Chicago, the distinguished husband of the president of the Illinois division, traveler, writer and scientist, will give one of the principal addresses.

This is the first national convention in the history of the organization in which the homes of the members in the hostess chapter have been opened to the delegates.

The Mississippi river and the nearby scenery have rightfully given the city of LaCrosse the "beautiful," and the delightful climate of the middle north in June adds an allurement all its own.

The legislative chairman, Mrs. Henry F. Baker, urges every member to give attention to house bill No. 4548 for the retirement of disabled veterans and officers of the world war.

The legion has been advised that the bill has been favorably reported out of the world war veterans' committee and is now on the house calendar for consideration, and urges its members to keep in touch with their congressmen and urge their votes for the passage of this important measure.

West End Civic Club Installs New Officers

The installation of new officers for the coming year was the outstanding feature of the regular meeting of the Woman's Civic club of West End on Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the clubrooms.

Mrs. A. J. Merrill, the past president, introduced Mrs. H. G. Hastings, president of the fifth district, who conducted the services. She outlined the outstanding attributes essential to the betterment of the organization. In the speech she gave to Mrs. Edward Hardaway, State vice-chairman, she was sure that for the coming year the motto would be "fairness, justice and unselfishness."

Mrs. Smith responded by pledging her services to the club. Mrs. Smith introduced her associate officers, after which Mrs. R. Taylor Connally responded by stating that service is the rent we pay for the spirit of the organization.

Mrs. Smith, in discussing plans for the year, asked that each member bring in one member or more, as her aim for the ensuing year was to increase the fellowship now enjoyed by the members, also to increase the membership.

The following new members were welcomed to the club: Mrs. C. F. Echo, Mrs. J. C. McCleskey, Mrs. H. W. Ferguson, Miss Leila Eaves and Mrs. McDonald.

The musical program was presented by Mrs. Bonita Crowe and Miss Johnnie Story.

Announcement was made that on Monday evening at 8 o'clock the weekly social gathering of the club members and their friends will occur.

Mrs. C. C. Berry, chairman, stated that tables would be arranged for any it was voted that these Monday meetings would continue throughout the summer, though the club will suspend the meetings in August.

The fourth Wednesday meeting, which

The Robert E. Lee Chapter, U. D. C., College Park, will meet Tuesday, June 1, at 3:30 o'clock at the home of Mrs. V. C. Mason, on Virginia avenue.

Mrs. R. L. Proctor urges a full attendance of daughters to witness the warding of "crosses of service" to a number of College Park world war heroes.

This meeting will be held in lieu of June 3, the birthday of Jefferson Davis, the only president of the Confederacy.

The social hour will be presided over by the hostess, Mrs. Mason, and the chairman of hospitality, Mrs. Lilly M. Love.

The final all-day sewing for the needlework guild will be held at the home of Mrs. Guy Woolford, 14 Springdale road, on Tuesday, June 1.

After the business meeting a delightful social hour will follow.

It is to one of the members, Mrs. N. B. Price-Smith, who has recently been made president of the Woman's club of Atlanta.

A program was given with Mrs. Guy Woolford acting as chairman. Mrs. B. F. Fraser sang two lyrics and Mrs. H. C. Phipps gave a humorous reading entitled "Angelina at the Seashore."

At the business meeting Mrs. Price-Smith contributed $5 in the name of the Kentucky club to the disabled veterans' fund. Mrs. W. H. Wilson and Mrs. C. S. Williamson were appointed to sit on the hospitality committee with Mrs. John Herkis.

The final all-day sewing for the needlework guild will be held at the home of Mrs. Guy Woolford, 14 Springdale road, on Tuesday, June 1.

Miss Pairo To Wed Mr. Crane
At Home Ceremony in June

Miss Evans, of Fort Valley,
Weds E. T. Murray, of This City

Fort Valley, Ga., May 29.—With a ceremony characterized by dignity and beauty at the handsome home of Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Murray, Thursday evening at 8:30 o'clock, Miss Christine Evans became the bride of Edwin Thompson Murray, of Atlanta, the Rev. David Albert Howard, pastor of the First Baptist church, being the officiant. The marriage marked an epoch in social brilliance and was of wide interest throughout the south, uniting the state's most prominent and cultural families.

The bride, Evans home presented a scene of springtime beauty with its decorations of rich palms, ferns and multi-colored flowers with pink and white predominating.

In the living room a triple arch, depicting a cathedral window, decorated with pink roses and lacy greenery, formed the altar where the wedding vows were made.

Preceding the entrance of the bride party, Miss Katie May Williams at the piano and J. Emette Groover, violinist, rendered the wedding music, the program consisting of classic lectures and adaptation of popular love songs. Mrs. Verne L. Davis, of Commerce, sister of the groom, and Mrs. Glenmore Green sang several solos. Tom Flournoy and Otis Jones were the ushers.

Wedding Attendants.

The two bridesmaids, Misses Ann Heys of Americus, and Beulah Davidson, of Fort Valley, entered together, each wearing orchid taffeta fashion and fitted bodice, V-shaped back and full skirt of the 1880 period, with appliqued stripes of the same color. Miss Mary Evans, sister of the bride, as junior bridesmaid, came next wearing a petal pink taffeta made bouffant, in the same period style. The bridesmaid carried a shower bouquet of varicolored spring flowers in pastel shades. Next followed Miss Ruth Evans, sister of the bride, who was maid of honor, wearing an imported gown of gold lace, with gold sequins over gold cloth, with pink hose and gold slippers, embroidered in pink French roses, carrying a bouquet of Columbian roses.

Little Misses Harriett Flournoy and Winona Howard were lovely flower girls preceding the bride, wearing dainty frocks of white maline over pink, carrying French baskets of sweet peas in shower effect.

Beautiful Bride.

The bride entered with her father, A. J. Evans. They were joined at the altar by the groom, and his brother, Leroy Murray, of Washington, D. C.

The young bride, a beauty of the brocade type, was dazzlingly arrayed in her bright robes, wearing softly shimmering white satin, elaborately beaded in rose design, with tiny seed pearls. The gown was fashioned as a robe de style, with the pearl design forming a finish to the lower edge of the full skirt of even length, slightly decolored.

The court train of geometric designs, falling gracefully from the shoulders, was appliqued in the center with a panel of rose rose point lace bordered with a band of white satin, which was finished at the edges in a design of pearl embroidery.

The bridal veil was of filmy tulle, arranged in a becoming fashion adjusted to her hair with orange lace, maline effect.

Completing the charming ensemble was a shower bouquet of orchids and lilies of the valley.

Reception Follows.

Immediately following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Evans entertained the guests at an elaborate reception, during which a musical program was rendered. Receiving Mr. and Mrs. Evans and the bride and groom were Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Murray, of Americus, parents of the groom. In the large assembly were a number of social folk from Fort Valley, Marshallville, Paulding and Monteagle.

Miss Murray, mother of the groom, was gowned in a black lace model, with a shoulder corsage bouquet completing the costume.

Mr. Albert Evans, the bride's mother, was gowned in pink georgette, beaded in pearls, with a shoulder corsage bouquet of spring flowers.

During the evening the bride and groom left for a bridal trip, after which they will return to Atlanta, their future home.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Clegg, of Commerce, Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Lewis, Mr. and Mrs. Dave Massee, General and Mrs. Walter Harris, of Macon; Mrs. J. L. Williams, of Buena Vista; Miss Parmelee Chevis, of Paducah, Ky., Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Murray, Miss Jamie Murray, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Heys, Miss Ann Heys, Mr. and Mrs. R. L. McMath, Miss Elizabeth Smith, Atlanta, Mr. and Mrs. John G. Hensell, Mr. and Mrs. William Wallace Lyons, Miss Loula Baisden, of Atlanta; Mrs. T. Wilson Stewart, of Miami, Fla.; Mr. and Mrs. Donald Hastings, Lovejoy; Mr. and Mrs. Homer Williams, of Thomasville; Judge and Mrs. U. V. Whipple, of Cordele, and others.

My Church And I.

I thought my church was narrow; that in her service I was denied the joy of LIFE. I thought that other folk more fully entered into times' rich gain, and found great happiness I knew not of.

But then I stopped to think! Not narrow was my church, but my own selfish heart craved things of fleshly ease.

It was not my church but I, I thought my church lacked sociality; that folk both came and went and no one seemed to care in either case. I thought that other places offered so much more of joy to strangers.

But then I stopped to think. There was no unsociability about my church; it came to me as I had hurried home without a thought of the strange face.

It was not my church, it was I. I thought my church was DEAD. I wept at the grave and thought that she no longer faced a moving generation with a vital message. My face was wet with weeping! If we could but have a PREACHER come to raise the dead to life and fill my church, how gracious that would be!

But I was startled and I stopped to think that I was weeping all alone and for myself. I found I'd never lost the grave clothes, and the napkin did not tightly bind my lips; that no word to lift the lost had ever issued from my heart. I found that I was DEAD.

It was not my church, it was I. How do you feel about it?

Missionary Society Organized.

Mrs. T. E. White, secretary of the second district Atlanta association, B. W. M. U., presided over a most enthusiastic meeting Wednesday afternoon at the Sharon Baptist church, when a group of women from the Gordon Street Baptist church, led by their president, Mrs. Thompson, had organized an interdenominational society at Sharon.

Mrs. J. W. Smith, secretary of the third district, was present and spoke to the women, as did also Mrs. W. Lee Cutts, of the Capitol View church. Twenty women of Sharon were present and entered heartily into the organization. Their new pastor, Rev. Aycock, an earnest, consecrated man of God.

The following were elected officers: Mrs. A. Peyton, president; Mrs. R. S. Adams, vice president; Mrs. Charles McGee, secretary, and Mrs. Phillip Langly, treasurer. The society will meet each Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Baptist Orphans' Home at Hapeville.

Having accepted an invitation to have supper with the big family of the Georgia Baptist Orphans' Home one evening last week, a very enjoyable evening was spent.

The children are so bright, healthy, happy and well-behaved; that it was like one big family instead of a group of representatives from many families. At the illustrated bird lecture given by one of the visitors immediately after supper, splendid attention was given by even the smallest child and intelligent questions asked by them. The singing by the girls of the home which followed the lecture was remarkable, girls of ages not exceeding 14 singing the various parts, some with rather high voices and others with genuine contralto voices, all sweet and perfectly blended.

The thing that struck the attention of the visitors was and commented on was the many memorials that make the home so efficient in its training and welfare, developing the child. The work must be done by the members of this great denomination for so many to give large sums in memory of loved ones to a cause that is permanent as the building of Christian character in the youth of the land, and in doing this, building the America of tomorrow.

Blue Birds Will Stage Baby Show.

Unusual interest centers in the announcement made by Mrs. J. B. Carter, director of the Blue Birds, of the Civic club of West End, that her department would sponsor a baby show at the club rooms on Friday afternoon, June 4, from 3 to 5 o'clock.

The show will be divided into three groups, from one to three years; one to two years, and two to four years. An attractive feature will be the prizes awarded the most perfect baby in each group. Plans are being made to secure the services of a doctor and one who will aid in determining the child who meets the physical requirements. Favors will be given in attendance. The 1927 meeting will be held at Blakely.

A program will be given and a small admission fee will be charged.

Mothers desiring to enter their babies may do so by paying an entrance fee of 25 cents. Mrs. J. R. Carter will be in charge. Mrs. M. Brandon, Mrs. J. Q. Hooper, Mrs. Arthur Hale and Mrs. C. H. Howard.

You don't have to doctor this Growing Mash.

Whatever happens to the price of ingredients, Pratts' Buttermilk Growing Mash is made always exactly after an iron-clad formula. Four sources of vegetable nourishment and strength—corn-meal, oatmeal, wheat bran and middlings. Four sources of animal protein—meat scrap, fish meal, bone meal and dried buttermilk.

And the quality and formula never varies! Never need you add anything to Pratts. It is a perfect, complete and balanced ration, promoting the quickest uniform growth of muscle, bone, feather.

Poultrymen are delighted to find a growing mash entirely free of charcoal, hulls, burlap strands and other harmful waste. Pratts is clean and every ounce feed.

Thousands have found that Pratts produces heavy, tender broilers and develops prolific layers for the high-priced fall egg season.

Merry Hill, N. C.
"I have been using Pratts' Buttermilk Baby Chick Food and Pratts' Buttermilk Growing Mash and can say with great confidence that I have never had to come up with a feed but that will weigh 2½ pounds each when 8 weeks old! I have used all kinds of feeds but that is the best I ever had any to do. Nothing can come up to Pratts for starting and keeping pullets growing." Very truly yours, J. W. KEETER."

Briefly Told

Baptist women are indebted to Mrs. A. T. McMahon, corresponding secretary-treasurer of the Georgia B. W. M. U. for the outstanding Houston convention notice which appeared on the Federated church page last Sunday and other interesting items today.

Mrs. H. M. Wharton, of Baltimore, Md., for some years recording secretary of south-wide B. W. M. U., returning home from the Houston convention, stopped at Baptist headquarters in Birmingham, Ala., and was also guest for a few days with Mrs. J. W. Wills in Atlanta.

Mrs. George Westmoreland, one of the Georgia B. W. M. U.'s vice presidents, attended the Houston convention and remained in Texas for a few weeks' visit to a daughter in Dallas.

Friends of Mrs. Henry Weston Munger, former Miss Anna Lee Patrick, corresponding secretary of Georgia B. W. M. U., have been delighted during the past week to receive from her and her husband a pictorial number of the "Pearl of the Orient," published in Iloilo, Philippines, where Mr. and Mrs. Munger are now missionaries. The magazine contains an interesting moving picture of Mr. and Mrs. Munger pursuing their daily round of duty.

Mrs. J. F. Thompson and her daughter, Thelma, from the First Baptist church, Decatur, Ga., served as delegates to the Baptist B. W. M. U. in the south, convention which met at Houston. They have returned home after a visit to Galveston, Waco and other points of interest in Texas.

The members of the Woman's Missionary society of the Warrenton Methodist church were entertained at the home of Mrs. Parker Johnson at an evening meeting when the book, "New Day in Latin America," was presented. The meeting was held out of doors and thoroughly enjoyed.

The American district of the South Missionary society of the M. E. Church, South, held its annual meeting at Ellaville with a very inspirational and educational program presided over by Mrs. Lucius L. Lamm, the secretary. One hundred and fifty delegates were in attendance. The 1927 meeting will be held at Blakely.

Atlanta friends of the Scarritt college, Nashville, Tenn., have received invitations to the commencement being held this week-end. On the morning of June 1 a large group of young women will graduate from this training school for Christian workers, of the U. S. Girls' Club, and go well prepared for the chosen lines of work in home and foreign missions. Dr. Andrew Sled, of Atlanta, will preside at the baccalaureate sermon at 11 o'clock in the West End church.

Mrs. Wilbur Moore Jones, newly elected superintendent of the Baptist Woman's Missionary Union of the Atlanta association, will be born May 20, by birth and a Georgian by adoption. Mrs. Jones is the wife of Professor Wilbur Moore Jones, Th.D., of the department of religious education of Piedmont college, and the sister of Dr. Wallace Bassett, off Dallas, Texas, who is to be the Southern District superintendent of the First Baptist convention, which met at its next meeting in Louisville, Ky.

Mrs. Jones for two years has been the efficient and much-loved secretary of the first district of the Atlanta Baptist Women's Missionary union, and for several years has been the treasurer of the district. She is one of the largest classes of young women in the Atlanta Sunday school.

Before coming to Atlanta, she was active in U. D. C. work as state historian of the Mississippi division, and torian of the Mississippi division, and is the author of "Historic Beauvoir," a life of Jefferson Davis, the last 10 years of his life.

Mrs. Jones is a woman of charming personality and is a delightful speaker. Her executive ability is marked and as a parliamentarian she has few equals.

Educated in the schools of her native state and subsequently in the Chinese School of Music and Expression, she comes to the superintendence of the Woman's Missionary union of the Atlanta association well equipped for her new duties and her unanimous selection voices the high esteem in which she is held.

CALENDAR OF MEETINGS

METHODIST.

The city mission board will meet Tuesday morning at 10:30 o'clock in Wesley Memorial church. Decision will be made concerning new community work.

The Woman's Missionary society of the Oakland City church will hold a social meeting at 3:30 o'clock Monday in the church. Stereopticon views of Scarritt college and a talk by Deaconess Bessie Allen will feature the program.

BAPTIST.

The Woman's Missionary society of the Capitol Avenue Baptist church will hold its regular fifth Monday social tomorrow at the church. All are urged to come.

CHRISTIAN.

The monthly missionary meeting of the Woman's council of the First Christian church will be held at the church Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Mrs. J. W. Ferguson's circle will be in charge of the program. Please notice the change in the time of meeting.

Methodist Women Attend Meeting.

Only within the last eight years have women had the privilege of being in the annual district meetings of the ministers and laymen of the Methodist church.

In the meeting of the South Atlanta district held Tuesday and Wednesday of this week, however, women took a prominent part. Mrs. W. A. White and Mrs. M. C. Wiggins were named on the committee on Sunday schools and the women's work; Mrs. J. C. White and Mrs. Bertie Moore were on the missions committee, and Miss Grace Hendrix on the temperance committee.

Mrs. J. C. White, secretary of women's work in this district, was one of the speakers of the second day program.

In the pastor's reports, special attention was called to the work of the Woman's Missionary society, there being only one pastor in the entire district who has no missionary society in his charge and he stated that an organization is contemplated. Capitol View and Hapeville have made 100 per cent increase in membership in the woman's society this year. The women of the First Baptist church have undertaken the visiting of the entire church membership to assist the pastor, and already 100 visits have been made by them.

Those who had the honor of being elected to represent their church in this meeting were: Mrs. J. F. Sheld, Mrs. L. L. Johnson, Mrs. C. A. Adersholt, Mrs. C. D. Borthner, Mrs. James Hickerson, Mrs. W. M. Morris, Mrs. F. H. Jackson, Mrs. O. Sharpless, Mrs. J. H. Mays, Mrs. J. C. McMugh, Mrs. Wallace Rogers, Mrs. W. L. Ballenger, Mrs. H. T. Butler, Mrs. W. O. Petty, Mrs. J. Brinsford, Mrs. D. A. Shultz, Mrs. W. D. DeBardeleben, Mrs. S. C. Forester, Mrs. T. B. McKelroy, Mrs. Raymond Thompson, Mrs. R. S. Gordin, Mrs. C. H. Sims, Mrs. Bert L. Jones, Mrs. J. C. Shannon, Mrs. L. Apperson, Mrs. R. D. Crowe, Mrs. Birdie Moore, Mrs. A. T. Tisler, Mrs. C. C. Morris, Mrs. Susie Garrett, Mrs. D. M. Thrall, Mrs. W. D. Morgan, Mrs. Harry A. Brown, Mrs. W. C. McDonald, Mrs. McIntosh Burns, Mrs. W. C. Satterwhite, Mrs. M. L. Minor, Mrs. Rowland Bryce, Mrs. W. A. White, Mrs. Mary E. Riley, Mrs. T. H. Adams, Mrs. N. E. Johnson.

There were probably the largest number of men ever elected to a meeting of this kind. Of these, 8 are presidents of the missionary society; 4 are vice presidents; 13 hold other offices in the missionary society; 3 are circle chairmen; 3 are members of the board of stewards, and a large number are teachers in Sunday schools.

Miss Bertha Tucker To Head New Methodist Work in Cuba

The Woman's Missionary council at its recent session recommended a sum of $3,500 for opening a social and evangelistic center in the Quinta Toscana property at Matanzas, Cuba, in 1927, and the board of missions has made the appropriation. This is a new departure in the work in Cuba, as heretofore three boarding schools have been the only institutions of the kind. The council has also decided to open a school for local girls in the community.

The Quinta Toscana property is very beautiful, situated on a high hill overlooking the sea. It was given by a Cuban woman to the Irene Toland school. It came into the hands of the M. E. church, south, in 1915. It has been used as an annex and playground for the Irene Toland school during that time.

Nowhere is Vashiki more appreciated than in the Thomasville district. The beautiful buildings, the well-kept grounds are an asset to the community, while the happy home life and advantages of the institution are a blessing to many lives. A meaning given by the girls carried the beauty of the cross of Christ in a beautiful way.

Mr. Lowe has just left for Hong Kong. Mr. and Mrs. Bausum are going in about a week and we may go on. We can't imagine our return to the Orient, but we may go to the Orient again.

Mrs. E. K. Large Elected President of Highland P.-T. A.

Mrs. E. K. Large was elected president of Highland P.-T. A. at the annual election of officers held at the school on Wednesday afternoon. Mrs. Large has been the popular and efficient president of the school the past year and her election to the presidency bespeaks a year of continued activity and progress for the association.

Other officers elected were: First vice president, Mrs. E. D. Crawford; second vice president, Mrs. E. L. Hephington; recording secretary, Mrs. L. K. Washington; treasurer, Mrs. Clyde Wood; corresponding secretary, Mrs. D. C. Moncrief. The nominating committee was composed of Mrs. R. G. Stephens, Mrs. C. A. Alexander, Mrs. W. K. Wyant, Miss Gertrude Corrigan, Mrs. A. N. Anderson, and Mrs. L. J. Kaeling.

Mrs. Crawford gave an outline of the program planned by Mr. Sutton for the expenditure of the money from the bond issue, which is allocated to the schools. In this program it is expected that the Highland school shall receive an annex consisting of ten standard class rooms.

Resolution Adopted.

The outstanding feature of the resolution recently adopted by the William A. Bass P.-T. A., urging the Atlanta newspapers, the Atlanta P.-T. A. council, all civic clubs, individual parent-teacher associations and all interested authorities to use their influence to have those who would hold the $2,000,000 million dollar bond issue into the courts, to withdraw their suit and allow Atlanta to grow.

Short comprehensive reports were heard from the chairmen of various committees. Those making reports were: Better films, Mrs. Mrs. Ned Adair; citizenship, Mrs. A. N. Anderson; health, Mrs. D. C. Gifford; hospital; Mrs. E. D. Gifford; pre-school, Mrs. P. C. Fable; house, Mrs. E. D. Knight; house, Miss W. K. Wyant; membership, Mrs. C. A. Alexander; teacher's lunches, Mrs. B. K. Mobley; social, Mrs. Delvyn King.

Mrs. Crawford gave an outline of the program planned by Mr. Sutton for the expenditure of the money from the bond issue, which is allocated to the schools. In this program it is expected that the Highland school shall receive an annex consisting of ten standard class rooms.

Miss Corrigan's Request.

Miss Corrigan spoke to the association asking the mothers to continue the program of regular habits for the children during the summer.

This has been a year of constructive work for the association under the capable leadership of Mrs. Crawford, who has proven a most efficient president.

Kirkwood Pre-School Circle Reports.

The Kirkwood Pre-School circle met Tuesday at the school auditorium. Reports from the group chairmen were given, which showed much work accomplished. Mrs. V. V. Newland, Mrs. W. M. Foster, Mrs. L. G. Glenn Detherby, Mrs. C. P. Clements, Mrs. W. D. Langley and Mrs. Charles Sockwell, group chairmen.

After the business Dr. W. N. Adair gave a helpful and instructive talk on "Keeping the Pre-School Child Physically Fit."

Winnona P.-T. A. Holds Meeting.

Winnona Park P.-T. A. held an interesting meeting in May, the president, Mrs. Henry Earthman, presiding.

Mrs. Agnes Adams played a piano solo, accompanied by Mrs. J. G. Addy. The president read her report for the year, thanking all for the splendid help and cooperation given her. Mrs. Edwin Davis, treasurer, read her year's report.

At this meeting the officers for the new year were elected: Mrs. Cleo Ziegler, president; Mrs. Charles McKinney, vice president; Mrs. Davis Hightower, secretary, and Mrs. Catharine Smith, treasurer. Mrs. P. H. Jeter, newly-elected state president, outlined the aims and work of the state organization. The teacher luncheon was served at the school by Mrs. Millege and Mrs. Honiker. The third grade again won the count of the mothers.

Bass P.-T. A. To Entertain.

The Parent-Teacher association of Bass Junior High school will entertain the ninth grade of the school at a luncheon to be given out in the open of the school yard on Wednesday, June 2, at 12:30 o'clock. The luncheon will be arranged by the executive board and several attractive features have been planned.

Mrs. Z. V. Peterson Gordon P.-T. A. Head For Seventh Term

The May meeting of the John B. Gordon P.-T. A., which was held in the school auditorium May 23, featured the election of officers for the ensuing term. By unanimous vote Mrs. Z. V. Peterson was re-elected president for the seventh term. Other officers elected were first vice president, Mrs. George Waggoner; second vice president, Miss Belle Woodfin; secretary, Mrs. J. L. Veal; treasurer, Miss Mary Barker. Under the efficient leadership of these officers another great year is in store for Gordon school.

Mrs. Barker, the treasurer, reported that the association had bought glasses and paid for two optical operations for one child.

Mrs. Peterson announced the meeting of the pre-school group to be held at the school on Wednesday, June 2, and urged the mothers to cooperate in the summer round-up work in order that the children registered in the school may come with one hundred per cent perfect health. Of the thirty-six now registered, only eleven are normal. The president reported that the walls in all the rooms have been repainted.

Mrs. J. L. Veal gave a most interesting report of the state convention. Mrs. Peterson, in her report of the annual convention, spoke of the wonderful advancement of the P.-T. A. convention and given Atlanta and of the deep impression made on the visiting delegates by the wonderful spiritual harmony between the superintendent and teachers and parents. She also called attention to the school building program, and the great need for new buildings at Orme, Atlanta and Piedmont schools, and to the recommendation of Superintendent Sutton that faith school be turned into a junior high school.

Mrs. Charles Gaddis asked that the association save octagon soap wrappers through the summer for the school. It was announced that a paper sale would be held at the beginning of school in September. The principal announced that open house would be held at the school on Wednesday, and urged all mothers to visit the classrooms. After a count of the mothers, the attendance prize was given to low fifth, Mrs. McDonald's grade. The guest prize was won by Mrs. Charles Burke. A vote of thanks was given Mrs. J. G. Turner for her kindness in preparing the delicious punch served at this meeting.

Peeples Street P.-T. A. Elects Officers.

At the regular meeting of the Peeples Street Parent-Teachers' association, held during the past week, the following officers were elected: Mrs. C. Q. Hopper, president; Mrs. M. B. Brandon, second vice president; Mrs. A. L. Smith, third vice president; Mrs. L. Hollingsworth, secretary; Mrs. T. K. Moore, treasurer; Mrs. Tom Foster, corresponding secretary.

Mrs. C. Q. Hopper, representative of the association, presented Miss Ruby Jones, principal, of the school with a beautiful bar pin in behalf of the association.

Miss Lucile Price delighted the audience with several vocal numbers, with Mrs. Martin at the piano. Miss Hamilton and Mrs. Marshman were fortunate enough to have their classes win the attendance prizes.

It was announced that the executive board would give a banquet honoring the graduating class next Tuesday evening.

St. Paul's Missionary Society Has Meeting.

The regular fourth Monday meeting of the missionary society of St. Paul church was held at the church Monday afternoon. Mrs. J. W. Bracewell, corresponding secretary, in charge.

The meeting was opened by singing "Rescue the Perishing" followed with prayer by Mrs. J. J. McHugh. Miss Florence Smith sang beautifully, "Give of Your Best to the Master."

Mrs. J. E. Hogan, of the Drule Hills Methodist church, was introduced as speaker of the evening, her topic being "Christian Stewardship," which she presented in a very impressive manner. The meeting was closed with a prayer and praise service led by Mrs. Ben Huiet, chairman of the prayer committee.

Birthday Party For Mrs. High.

The Georgia Society Daughters of the American Colonists will meet at the residence of Mrs. Charles A. Davis, regent, 1125 Peachtree road, on Thursday, June 3, at 3:30 o'clock. In addition to the business meeting there will be a birthday celebration of the society, complimenting Mrs. Joseph Madison, high organizing regent, as well as one of the founders of the national society D. A. C.

Sacred Heart Seniors Are Honor Guests.

The junior class of the Sacred Heart High school delightfully entertained the seniors Thursday with a luncheon at the Henry Grady hotel, followed by a matinee at the Metropolitan theater. The scheme of pink and silver was attractively carried out by the appropriate place cards and favors which were placed for the Rev. Father Horton, Mrs. Ruth Hawkins and Mrs. Howard Bosworth, who acted as chaperones.

The senior class included the Misses Alice Wagner, Leonie Deady, Ernestine Wright, Dorris Connally, Jeanette Fitzpatrick, Frances Mitchener, Anna Belle McLaughlin, Elizabeth Harris, Josephine Klauder, Mary Manly, Norma Harrison and Mary Magill.

The juniors present were the Misses Dorothy Bosworth, Elizabeth O'Donnell, Adah Stephens, Verna Durfied, Agnes Walsh, Jane Stewart, Sara Frances Chelena, Rose Mary Kuhlman, Caroline Huber, Lillian Abram, Melilla Butzon, Virginia Davis, Helen Smits, Gertrude Murray, Charlotte Gill, Margaret Gilmard, Margaret Shires, Mary Lou Krull, Mary Murphy, Virginia Grigg, Perry Redmond, Eleanor Young and Evelyn Fetscher.

T. E. L. Class Holds Meeting.

The T. E. L. class of the College Park Baptist church held its regular monthly business meeting at the home of Mrs. L. C. Laster Monday afternoon, May 24, and was called to order by the president, Mrs. C. G. Laster.

Business was transacted on the subject "Prayer," after which thirty minutes was given to prayer service.

A regret of the class was that it's teacher, Mrs. Perry Thompson, will not be with them for some time on account of ill health. Mrs. R. S. Ranson will fill her place.

Dixie Lodge, No. 810, To Have Dance.

Dixie Lodge, No. 810, L. A. to B. of R. T. will hold a dance at the Anley hotel roof garden Wednesday evening June 2, at 9 o'clock. The dancing element of the city are invited to attend. Music will be furnished by Jake Mathewson's Union orchestra.

Mrs. W. L. Champion To Honor Daughter
With Lawn Party

Mrs. W. L. Champion will entertain Tuesday afternoon, June 1, from 5 to 7 o'clock, at a lawn party in honor of the girls of the two seventh grades of North Avenue Presbyterian school, of which Jessie Champion, the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Champion, is a member. There will be various games enjoyed by the young people at individual tables on the spacious lawn.

Miss Marie Harilee Weds Mr. Van Huss.

Cordial interest is centered in the announcement of the marriage of Miss Marie Harilee and Ernest Stuart Van Huss, which took place Saturday, May 22, at the parsonage of the Grace Methodist Church, Dr. Beck officiating. There were no attendants and only the immediate relatives witnessed the event.

The bride wore a lovely costume of navy and tan georgette with accessories to match. Her flowers were a corsage bouquet of sunburst roses with valentines and silver effects.

Mr. Van Huss is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Harilee, of Cochran. She has for the past three years been a member of the East Point faculty, where she has made hosts of friends.

Mr. Van Huss is originally from Indianapolis, but has been connected with the R. C. Clark Veneer company, in Atlanta for some time.

Miss Lucy Bacon To Present Pupils.

Miss Lucy May Bacon presents a group of pupils in piano recital Monday at the home of Mrs. C. E. Holcombe, 85 Peachtree circle, Ansley Park.

Those taking part on the program are: Elizabeth Holcombe, Margaret Holcombe, Elinor Goddard, Sarah Smith, Vaughn Nixon, Josephine Meador, Strother Fleming, Jr., Beverly Bailey, Julian Beers, Leone Brooks, Anna Fuller, Elegie Alford, Grace Winehoff, Sydne Klein, Edward Klein, Lillian Klein, Clair Bullock, Doris Bowden, Dorothy Speers, Mary Adger King, Frances Hoyt, Julia Hoyt.

Not a Particle of Dandruff or a Falling Hair

"Danderine" will save your hair and double its beauty at once.

Within ten minutes after an application of Danderine you can not find a single trace of dandruff. One application dissolves every particle of dandruff; invigorates the scalp, stops itching and falling hair.

Furthermore Danderine is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them. Its exhilarating, stimulating and life-producing properties cause the hair to grow strong and beautiful.

Bobbed hair has made the girls aware of the dangerous effects of unsightly dandruff which is now more apparent than ever since the hair is short.

Danderine is a sure way to get rid of dandruff and immediately double the beauty of your hair. The effect is amazing—your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy, and have an appearance of a lamb's wool, an incomparable luxury, softness and luster.

Get a small bottle of Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter for a few cents and keep that dandruff out of your hair and off of your shoulders.—(adv.)

Jackson-McWhorter Wedding
Will Be Solemnized in June

Miss Willie Belle Jackson, beautiful daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Felix Jackson, who are residing in Philadelphia, Pa., at present, but formerly made their home in Gainesville, and are prominently known throughout Georgia. Her engagement is announced today to Fowline McWhorter, of Miami, Fla., a former resident of Atlanta.

Prominent social interest is attached to the announcement made today by Mr. and Mrs. Felix Jackson, of Gainesville, Ga., of the engagement of their daughter, Willie Belle, to Fowline McWhorter, of Miami, Fla., formerly of Atlanta.

Miss Jackson and Mr. McWhorter are among the most popular and beloved members of southern society, their families being influential and representative. The lovely bride-elect is a graduate of Agnes Scott college and has been a feted belle in Atlanta, where she has often visited.

Her parents, formerly residing in Gainesville, where they were prominently identified with the social and civic circles of that city. For the past few years they have resided in Philadelphia, where the charming bride-elect is a popular girl in Philadelphia's exclusive social set. Miss Jackson is the sister of Fowline Jackson of Gainesville, Milton Jackson of Norfolk, Va., and Ed Hughes Jackson, now a student at Princeton university.

For the past two years Mr. McWhorter has resided in Miami, where he is prominent in banking circles, and where he has identified himself with the social and business life of that city. Before going to Miami he was connected with the Citizens and Southern bank, of this city, being one of the most popular bankers of this country. During the world war he served as major overseas with the 321st machine gun battalion, 82nd division, receiving his training at the first officers' training camp held in Atlanta.

Mr. McWhorter attended the University of Georgia, where he took an active part in athletics and was a popular member of the Phi Delta Theta fraternity.

Mr. McWhorter is the son of Mrs. J. M. McWhorter and the late Mr. McWhorter, of Woodville, Ga., the McWhorter family in Georgia being among the south's pioneers. His mother was before her marriage, a Miss Stakeley, representative of a distinguished Georgia family.

Mr. McWhorter will be an interesting event of June 30, taking place at the home of the bride-elect in Gainesville.

Pre-Nuptial Parties To Be Given Miss Nancy Linthicum

Many parties will be given in honor of Miss Nancy Linthicum, whose marriage to Thomas Hull will take place June 7. On Monday, May 31, Mrs. John T. Hancock will entertain at a bridge-tea at 4 o'clock.

Miss Elizabeth Conway will entertain at a bridge-tea on Tuesday, June 1, at 4 o'clock.

Wednesday, June 2, Miss Kathryn Hills will give a luncheon at the Henry Grady hotel for Miss Linthicum. Mrs. B. L. Dobbs will give a bridge-tea at 3 o'clock, and Misses Marian and Louise Stokes will entertain for Miss Linthicum and Mr. Hull at a bridge party at 8:30 o'clock.

Miss Louise Linthicum will honor

Mrs. E. Rivers Elected President Of Oglethorpe Woman's Board

Mrs. E. Rivers was unanimously elected president of the Oglethorpe university woman's board at the annual spring meeting Saturday, held in the new Lupton hall auditorium of the university. Other officers elected at this meeting were: Mrs. Charles Conklin, first vice president; Mrs. Frank Inman, second vice president; Mrs. Henry Porter, third vice president; Mrs. W. A. Speer, fourth vice president; Mrs. Graham Johnson, fifth vice president; Mrs. Fred Stewart, corresponding secretary; Mrs. F. Carlisle, recording secretary; and Mrs. F. Ullmer, treasurer.

Mrs. Connerat's Administration.

Mrs. Rivers succeeds Mrs. Katherine Connerat, who has served the organization as president for the past four years, having been reelected to this office in the spring of 1923.

During Mrs. Connerat's long service the woman's board of Oglethorpe university has reached a height, leading all organizations of its kind in the United States today. The present membership numbers 500 women.

The board was incorporated under the laws of Georgia, and endowed with a fund of $25,000 was pledged to the university, more than half of this amount having already been paid.

The active committees, such as the grounds, entertainment, hospital, music and library, have all reached proportions nearly par with the women's board, having been almost financed and cared for by the woman's board. Large sums of money have been raised each year by Mrs. Connerat for the care of these grounds; for help in the hospital; for buying new instruments for the orchestra; new books for the library; for many elaborate social functions for the boys.

Other activities connected with the woman's board was the presentation by Mrs. J. M. High, one of the vice presidents, during the leadership of Mrs. Connerat, of very extensive and rare portraits in the art department.

Honor's Board.

The woman's board of this great Presbyterian university was founded November 25, 1916, at the home of Mrs. Thornwell Jacobs, with 50 ladies present. Mrs. Jacobs being the wife of Dr. Jacobs, former president of the university. The object of the board is to promote the cause of southern education, with a view to raising the standards of education in the south, and especially to promote the highest phase of educational work in connection with Oglethorpe university.

The organization is entirely different from any other organization ever founded in the history of the south

Miss Irene Colwell

"THE THIN GRAY LINE" OF THE CONFEDERACY gaze once more on the likeness of their beloved leaders in the studio of Augustus Lukeman at Stone Mountain. Several hundred veterans of the sixties and their spouses arrived on special trains from the U. C. V. reunion in Birmingham to inspect the memorial to the "lost cause" carved in the living rock of Stone Mountain. (Kenneth Rogers)

THERE'S EGYPT IN HER EYES When you finally take note of them. However, she is 100 per cent American — Miss Barbara Rummig, the charm of whose dancing has brought Paris to her feet. (Herbert)

OH, GRANDMA! WHAT A GORGEOUS MARCEL YOU HAVE!—That's a 1926 version of Red Riding Hood's comment on her grandmama's appearance. Here you see Mrs. Margaret Mitchell, nearly 100 years old, who has had her hair bobbed and now takes a chance on a "permanent." What will the old folks be doing next? (International)

HOW'D YOU LIKE TO HAVE HIS JOB?—Pete, the alligator man on a Los Angeles gator farm, is shown giving one of his little pets a thorough physical examination. (International)

CLOSEST OF "FRIENDS"—They are Mr. and Mrs. William Robert Tyson, of Pennsylvania, recently wedded by the ceremony of the Society of Friends, or Quakers, with no minister officiating. After the couple had married themselves, 150 guests signed the marriage certificate, and they will take charge of a "monster" apple orchard given them as a wedding gift by the groom's father. (International)

ANOTHER LONG-HAIRED BEAUTY TRIUMPHS Miss Catherine Moyland, who was "Miss Dallas," won first prize and queenly title at the recent Galveston bathing girl revue. (International)

"MONA LISA"—Another of the famous paintings, selected among the 52 world's greatest. It was painted by Leonardo De Vinci and hangs in the Louvre Paris. See story in today's magazine section of The Constitution.

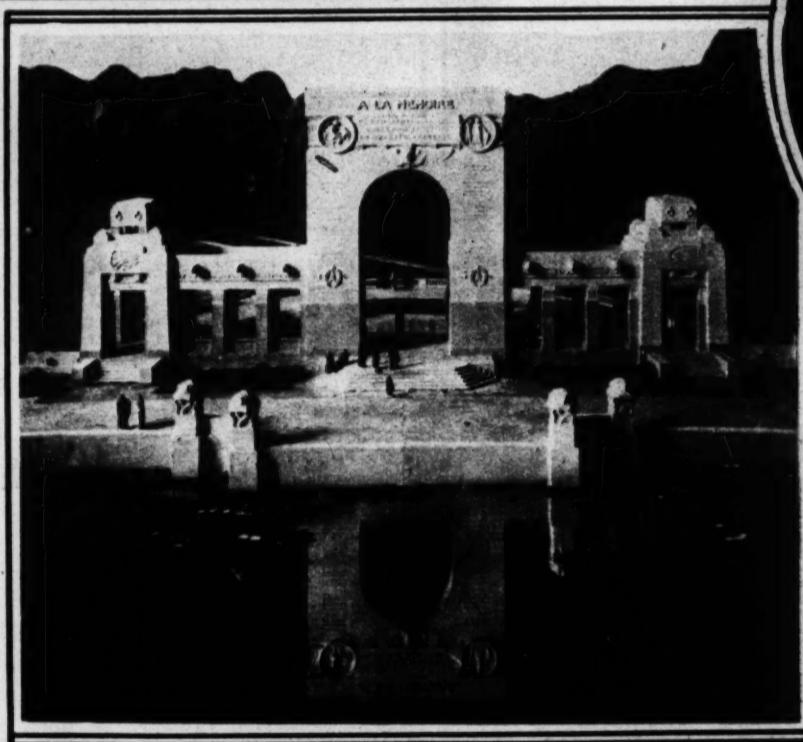

LAST HONORS PAID PRINCE VICTOR NAPOLEON—Uncrowned emperor of France. (International)

← DEMON FOR TEAM-WORK—Washington's baseball "boy manager", Bucky Harris, is reported engaged to Miss Elizabeth Sutherland, daughter of the alien property custodian and capitol debutante. (International)

→ FAMOUS LADY GOES INTO MOURNING—Daring world war veterans, members of the society favoring return of light wines and beer, recently draped the Statue of Liberty in New York harbor with black crepe. Quite an effective protest, eh buddy? but we've seen no wine or beer yet. (International)

IT DIDN'T WORK—Basil Jones, of London, originated this big kite with the idea of giving the world something new in aerial joy-riding. In a test, it broke loose and ended on the roof of a house, a complete wreck. Yes, ma'am, the portly gentleman on the left is the ballast.

FRANCE TO HONOR DEAD OF LAFAYETTE ESCADRILLE—This imposing monument to the 65 fallen aviators of the famous world war fighting unit, is in course of erection on the outskirts of Paris. One of the 65 aces who lost their lives was Kiffin Rockwell, former Atlanta boy, who rendered distinguished service to the French air forces. His brother, Paul Rockwell, former member of the editorial staff of The Constitution, is general secretary of the board of directors of the memorial, one of the most imposing on the soil of historic France.

A LOVIN' COUPLE—The Great Indian Hornbill of the London zoo—called "Hornby" for short—thinks his keeper is "the berries." (Herbert Photos, Inc.)

WED AT GRADUATION—Mrs. Louis Schulz, formerly Miss Bertha Barbier, who was married in Atlanta Theological Seminary chapel immediately after the graduation of her husband. They will live in Hartford, Pa., where the Rev. Schulz has accepted a pastorate. (Kenneth Rogers)

PINCHED, B'GOSH—Beryl Hally, Broadway stage girl, who recently was arrested at the Broadhurst theater charged with wearing insufficient clothing. Yes, this is a different and considerably more elaborate costume. (International)

AGIN' K. K. K., DROUTH AND "MA"—Mrs. K. M. Johnson, of San Antonio, Texas, announced candidate for "Lone Star State" governor. She is opposed to the Ku Klux, prohibition and "Ma" Ferguson, incumbent. (Herbert)

WHAT THE WELL-DRESSED YOUNG MAN WILL WEAR—Beg pardon, the caption-writer got his pictures mixed. This, gentle reader, is none other than Mr. Andrew Eorio, hailed by the New York Building Congress as "king of hod-carriers." However, if it's just the same to you, we'll stick to our faith that "kind hearts are more than coronets." (International)

ATOP THE EAGLE HIMSELF—While man busied himself in conquering the air and exploring the ice-bound regions about the pole, a French sculptor exhibited this interpretation of humanity's latest achievements at the 1926 salon of French art in Paris. (International)

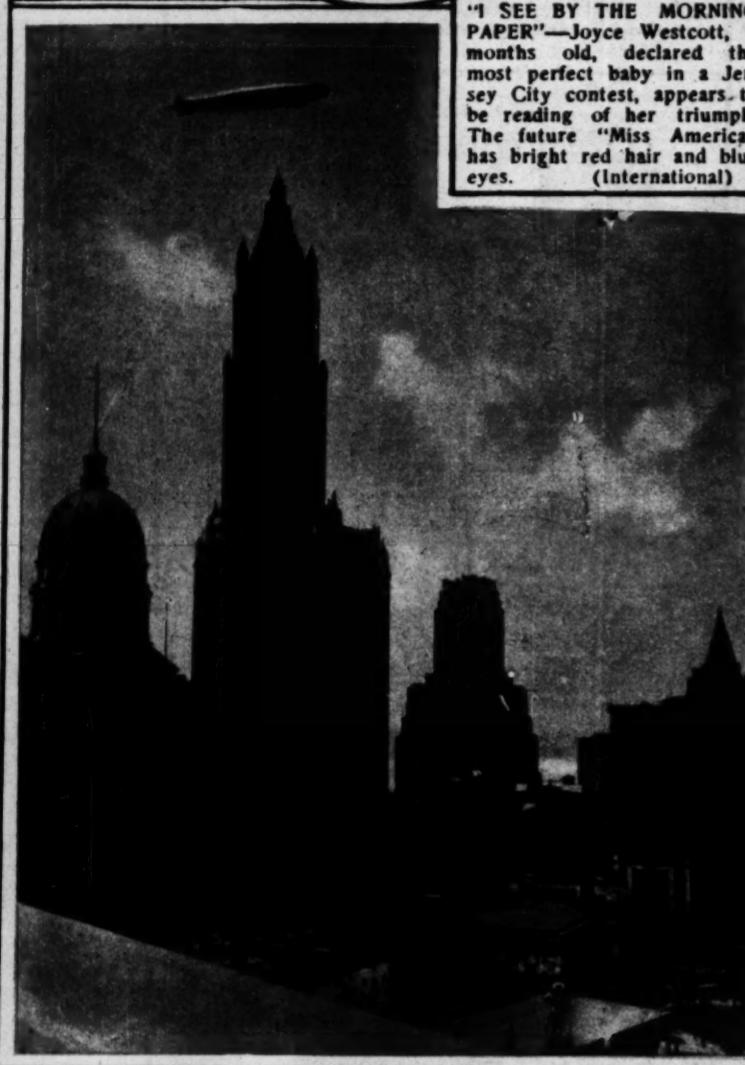

DONS GLAD RAGS OF WAR AGAIN—Princess Victoria Louise, Duchess of Cumberland and only daughter of the former kaiser, emerged from obscurity recently when she appeared at a reunion of the once-famous but now disbanded regiment of Death Head Hussars. In its heyday, she was its honorary colonel. (Herbert)

WHEN YOU ARE READY YOU MAY OPEN FIRE—The sportsman may take his shots unhurried when he is behind "Mike Mulligan," Trammell Scott's "$5,000 dog." "Mike" chose this ideal scenic setting to pose for the cameraman. (Kenneth Rogers)

'I SEE BY THE MORNING PAPER'—Joyce Westcott, 9 months old, declared the most perfect baby in a Jersey City contest, appears to be reading of her triumph. The future "Miss America" has bright red hair and blue eyes. (International)

FUTURE GAME TRAIL CHAMPS—Can't you hear the flutter of wings and smell gunpowder as you gaze on this litter of blooded bird dogs owned by T. J. Calloway, of Millread, Ga.? Their mother is "Bet," aristocrat of the open fields, and their sire is Trammell Scott's "Bully Kid." (Kenneth Rogers)

FLIRTING WITH THE STARS AGAIN—They are the survivors of the crew of the ill-fated dirigible, Shenandoah, who now are members of the Los Angeles' crew. Seemingly, you can't keep good men down. (International)

PRESIDENT GREETED CORN-GROWING CHAMP—William Boland, 17-year-old South Carolina boy with the cup awarded him as corn-growing champion of eight southern states, is shown with President Coolidge in Washington, occupying a modest place in a group of congressmen and chamber of commerce officials. Until he won his honors, William never realized what a prominent part his congressman and the chamber of commerce had played in his young life. (International)

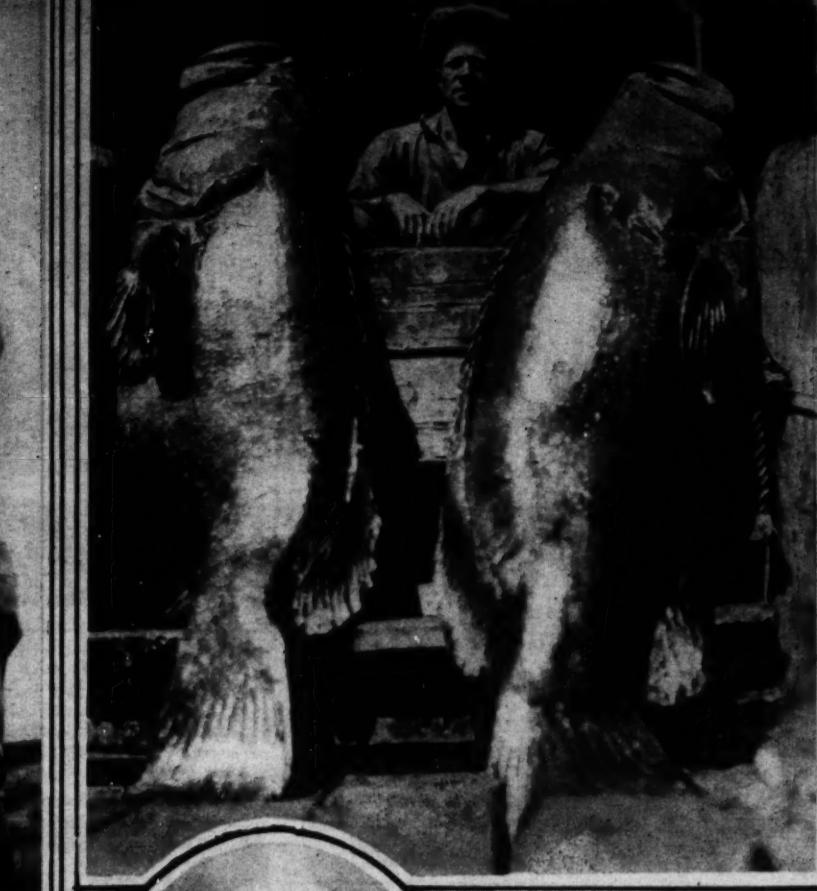

PEACH SENDS LEMONS TO FIRST LADY—Claire Windsor, movie actress, delivers a crate of California lemons to the air mail man to be sent to Mrs. Coolidge in Washington. The idea is that the lemons may help Mrs. Coolidge shake off a cold, but we strongly suspect another California press agent stunt. (Kadel & Herbert)

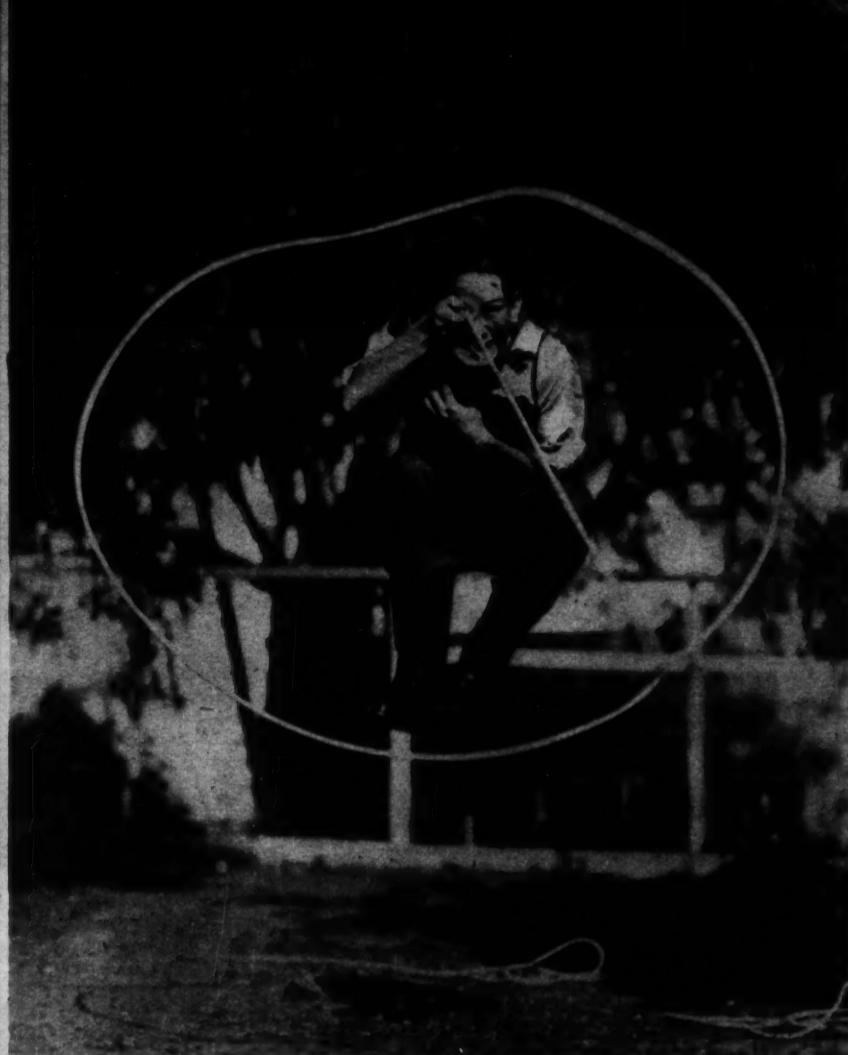

JUNIOR AND SENIOR CHARLESTON CHAMPS—Little May Sunshine, age four, of Paris, and Mile. Rummigo are titleholders in the French city. They are here shown "strutting their stuff." (Herbert)

LOTS OF CONFIDENCE REQUIRED TO DO THIS—How would you like to be the bottom part of this human frame for a mounted hurdler. A soldier-rider at Fort Hamilton, N. Y., does this stunt in practice for a horse show. (International)

PITY THE POOR FISH—These giant June fish—one weighing 500 pounds and the other 600—were caught off the Texas coast. (International)

HE'S A JUVENILE WILL ROGERS—Donald Cummings, doing the fancy rope work, is a 16-year-old Los Angeles school boy, adjudged the southwest's champion rope artist. (International)

ANYBODY CAN DO THIS—With a little practice and the right kind of physical training, according to Dr. Chester Levere, 57-year-old Chicago physician, called America's "iron man." The doctor keeps himself fit by working out daily in his gym. (International)

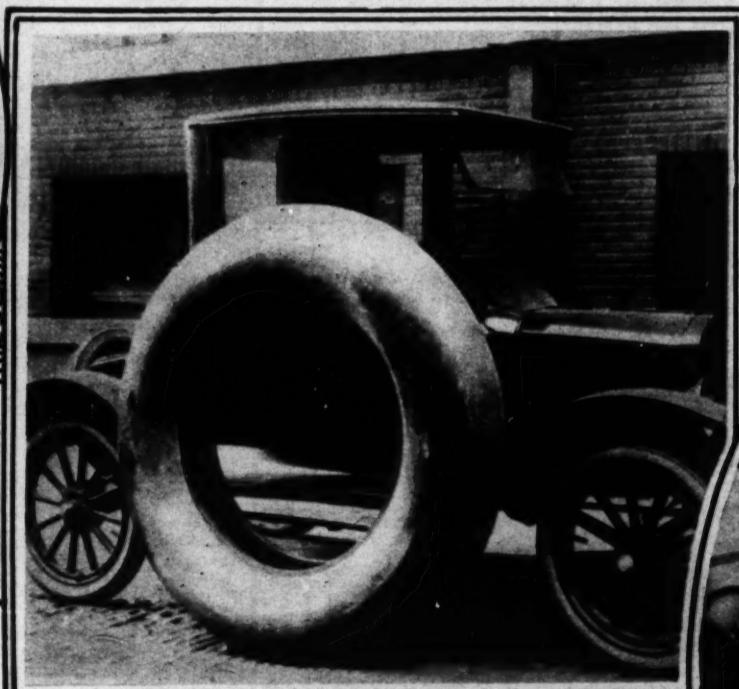

IN THE NAME OF ART—Mrs. Charlotte Pleshette, just returned from Europe, wears a steel beaded bag, the design of which was copied from a "Rueil window" in France. It's the world's largest bag. (International)

THRILLS OF SEA RESCUE—Were experienced by these survivors of the ill-fated steamer "Seneca," which sank off the Florida coast. They are shown in the Pennsylvania station in New York. (International)

TWENTY-THREE MILLION FOR SWEET CHARITY—S. S. Kresge, chain store owner, who has announced a gift of $23,000,000 to the Kresge charity foundation which he established in 1924. (International)

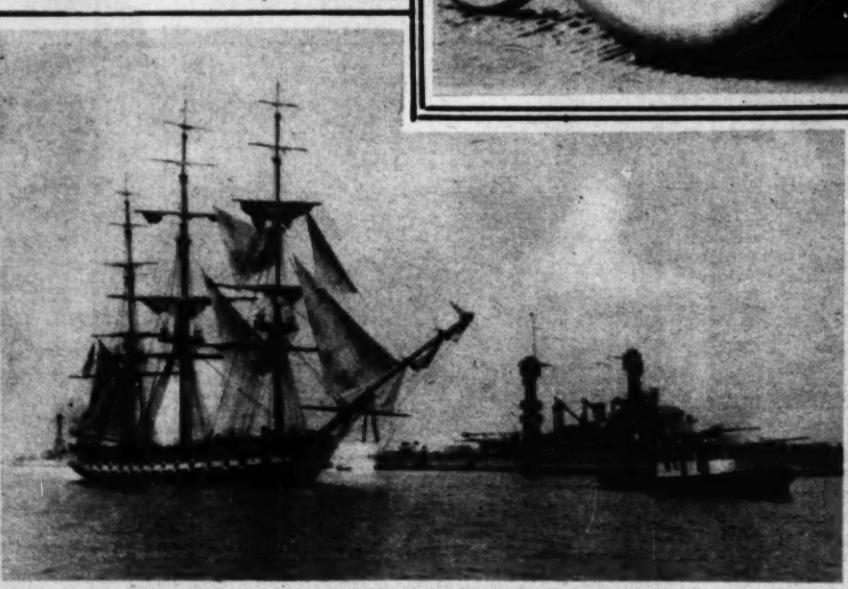

TEETHING RING FOR A GIANT'S BABY—It's the world's largest, pneumatic tire, and you get an idea of its size by comparison with a flivver. It was made for use on big army air mail planes. (International)

PROGRESSIVE FARMERS AND FARMERETTES—Members of the graduating class of the Tenth District A. & M. school at Granite Hill

OCTOGENARIAN GLOBE-TROTTER—Miss Celeste Miller, 80, was snapped as she completed her thirty-first trip around the world. (Herbert)

SWEET GIRL, GRADUATE—Miss Mary Alice Holbrook, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Holbrook, of Royston, who graduated from Royston High school with highest honors.

HOW'S YOUR RABBITS!—This particular bunny doesn't come under the head of the new slang expression. He's a grown male chinchilla, valued at $25,000. He is the sire of a rapidly-multiplying chinchilla stock on a breeding farm in California. His fur is an inch and a half thick, and his skin will measure about fifteen inches square. (Herbert)

NEW HONOR FOR COOLIDGE—The president and Governor Harry F. Byrd—brother of the polar flier—are shown at William and Mary college, Williamsburg, Va., after the degree of doctor of laws had been conferred on the former.

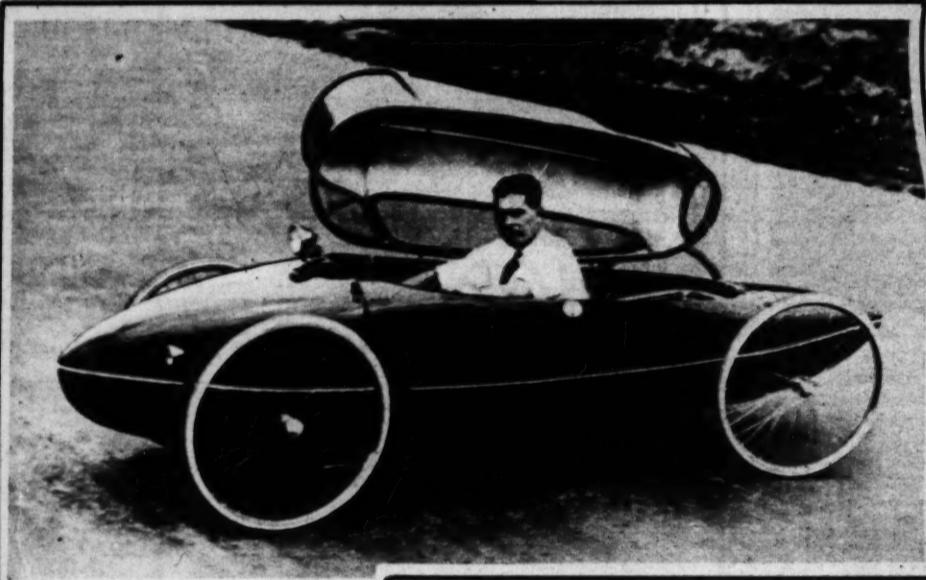

URBAN STRONGHOLD OF NATURE is the sunken garden at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Haden on Peachtree street at Peachtree circle. Dogwood, wisteria, crabapple and other beautiful flowering trees flourish in this shady spot, and a lily pond, fountain and pagoda lend charm to the handsome old southern home in the background.

"SPRECHEN SIE DEUTCH?"—So well did Bertha Peterson, Hunter college student, deliver a recitation in German that she was awarded the Herman Ridder prize. She will tour Europe and later teach German. (International)

HE GETS THE RIGHT-OF-WAY—Few chauffeurs care to dispute with this leopard, who takes regular motor rides with Olga Celeste, animal trainer at the Los Angeles zoo. (International)

QUEEN OF THE COLLEENS—She's the fairest of Ireland's far-famed beauties, so they admit in the land of shamrocks and superlatives. She is Leigh White, descendant of the Earl of Bantry, and a popular figure in British social circles. (Kadel & Herbert)

A MODERN OMAR KHAYYAM—For compiling a volume of his verses singing the praises of the wines of sunny France, Raoul Ponchon has been awarded the Wines of France Literary prize of 10,000 francs. (Herbert)

"THANKEE, SIRE; THANKEE KINDLY"—That's what this ancient individual murmured coyly when the king of England presented him with three pounds on his 125th birthday. His name is William Smith, and doubtless he feels amply rewarded for having lived a century and a quarter. (Kadel & Herbert)

The Sleeping Beauty slept, 'tis said, 'till wakened by a kiss. The Prince was somewhat daring, so thinks the modern miss. Today's Prince Charming shows finesse and more propriety—He confidently wins Her with NORRIS VARIETY—Posed by Miss Gray Poole, lovely daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. J. Poole with the NORRIS VARIETY BOX.

LATEST THING IN DAINTY NIGHTIES—Pajamas of printed pussy willow with black velvet border are quite the proper thing for the bride of the month of roses. (Herbert)

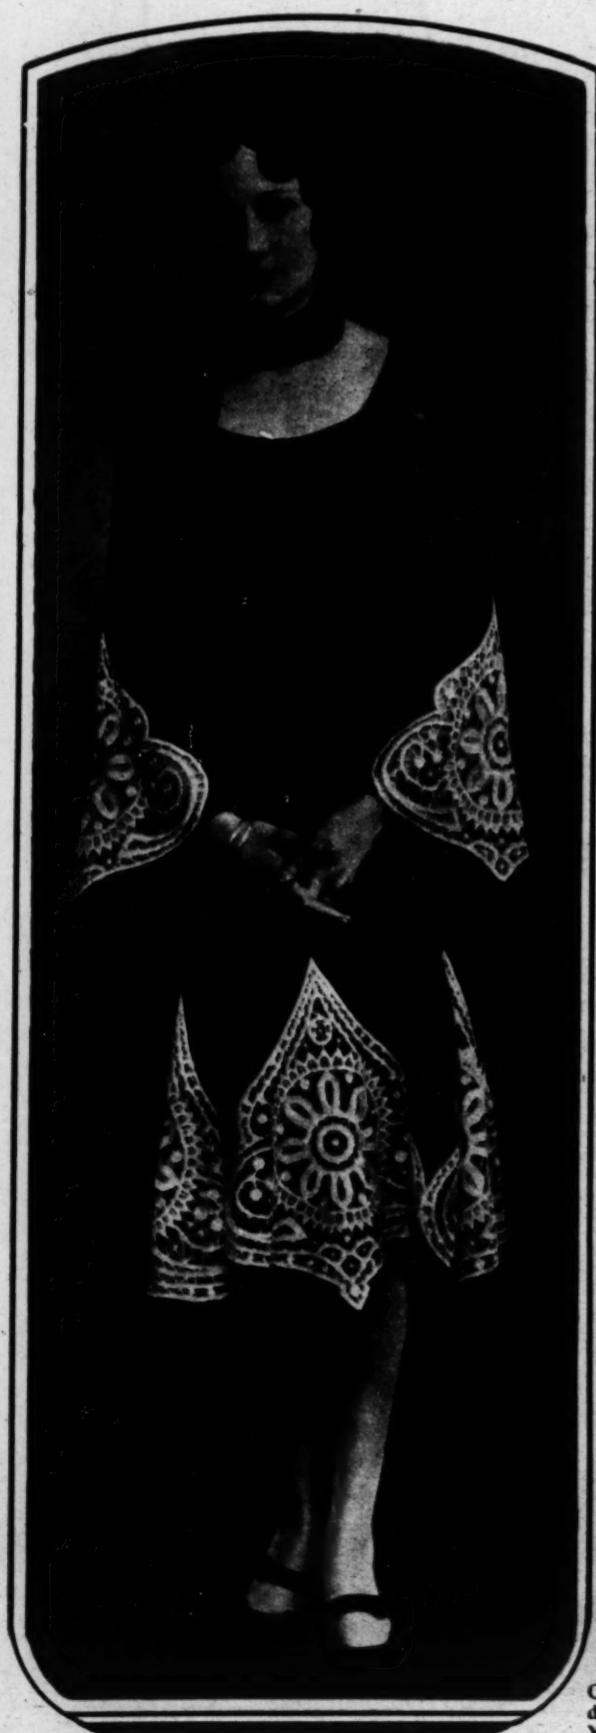

1926 BRIDAL COSTUME A L'AMERIQUE—The dress features the new short skirt, is sleeveless and embodies the new formal high neck. It is constructed of silver lace, garnished with pearls and rhinestones. The veil is of net, and forms a coronet above the pearl tiara. The train is full and flowing. Orange blossoms are conspicuous by their absence from the bouquet, made of carnations and sweet peas. Renee Adoree, film star, posed for this picture. (Berner)

THE BIG PICTURE HAT AGAIN—The sweeping brim that shadows the sweet face of the bride is back in style again. The ribbon streamer thrown carelessly across the shoulder also is an influence of former days. (Herbert)

CHIC SPORT OUTFIT—it consists of tan linen dress; plaid flannel coat, with mouton-trimmed collar; colorful wool stockings and "keds." (Herbert)

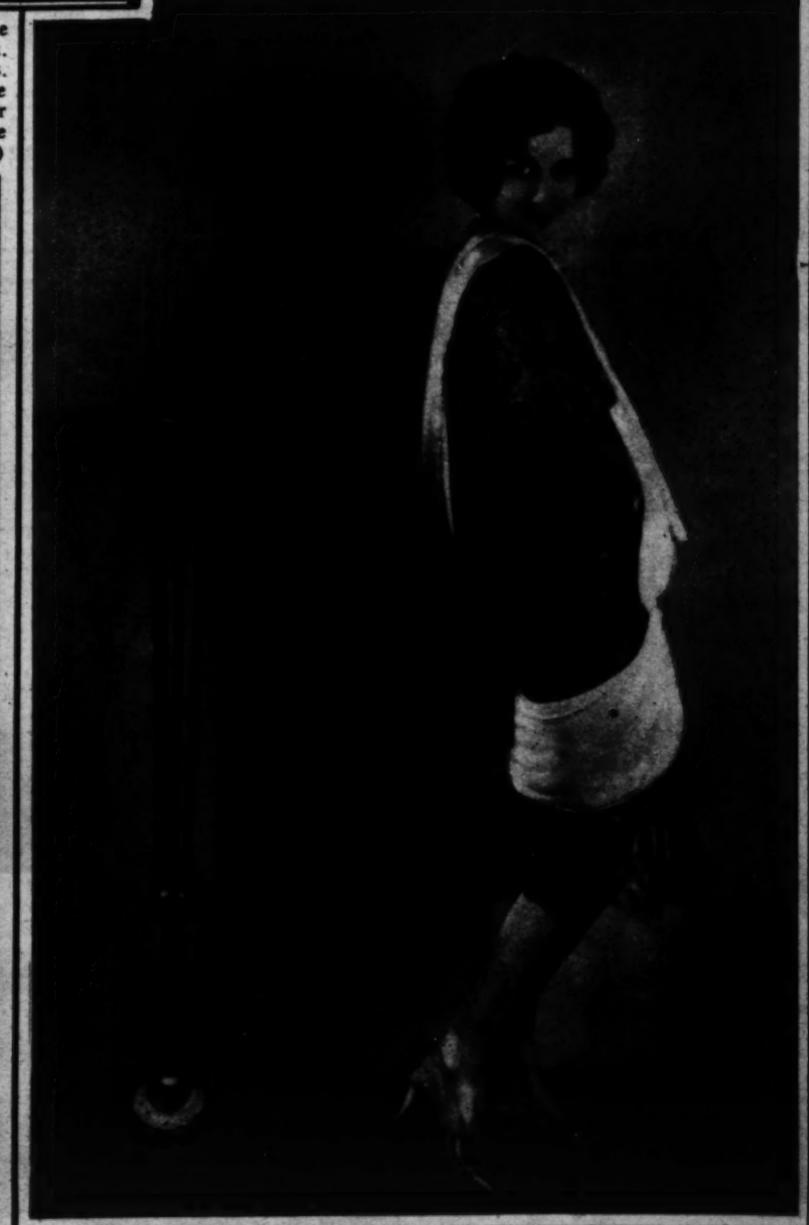

LACE MEDALLION TRIMMINGS FOR THE SIMPLE FROCK—One of the newest American-designed spring dresses, of black satin. It illustrates the new popular vogue for lace as trimmings. (Herbert)

CHARMING AFTERNOON DRESS of beet red crepe daphne exhibited at the summer fashion show in New York. The skirt is widened by pleats so placed as to form pointed yokes. The front of the dress is slit to the waistline and edged with large beads. This theme is also carried out on the sleeves. A scarf tie completes the costume. (Cheney)

NO TROUSSEAU COMPLETE WITHOUT THE NEGLIGEE—This stunning informal costume for boudoir wear is of white velvet, trimmed in fox fur and silver lace. (Herbert)

CLOTH-OF-GOLD EVENING WRAP—For use at ball and theater. Gertrude Olmsted, of the silver screen, is model for this wrap, a square of gold-embroidered material bound in silver cloth. It is to be draped about the body. (Herbert)

THE MYSTIC

—by Robert Hichens

The Story of a Mysterious and Palely Beautiful Woman and of a Man Who Died a Strange Death

WHEN I got a note from Lady Deresby asking me to stay at Deresby, evidently as a humble member of a large and important house party, from Saturday to Monday, I hesitated to accept it. I knew her rather well and liked her. She's an interesting and decidedly original woman, with great taste and considerable knowledge of art, hospitable, friendly, and never dull. Deresby I knew but slightly, a small, sporting and not very significant man, often away yachting but quite agreeable when one met him, which is seldom. The house, of course, is lovely, and as the month was the month of June the gardens would be at their best. There would be good tennis. The company would certainly be entertaining and lively. But the truth is, like many men I'm inclined to be lazy socially. Men as a rule are far lazier socially than women, who never seem to tire when it's a question of wearing pretty clothes, being among people and seeming up to the mark. The alternative to Deresby was a quiet Sunday on the river with my Italian friend, Giulio Mantini, who had taken a house that year at old Windsor; flannels all the time, no women, no ceremony of any kind, tennis, sculling, gossip about the Rome I hadn't seen for three years. I nearly decided on Windsor, but at the last moment my disinclination for a social effort was overcome by a chance remark. I was sitting down in one of my clubs to write an excuse to Lady Deresby when I heard a man near me say to a friend, "I wish I were going to Deresby next Saturday."

"Why? What's up there?" said his pal.

"The girl who wrote 'The Mystic' is going to be there. I'd give something to meet her."

They moved away to another part of the big room and I drew a piece of note paper towards me and wrote an acceptance to Lady Deresby.

What a sensation "The Mystic" made, to be sure! Futile people with small brains believe in capturing success by imitation. A famous man was nearer to the mark when he said to me, "You can only command real success by being absolutely yourself, whether it be in art, politics, or any other walk of life." But then the question arises, what is yourself? And that's a problem not always easy to solve. The authoress of "The Mystic" made a great sensation in a singularly material, even singularly sensual, age by writing a novel that was strangely pure, full of other worldliness, delicate, immaterial, almost touched with the beauty of holiness. The book, as you will remember, was short, simple, unpretending. Yet it made an immediate and deep mark on the world, both in England and America, because of its amazing sincerity, and the natural beauty of its exquisite style, which seemed the reflection of the hidden loveliness of an exquisite soul. And so certain is sincerity of finding out the way to the human heart that "The Mystic" was read, re-read and actually loved not merely by holy people who were entirely detached from the spirit of their age, but also by the most thorough-going worldlings and materialists to be found in London, Paris and New York. The little book, in fact, conquered every one, and it had conquered me.

I went down to Deresby on that Saturday of June solely in order to make the acquaintance of "Marguerite Grey," who had written it. I imagined "Marguerite Grey" to be a nom de guerre. It seemed too appropriate a name to be the real name of the authoress of that delicious book. To me "The Mystic" suggested "Marguerite Grey" and "Marguerite Grey" suggested "The Mystic." The connection was, I thought, too harmonious to be quite likely. Life's so unkind, so fond of dissonances. Probably "The Mystic" had been written by some one called, let us say, Emma Jones or Harriet Robinson. Nobody I knew had ever met "Marguerite Grey." Since the appearance of the book the hunt for her had been ceaseless and intense. But the scent had never been strong enough to lead to a kill. The quarry had not even been viewed, so far as I knew. "Marguerite Grey" had remained in the far distance, unperceived, unknown, evasive as a cloud on a bright horizon. Even my friend, and everybody's friend, Lady Pollett, direct descendant in the female line from Mrs. Leo Hunter, had never impounded her for a lunch party.

III.

I once stayed at Deresby in very late autumn, just when the reds and the golds and the orange browns of nature were beginning to fade into the misty pallors of winter, and I remember well gazing down with Lady Deresby from a height in the deer park on the marvelous house, which looked like a dim violet castle of legend under a frosty red sunset.

"Deresby looks its best at this season," I remember saying. "It becomes legendary at the approach of winter."

But when I saw it that Saturday in June I was doubtful.

I went down by a fast train from London and arrived just before four o'clock in the afternoon. The day, was marvelously fine for an English day. We all have our absurd ideas about things. I thought that day looked Elizabethan. There was a strong touch of old England about the Kentish landscape, the Kentish village through which I drove to the great gates of the deer park. The leaves seemed there for a festival, the flowers in the cottage gardens looked like jolly decorations for a day that should close with feasting and morris dance.

When my carriage turned in at the gates I drove into what seemed to me all the wonderful greenness of the world. And across the great stretches of green the enormous house with its clock tower of the pointed roof welcomed me like a friend from an older century, bidding me back into the past, telling me with the voices of its chiming bells that the spacious days were the best.

On the south side of the house, the garden side, I found my hostess with some of the guests who had preceded me. Three tennis courts were in use. Four people who looked oddly scientific were playing croquet. There were plenty of men. Among them I noticed a very tall, hirsute-looking man of the greyhound type, lean, stringy, alert, with light, keen eyes sheltered by straw-colored eyebrows and a dead white freckled complexion. His long legs seemed crying out for a horse between them. He looked about thirty-five. I had never seen him before and I don't know exactly why I noticed him specially, why my attention for a moment was exclusively concentrated on him. I learned immediately afterward that he was Captain Boyd Hammington, generally called "Soleil," a famous racing and hunting man from the Shires. I'd heard of him for years. Everybody had heard of him. But I'd never seen him before. A horse of his called Soleil had won the Grand National with its owner "up" some years before.

But I hadn't come to Deresby for Soleil Hammington. My concern was with "Marguerite Grey," but I didn't care to let my hostess know this lest she should guess the lure which had brought me down. So I talked to various people whom I knew, had tea, presently got into flannels and took part in a "mixed" at tennis.

When the match was over and I was coming away from the court with my partner, Muriel Archby, the pretty dark girl who's so clever in amateur theatricals, I saw Soleil Hammington again. He was with Lady Deresby and was apparently just being introduced to a newcomer, a girl whom I had never seen before. For I saw him take off his panama hat and then stretch out a long freckled hand to a small hand that met his half way. This girl was fairly tall and extremely slim. Her slimmess was noticeable even in an age of girls slight to attenuation. She was neither fair nor dark. As I came up to the group in which she was standing I saw that she had small features, hazel eyes, and a particularly beautiful forehead. Her forehead really was lovely, and yet I could scarcely make you understand why. It looked marvelously pure, transparent almost with purity, like alabaster with a light behind it shining through. The ideal seemed seated there, and in the hazel eyes which were arched by long, nearly straight and very thin eyebrows, dark brown in color. Her hair, which grew in wavy lines around her forehead, and which was arranged to show two tiny white ears, was a good deal fairer than her eyebrows. Her complexion was pale and her lips were rather pale. She looked very simple, very quiet, not shy, not at all self-conscious, but rather reserved. She was prettily but very simply dressed. She had lovely hands.

I knew at once that this girl was "Marguerite Grey." As I looked at her the very essence of her book seemed there among the roses of Deresby before me.

"What an exquisite forehead that girl has!" Miss Archby whispered to me.

Then Lady Deresby, mentioning our names to the girl, added: "This is my friend, Miss Marguerite Grey!"

So that was really her name! I remember feeling very glad that it was as I took her hand.

IV.

Authors of beautiful books, composers of glorious music, painters of great pictures are, I think, usually so unlike their productions that sometimes when we are with them, though we know by personal acquaintance with their works what they are, yet we can scarcely believe our own knowledge. Marguerite Grey was the wonderful exception to this distressing rule. Her exquisite talent seemed bound about her forehead, her mysticism to shine in her eyes. Every one at Deresby thought that, I believe. At any rate, before that evening was over I had heard nearly every one say, at one time or another, "Isn't she just like her book? Isn't she as delicious as her book?" Or words of much the same meaning. And she seemed to subdue to this curious allegiance, apparently quite unsought for by her, not only the men but the women, and not only the likely men and women, those who really cared about delicate art and could appreciate it with subtlety, but the most unlikely.

There was Soleil Hammington, for instance! Although I had never met him before, I knew, as the phrase goes, "all about him." In appearance he was eminently what sporting writers love to call "hard bitten." Hirsute hardness—so different from business, or pugilistic, or ecclesiastical hardness—was written all over him. His light eyes looked hard, his tight mouth looked hard, his long, thin, sinewy hands looked as hard and as tough as whipcord. He was clean shaven, but his hair being fair and not growing thickly, he looked rather as if he didn't need to shave at all. He was tremendously male though, in the lean, tough, spry, springy way. Light hairs sprinkled his freckled hands. He had a splendidly agile and well knit figure. At a glance one could see what a man he must be across country. He looked as if he had been born out of doors and brought up in a racing stable. And yet, somehow, he didn't look as if he were very strong. Outdoor, yes! Active, enterprising, cool as the devil—yes! But there was, I thought, a sort of under look as of delicacy. Probably he had tried his constitution pretty hard.

He was known as a rowdy man, much given to outrageous practical joking, extremely loose in morals, a hard drinker, a hard sweater, but a man of supreme and even daredevil courage, a gentleman and a man of his word—except where women were concerned. It was rumored that he had treated several women very badly. But all men looked upon "old Soleil" as "as honorable as they're made."

And this man was evidently attracted by Marguerite Grey, so strongly attracted that he obviously didn't give a damn for the other women, several of them remarkably pretty, even famous for their beauty, who were in the big party at Deresby.

For some inscrutable reason he was put beside her at dinner in the great hall which is one of the glories of Deresby. I was sitting exactly opposite, between Muriel Archby and that seasoned woman of the world, Mrs. Dicky Lester, and I noticed his concentration on the little celebrity whom Mrs. Dicky aptly called after her famous book. "The Mystic" she named Miss Grey. And since that hasty and unorthodox christening the name has been accepted by every one. When asked "Have you met the Mystic?" "Do you know the Mystic?" "Isn't the Mystic a delicious character in real life?" you know at once that Miss Grey is being spoken of.

"Why—Soleil?" murmured Mrs. Dicky to me that night.

"I can't imagine," I answered. "Seems to me the most inappropriate neighbor for her that could have been chosen."

"I'm afraid I was wishing I'd been chosen instead of him."

"I'll bet you he asked to be put there," said Mrs. Dicky. "Soleil always gets what he wants."

I noticed that she looked at the two of them scrutinizingly out of her narrow, half shut eyes. She is a cynic, if ever there was one.

"Always!" she added. "He carries everything he puts his hand to through because he doesn't care in the least what any one thinks of him. His nature's as hard as his hands, so he schools women and men—especially women—as he schools difficult horses. But—" she paused with her eyes still upon them—"but her softness would beat him every time, I believe. That girl's a little magician of purity—surely?"

But she turned up the tail of her sentence with the last word and gave me a curious look.

"Of course! Any one can see that at a glance!" I said with a touch of heat.

She sighed. "It's awful, knowing women as I do," she said. "But it would be difficult not to believe in the Mystic."

"For me it would be impossible," I said.

"Man! Man! But this time, perhaps for once, I—almost—agree with you. Every one must believe in her book. It's sincerity incarnate—I think."

"Why do you qualify every statement you make?" I asked.

"I suppose because I'm so terribly old in the ways of the wicked world," she answered, smiling, but looking half sad, too. "But if we believe in her book how can we doubt its writer? And the hallmark of sincerity is surely upon it."

"Her forehead looks luminous," I said.

"Doesn't it? And those hazel eyes are like a serenely happy nun's. It's wonderful how she doesn't see what he is—Soleil," she said.

And then, in that irritating way of hers, she added softly, "If she doesn't!"

Just then Marguerite Grey, turning a little from her hard bitten neighbor, but as if quite unconsciously, looked across the table straight at us, but, I felt, with unseeing eyes. For a moment she had surely forgotten where she was, had lost the consciousness of her gay and brilliant surroundings. Her eyes seemed to look into mine but they were seeing something beyond me, something quite different from me. They were cloudy with imaginings in that moment, yet I believed, indeed seemed to know, that their vision was clear. But they were seeing things on the other side.

A long, lean freckled hand, sprinkled with light hairs, with, I thought, infernal impudence, touched her narrow white arm. She looked at Soleil and smiled quickly, with a kind of gentle depreciation, as if asking forgiveness for her abstraction but not really wanting it.

"How far she is away from that hard riding brute!" I thought.

And I felt more contented. It was so obvious to me now that she could never be at home with Soleil.

"A glimpse of the far away, hadn't she?" said Mrs. Dicky's muffled voice in my ear. "Or was it—she's got 'lovely eyes, you know. One mustn't forget that!"

At that moment I almost hated her.

V.

Mystical activity, then, like all other activities of the self, opens with that sharp stimulation of the will which can only be obtained through the emotional life.

The clock in my bedroom at Deres-by, a beautiful black and gold old Swiss clock from Neufchâtel, one of Lady Deresby's "finds" when abroad, struck once melodiously. It was half past one in the night of Saturday. I heard no noise from the great corridor outside my door on which many bedrooms opened, among them Soleil Hammington's and mine. He had come up from the smoking room with me half an hour before and I had seen him go into a room three doors nearer to the staircase than mine. Since that time, in pajamas and a dressing gown, I'd been reading Evelyn Underhill, the historian of the mystics.

Now I put the book down and leaned out of my open window which looked over the great spaces of the deer park.

The night was clear and starlit but without a moon. I smelt the trees and the dewy grass. I breathed in—so I thought of it then—the mysticism of nature.

In Honorem omnium animarum mysticarum—those words sang in my mind melodiously. And I put Marguerite Grey among that company, modern though she was, a child of my time. Of my world, my age, she was, but nevertheless very far away from them, a creature apart, with the shining of another world on her forehead. Yet she was surely quite unconscious of that. Her unconsciousness was part of the beauty of her unusual nature.

I had managed quite a long talk with her after dinner in spite of Soleil's assiduities. The man had really been blatant in his determination to keep the mystic all to himself. What could he find to appeal to him in Miss Grey? Of course, he had never read her book. I had heard him say that he'd heard of it, and that he intended to read it.

Soleil Hammington reading "The Mystic!" What a spectacle? Why, the fellow wouldn't understand one word of it!

Miss Grey's dealing with him had been perfection in its quiet delicacy. He must have seemed to her quite a monstrous phenomenon, though, of course, he was absolutely at home in any society, and was, in his way, a thoroughbred. But it was not of his social but of his moral values that I was thinking. The inherent coarseness of that type of man showed up with such almost intolerable vividness when it was brought into the neighborhood of such an ethereal nature as Miss Grey's. She must have felt more at home with me. For at least I could understand the meaning of the gospel she lived by. She had seemed always far away from Soleil. But her strange eyes had looked at him more than once as if they hadn't known he was there. With all his hardy assurance, his very marked personality, it had been evident to me that he was making no real impression upon her.

Rather late in the evening Lady Deresby had taken him away to play poker, and I had had a little talk alone with Miss Grey. I had told her, like so many others, of the real joy her art had given me because of its rare sincerity. And then we had discussed sincerity in art, and sincerity in life. She had been extraordinarily unassuming, but she had said two or three unusual, even startling things.

One of them was, "There are more sides to sincerity than most people can grasp. That's why manifestations of genuine character are often called lapses." Another that I now recalled was this: "Evil is often quite as sincere as good. But it suits man to claim goodness as the basis of human character, so he talks of evil as failure when it is frequently a deliberate assertion of the whole man."

If Mrs. Dicky had said these things I should probably have condemned her as a hopeless cynic. But they had come from Marguerite Grey's

Ed Wynn's Question Box

—BY—
ED WYNN

Dear Mr. Wynn:—I read in the newspapers that the Statue of Liberty's right hand measures 11½ inches. Is that true and if so why did they make it just 11½ inches? Yours truly—HUGH GOTTA SHOWME.

Answer:—Her hand was made 11½ inches long because the sculptor knew that if he made her hand 12 inches long it would have been a foot.

Dear Mr. Wynn:—On my next birthday I will be 21 years old. I am torn between two thoughts. I am keeping company with a girl and expect to marry her. On the other hand my father wants me to join the army. What shall I do? Yours truly—LEW TENNANT.

Answer:—The only difference is, if you join the army you'll get paid for fighting.

Dear Mr. Wynn:—I went into the dining room of the Astor hotel yesterday and I saw 35 people get up from their table and walk out of the room. I wonder why? Yours truly—D. ZERT.

Answer:—They were through eating.

Dear Mr. Wynn:—There is a very rich man in our town who goes horseback riding every day, but he only wears one spur and wears that always on the boot which is on his right foot. Can you tell me why he only wears one spur and that one always on the right foot? Yours truly—E. QUINE.

Answer:—He probably is an efficiency expert and figures if he can get the right side of the horse to start the left side will start too.

Dear Mr. Wynn:—A crowd of boys and girls are going on a picnic next Sunday. We must each bring something to eat. I am supposed to make some "hash." Can you tell me the best way to make "hash"? Truly yours—IKE ANT COOK.

Answer:—My dear boy, "hash" is not made. "Hash" is an accumulation.

Dear Mr. Wynn:—I know nothing about the workings of the stock market but my ambition is to become a speculator on Wall street. What I want to know is will they make me a "Bull" or a "Bear"? Sincerely—E. Z. MARK.

Answer:—If you know nothing about Wall street they will not make you a "Bull" or a "Bear." They will make a "monkey" out of you.

Dear Mr. Wynn:—I am a married man. Have been married for 15 years, but am very unhappy. My wife and I quarrel all the time. What can I do? My wife is 40 years old. Truly yours—NERVIS RECK.

Answer:—Change her for two twenties.

Dear Mr. Wynn:—I went to a friend's house yesterday and he had some home-made whisky. I didn't take any but he took one drink, then wanted to sell me the city of St. Louis for $20.00. I promised to call on him next week. What should I do if he takes a drink and it makes him so crazy as to want to sell me St. Louis for $20.00? Yours truly—KAYNEN ABEL.

Answer:—Don't be silly. If he takes a drink of whisky and offers you St. Louis for $20.00, you take a drink and buy it.

Dear Mr. Wynn:—I am a minister in a small town and my parish is composed of a class of people who insist on me proving everything I preach. Next Sunday my sermon is all about "Hell." I know they do not believe there is a "hell" and want to be prepared for their questions. How can I prove to them that there is such a place as "Hell"? Sincerely—WATKIN I. TELLEM.

Answer:—If any member of your church doubts there is a "hell" and asks you to prove it just tell him to ask any business man where business has gone to.

Dear Mr. Wynn:—I read in the papers that Mr. Kluts, the man who was just arrested for having 8 wives, says he became a bigamist merely in the name of humanity. What does he mean? Truly yours—UNO THATSALYE.

Answer:—He probably is a very kind man and married all those women to keep them from becoming old maids and shooting themselves.

Dear Mr. Wynn:—I am a woman 34 years of age and weigh 196 pounds. I want to reduce, so went to a doctor who told me to take 20 rolls after breakfast. I started in today but after I ate 12 rolls I felt uncomfortable. Can you suggest some other recipe? Sincerely—IMA SITE.

Answer:—Next week.

ARRIED life bristles with difficulties," declared Prof.
Crate Bales, at

th' meetin' o' th' Better Homes League, at Melodeon Hall, yesteray afternoon. "Th' bankrupt marriage crop has reached proportions that endangers th' very life o' th' republic, clogs th' courts, an' demoralizes th' installment business," continued th' Professor.
"Marriages do not hit
th' junk heap with suddenness. Sometimes th' collapse starts long before th' weddin'. Carefully gathered statistics show that fellers who marry at thirty or thirty-five, or after they've saved a hundred dollars or so, hold out th' longest, an' that women who give up at thirty an' marry are more liable t' make th' best o' things an' stay put. Split-ups come on gradually, an' may start from th' most trivial matters, such as hunger, lack o' shoes, absence o' diversion, or an unhandy kitchen. Too much money, however, causes more marital failures than poverty. Most any woman would rather live alone with alimony than with th' best husband that ever lived. Women love freedom, an' in these latter days they're showin' a cravin' fer thrills that hain't doin' th' home any good. In th' ole days, th' saloon had much t' do with many domestic wrecks, but t'day, where th' husband an' wife both drink, th' smash up is retarded for a year or two, sometimes three. In th' last few years, there seems t' be a growin' tendency among mothers an' fathers t' divide th' assets an' split up after th' children are married—a sort o' beginnin' agin movement. This fad is th' outgrowth o' paint an' powder an' club life, an' th' determination on th' part o' so many t' 'carry on' long after they're due t' settle down an' stay at home. I don't think that prohibition kin be held in any way responsible fer th' wretched condition o' marital affairs in this country. I've heard o' some very riotous house parties where th' bootlegger never showed up. So many of us don't seem t' be satisfied with anything these days. We're restless an' amusement mad, an' it's little wonder that anything as sacred as marriage, or as gentle an' restful as a home, fails t' appeal t' married folks. So many parents, those who stay married, expect th' public schools t' train an' discipline ther children when ther small, an' colleges an' private schools t' watch o'er them thro' th' critical periods o' ther lives. An' here's another thought—parents have jest about reached th' point where they hain't got th' time an' patience t' fool with children. Th' desire t' live twice on th' same earth is th' blightin' fad o' th' present era."

Crossed Wires

A Fascinating New Serial By John T. McCutcheon

INSTALLMENT XVIII.

Rasher is Deserted.

MRS. CRAYTON, whose nerves were everwrought by the storm and the holdup, insisted upon going into town at once.

"And leave the chauffeur here?" exclaimed Virginia. "If any one goes first it should be he. He's wounded. He must be gotten to a doctor at once!"

"I feel one of my attacks coming on," complained Mrs. Crayton. "If the chauffeur hadn't stopped the car, we wouldn't be in this dreadful situation. It is his fault entirely."

Virginia bit her lips to hold back the retort that threatened.

A slight movement in the front seat, where Rasher lay, showed him to have regained consciousness. He passed his hand across his bandaged head, winced slightly, and then turned slowly to where the rest of the party stood.

"Don't mind me," he said. "Go on ahead, I'll follow later. I'll be all right in a little while."

"Nonsense!" cried Virginia. "Don't you realize you've been shot? We must get you to a doctor immediately."

Rasher moved about in his seat. A sharp pain in his shoulder caused him to flinch.

"I believe they did get me," he muttered, "but it doesn't seem serious. Go on, Mrs. Crayton; don't wait for me."

Mrs. Crayton turned a triumphant look on her daughter. "There! you see, Virginia. He takes a sensible view of it." Then turning to Rasher she added, more considerately, "I'll have a car come for you at once. And, of course, all your expenses will be paid. Don't worry on that score."

"I'll try not to," said Rasher, with a faint smile.

"Mother, I think it is simply outrageous for us to go away and leave him here. Don't forget that he got hurt trying to protect me." And then, firmly: "You go on, mother. The count and Celeste will go with you.

I'll stay here."

"You'll do nothing of the sort, Virginia. You can't help matters by staying."

"I shall be glad to stay," said the count quickly.

"And leave us to go on alone!" cried Mrs. Crayton in dismay. "To a strange house with a strange man."

Here the farmer spoke up.

"I guess my house is all right, ma'am," he said with some heat, "and anybody around here will tell you Sam Davis is all right. But you don't have to go if you don't want to. I was only trying to do you a favor."

"Don't mind her, Mr. Davis," whispered Virginia. "She's not herself. She has had a terrible shock. We are very grateful to you. You've been very kind."

Mrs. Crayton started up the road. "Come, Count, we'll go to this gentleman's house and telephone." The Count and Celeste followed hesitatingly. The latter found a moment to whisper in his ear, "Be careful! You'll ruin everything. This girl is interested in that chauffeur. You mustn't leave her behind."

The Count was in a predicament. He couldn't allow Mrs. Crayton to go on alone, and he didn't want to leave Virginia with a young man who had been wounded in her defense. Such situations engender romance. He hurried up to Mrs. Crayton.

"I think it would be very unwise for Miss Virginia to remain behind. It is getting dark. No one knows what character of people might come along, and the chauffeur is, unfortunately, in no condition to defend her. You must either have her come with us or I shall remain behind to protect her."

Mrs. Crayton began to weep hysterically.

"Very well, remain behind, all of you," she sobbed. "I'm going on alone." Experience had taught her the way to gain her ends, and she knew her tears would prevail when all other tactics failed.

Virginia, looking after her, sighed wearily.

"Oh, dear, poor mother is so overwrought." She turned to Rasher. "I'm afraid I'll have to go with her. Do you think you'll be all right if we leave you here for a little while? I'll send help as soon as I can get to a telephone. The next town can't be so far away."

"I'll be all right," assured Rasher. "Don't concern yourself about me. Your mother needs you." A queer look came into the girl's eyes. There was a suspicion of moisture, and when she spoke her tone had something of maternal tenderness in it. "Now, don't move around. Keep perfectly quiet or you'll start your wound bleeding again. I feel dreadfully to desert you—but you see how it is. I must get mother up to Mr. Davis' house—then we can get help."

She turned hastily away. Rasher waved pleasantly, and as they disappeared he managed with much difficulty to extract a cigar and light it. There was soothing comfort in the smoke.

Darkness was settling down and the violence of the storm had ended. In all likelihood cars would again be passing along.

He smoked comfortably for some time, and then to his ears came the sound of an approaching car. As it whirled around the curve he vigorously sounded his horn and it drew up alongside.

"I've been hurt and must get into the next town," he called out. "Can you tow me in? I'll explain later."

"Sure." In a few minutes the tow line was secured and the two cars proceeded slowly along the deserted highway. Upon all sides were evidences of the storm's ravages. Telephone wires were down and in two places riven tree trunks marked where bolts of lightning had struck. It was quite dark when Rasher climbed unsteadily out of his car at the doorway of the little hotel in Edgemoor. An interested group of villagers quickly gathered.

"My car is all right except for a punctured tank. It can be fixed in ten minutes. Plug it up," he directed,

"and fill it with gas. Then take it out to Samuel Davis' place, five or six miles out, and bring in a party that will be waiting there. They'll want four rooms here for the night. Have those trunks and bags taken up to the two best rooms."

It thus came about that within an hour the Crayton car with a local driver, arrived at the Davis farmhouse, where Mr. Davis had vainly been trying to get a telephone call through. In helpless despair they had waited while these attempts were being made until the sound of a motor horn drew them to the doorway.

"Why, it's our own car!" exclaimed Virginia in amazement. "But where's our chauffeur?"

"Yes, and where are all our bags and trunks?" cried her mother. "He's gone and so are our possessions."

"Your trunks are all up at the hotel," said the driver. "Your chauffeur had 'em taken off."

Mrs. Crayton was unconvinced. "I declare, there's something very queer about this. Do you suppose he was really wounded and not just feigning?"

The Count smiled encouragingly and shrugged his shoulders. Celeste murmured a French expletive under her breath, while Virginia, regarding her mother with a pitying glance, also shrugged her shoulders.

The trip to town was made quickly. At the hotel Mrs. Crayton's suspicions were dissipated by the discovery of the trunks and bags in the rooms reserved for Virginia and herself. Some freshly picked flowers were on the dressers and a sprightly fire burned in the fireplace. It was a cheery sight to one whose nerves and emotions have been woefully churned and whose shoes and clothes were still damp from the storm.

"Your chauffeur had these arranged before he went to the hospital," said the chambermaid. "He's ordered your dinner, and it will be up in just a moment or two."

Broadway Banter

SND now a second helping of "Garrick Gaieties" has been passed around. The first dish of this Theater Guild revue was, as you know, served New York last summer, and was the means, incidentally, of giving the dignified Garrick theater the best shake-up it has had in years. So few theatergoers suffered any signs of indigestion from the first platter, that even then the second one was seen to be inevitable. And I might state the new revue is a full-fledged meal, including everything from soup to nuts, with even a greater number of the latter than last year.

This is the show in which each year Cedartown, Georgia, is allowed to show Broadway a thing or two. For Cedartown's Broadway representative, Sterling Holloway, manages to be in the new show even funnier, more engaging and more delightfully original than ever before. It is quite all right for you to tell all New Yorkers you meet at your favorite watering place this summer, "Yes, umhum, Sterling Holloway is from my state."

These young Garrick Gayesters are nobody's fools, by the way. They reveal that they've learned audiences pretty well, for their opening and closing number is a snappy song called, "We can't be as good as last year," which leaves some people with absolutely nothing to talk about on the way home. I'm not a bit sure that the second one isn't maybe better than the first one. As a matter of fact, it appeared to me to be just a continuation of the good news.

Most of the last year's cast is back again. The only person who is not June Cochrane, she who with Sterling made "Manhattan" what it was last year. No matter how clever you are, you can't be in but one show at a time, and the enchanting Miss Cochrane is at the moment doing for "The Girl Friend" what some of its stars were supposed to do. The Guild very obviously realized the loss of Miss Cochrane, for they engaged not one but two girls to take her place. One of them is Betty Starbuck, present in last year's show and even more attractive than ever. The other, a newcomer, is Bobbie Perkins, who strayed into the Guild camp, got them to like her, and stayed around to be whatever part of June Cochrane she could. She's decidedly attractive and dances enticingly.

I haven't the space today to do "The Gaieties" justice, injustice or whatever it is I do to shows. But next week I'll make room to tell you more about how frightfully good Sterling and the new Gaieties are.

And I have the best "Movie Favorite Letters" of the lot for you then, too!

"Dinky" Ernest Dallis is one of your number who recently spent a day or so in town. Dinky, so I learned, had made all arrangements to see "A Night In Paris" the night he arrived, but when he discovered he'd be here only one night, got rid of the revue seats, and went as indirectly as taxis here take you to see Katherine Wilson in "Love 'Em and Leave 'Em." Miss Wilson and Dinky's brother-in-law, "Pat" Phelan used to dash about quite a bit together at just about the time in life their friend, Guy Kenner, found Hallie Crawford far too cute to be allowed to remain single any longer. Before returning to the two Epsies in Atlanta, Mr. Dallis was going to stop off at Washington, where young Palmer Dallis is at school getting ninety-seven in everything.

On one of those days when you'd rather be run over than break out of the entrancing spring haze you're in, I stumbled upon "Jazz" Carriker and Louis Smith just as they were crossing Broadway at 50th. It later developed they had just been to see "Tip Toes," "Jazz" admitting it was his second visit. After we'd put at least a block between us, "Jazz" bounded back to find out the number of Alice Stearns' house on Peachtree, which, unless they've changed it, is still dear old seven-forty-five. It was that I know, in the days before Mrs. Roby Robinson's music room next door was filled with fraternity beds. But after they wrested away from the Stearns their old "IVy 69" phone number I am prepared for anything that may have happened since. The Stearns contingent, as far as I'm concerned, can go down in history as the one family in the world without a sad egg. Families as a whole, while possibly painless, always spring a leak somewhere, but this little Stearns band has never had a bore in their camp. How very careful these young Stearns should be about the people they marry, for they ought, if possible, to keep going one boreless American family. Certainly no mistake was made in letting down the bars to either "Barbs" Wilkinson who married Harry, Jr., or Ed Upton, whom Marion selected from out of the raft of men who tried to marry her. A great deal of responsibility rests on the remaining single Stearns, Alice, but she, I feel, can be relied upon to weed out any applicants not worthy of winning their "S."

* * * * *
"Love in a Mist" is just the play the waning theatrical season needed to leave a good taste in your mouth, my mouth, or whoever's mouth you had in mind. This play is, in the first place, a highly diverting and amusing one. In the second place, it is acted in its entirety by a flawlessly competent troupe, led by Madge Kennedy and Sidney Blackmer. And in the third place, is there anything worse than people who go in for the "in the first place" and "in the second place" style of writing?

People have a way of saying "Isn't Madge Kennedy cute?" and that in itself has kept me from capsizing as wholeheartedly over her as I knew eventually I was going to. "Love in a Mist" taught me it was useless to suppress any longer the glowing admiration I had for Miss Kennedy, and I am now prepared to let her enter that fold mainly occupied by Beatrice Lillie, Texas Guinan and Queenie

A Half-Century With Justice—

No. 22—The Story of James Jackson

Oldest Detective Took Part In Many Famous Cases --Jackson Tried First Electric Chair

Here is the story of a man who has taken part in the drama of justice during a period of almost fifty years, James Jackson, now eighty-five years old. Once state detective of New York and for years assistant executioner at Sing Sing, Jackson today reviews a career which is perhaps without parallel among men still living. He has played a leading role in the final scenes of some of the most famous murder cases on record.

How do criminals of today compare with the criminals of fifty years ago? What are the reactions of an executioner? How was the first electric chair assembled? How was it tested? Jackson, his mind still clear despite his age, goes behind the scenes of justice in this review of his memories.

HE oldest detective in the world celebrated his 85th birthday in Ossining, N. Y., recently. He received messages of congratulation from police centers throughout America and Europe.

The aged crook chaser is James Jackson. He served as state detective in New York, attached to Sing Sing prison, during more than forty-five years. The office was created to fit his special capabilities. It was abolished when he resigned.

Ensconced in a big armchair, surrounded by his family, Old Fatality, as he came to be known by several generations of Sing Sing residents, reviews his career, clear-eyed and analytical. He finds nothing to regret except the perversity of human nature that leads in so many instances to the death house.

A stern-faced old man is Jackson, with a cold gray eye and a grim sense of humor. He sits in his library at Ossining gazing over snow-clad hills, wishing life and his active participation in its affairs were not circumscribed by physical circumstance.

Old Fatality.

During his long term Jackson chased and captured scores of escaped prisoners. Some he pursued to Europe and caught with the aid of Scotland Yard. Others he harried relentlessly through New York's underworld of the period when 14th street was up-town. He seldom failed in his quest. That is why he was called Old Fatality.

Since Sing Sing was built more than a century ago, many wardens have served there. Some were competent, and many were not. Political appointees of the earlier regime were singularly ill fitted for their work. That explains why there were so many violent outbreaks among prisoners. Jackson, however, attributes some of these riots to brutal punishments then in vogue. They occurred in a time when thumbscrews and the water cure were recognized elements in prison discipline.

One of Jackson's duties as state detective was to assist at executions. He relates with a certain pride of duty well done how he helped to put to death 150 men and one woman. The woman, Martha Place, was the only female ever electrocuted at Sing Sing. When Jackson began his service at Sing Sing General Grant was in his second term as president. The prison Le Coq held his peculiar office through the administrations of Presidents Hayes, Garfield, Arthur, Cleveland, Harrison, McKinley, Taft and Wilson.

Referring to the fact that his participation in executions causes him no qualms, this Nemesis of the jail breaker points out that the duty of the prison officials is to execute the law. They are not judges. They have nothing to do with the merits of cases they handle. Once a murderer enters dead men's row it is the official job to execute him on the day set by the court. This is done nearly always with neatness and dispatch.

"When I began at Sing Sing," says Jackson, "conditions were primitive. There was no Brooklyn bridge. The telephone hadn't been invented. Horse-drawn surface cars were just coming into use and the only way to cross the river was by ferry.

Sewing Machine, Wealth.

"To pursue the idea, there were no through trains. The traveler put in half of his time changing cars. Everybody going nearly anywhere changed at Sing Sing. As a young man I was telegraph operator there. The job afforded me extraordinary opportunities for observation. I came to know everybody visiting the prison. They included relatives and others who called on inmates.

"There were no typewriters, no phonographs, no airplanes, no radio. Anybody that owned a sewing machine—one of the old-time woman-killers—was a plutocrat. Yes, times have changed in many ways but not much in one way.

"Criminals were, to my mind, more shrewd and daring then than they are now. Some men and women I recall would have made the most expert crooks of this day look like amateurs. Police work was far more difficult. It was catch as catch could."

"Long after I became associated with the prison there wasn't even a photograph gallery. We had no scientific system of identifying criminals. It was twenty years after I became a detective that the Bertillon system of identification was installed.

"That was the heyday of the bank robber. Some of these men were of fascinating manners and personality. They possessed extraordinary cunning. Many established friendships in high places. This reminds me that there

I aided," Jackson went on, "men condemned for crimes of passion were in the majority. Eighty who went to the chair under my escort slew women or girls. Twenty-nine killed their wives. Twelve killed paramours. Ten made away with their fiancees. Nineteen murdered women during robberies. The lone woman executed slew another woman.

"When the law was altered in 1889, substituting electrocution for hanging, many things took place that were comical. You see mighty little was known at that time about the effect of electricity on the human body. It was because of this uncertainty that one queer episode occurred.

"We were compelled under the law to install an electric death chair. Four men were in the death house awaiting execution. The law said they had to be electrocuted. Getting the chair into operation was more of a job than we anticipated.

"A tremendous public outcry against the law had convinced manufacturers of electrical apparatus it wouldn't be good advertising for them to supply the state, so they declined. We had to collect materials for our first chair in South America. After the device had been set up we were not sure it would work. In the state of public feeling a bungled execution would have been bad for all concerned. The question was how to test the apparatus.

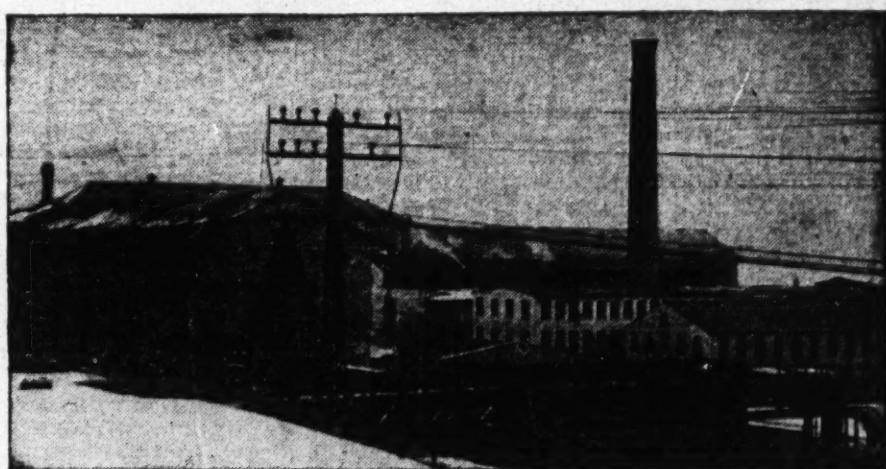

"Captain Hilbert, skilled mechanic, made the first death chair. Switches and other apparatus were installed. Keeper Derrenbacher, with myself and State Electrician Davis, set out to test the device. We led an old horse from the prison stable into the death chamber. Condemned men were in adjoining cells but they didn't suspect what we were doing—at least not then.

"Derrenbacher followed the formula. He attached an electrode to the horse's head and I hung one on his hind leg. I've attached them since then to lots of human legs.

Horse Victim.

"Of course the horse couldn't sit in the chair, so we let him stand. When all was ready, Sylvester McNeil, a guard, threw the first switch behind the instrument board, connecting with the dynamo. Electrician Davis watched the needles mount until 1,600 volts showed on the one dial and eight amperes on the other. Then Davis threw a second switch which turned the full current into the electric chair and thence into the horse.

"With more experience we might have known the horse's shoes would cause trouble. As the current hit him the poor old nag staggered. A fuse

"I never in all my days saw a horse so indignant. The animal appeared to

Surprising Romance Of the

THE recent marriage of Mrs. Horace E. Dodge, the immensely wealthy widow of the Detroit automobile manufacturer, and the man who now calls himself Hugh Dillman, but who was originally Hugh Dillman McGaughy, was a breath-taking surprise even to those who know them well.

Of course, everybody had noticed the growing enjoyment Mrs. Dodge and Dillman took in each other's company, how they were seen together more and more at Palm Beach and elsewhere, but nobody dreamed that the immensely wide social and financial gulf that separated them could ever be bridged by love and marriage—not even when there was a man of Mr. Dillman's magnetic qualities to do the wooing.

What a striking contrast between the little-known player of trivial parts and that of the automobile magnate's widow!

Her share of the $146,000,000 estate left by her husband is believed to have made her the richest woman in the world. While the estate was being settled she demanded and received from the probate court an allowance of $500,000 a year for her living expenses.

She maintains a $1,000,000 yacht, she owns one of Detroit's palatial mansions and within the past few months she bought the Joshua S. Cosden villa at Palm Beach for $4,000,000. She wears jewels which queens might envy and she is a prominent figure in some of society's most fashionable circles.

Naturally such a woman, so charming and so prominent socially would not lack for wealthy and distinguished men who hovered about her she would finally give her heart. And now she has upset all the predictions of the wise, acres by marrying a man who was never considered seriously in the running and who had neither wealth nor social prominence nor a distinguished career to recommend him.

Until recently Dillman was only an obscure, struggling actor. He never achieved any fame on the stage, his appearances being restricted to minor roles in stock companies and in the support of well-known stars. The greatest distinction his theatrical career brought him came from the fact that he was for a brief time the husband of Marjorie Rambeau. But for this marriage he would hardly be remembered in the theatrical world.

For the last two seasons it has become almost an axiom that every bachelor, widowed and divorced man in the smart set must share in the popular pastime of laying his heart at Mrs. Dodge's feet. Certainly few women, either widows or debutantes have ever been wooed by a larger or more notable array of suitors. If Mrs. Dodge's vanity was tickled by the number and character of the men who pursued her with attention it would have been scarcely more than human.

Prominent among the suitors on whose chances perhaps the greatest the gossips looked with favor was a retired business man who has rounded out his career by serving his country with signal ability in the field of diplomacy.

least wealthy and eminent of all those who sought it?

The answer, her friends believe, is found in the fact that, in spite of her thirty years of married life with her first husband, Mrs. Dodge still craves, with all the ardor of a young schoolgirl, romance and the thrills that are not to be found in the monotonous humdrum of smart set life. After long and mature deliberation she decided that Hugh Dillman was better fitted to gratify her longing in these directions than any one of the distinguished diplomats and statesmen, financiers and captains of industry.

Pressing him closely in the love race was a widower, whose bank account, while by no means as large as the Dodge fortune, is nevertheless of very generous proportions. The third of the trio whom all the best observers thought to be leading in the race was a great captain of industry who is almost equally well-known for his philanthropies.

There were many others almost if not quite as rich and distinguished—so many that it is small wonder Hugh Dillman and his chances were quite lost sight of. Indeed, he was not even considered a suitor of Mrs. Dodge's. Their intimacy was believed to be only the widow's recognition of the fact that the well-groomed, former actor was an exceedingly pleasant playmate.

Why did Mrs. Dodge pass all the rich and distinguished husbands she might have had and choose the one Marjorie Rambeau had cast off? Why did she finally give her heart to the

It now appears that Dillman's obscure career was of the greatest advantage to him in his suit instead of being an insuperable handicap. Mrs. Dodge was fascinated by the novel vistas of life which his footlight experiences and his wide acquaintance with the bizarre folk who people bohemia opened up to her. She thought it would be delightful to have a husband who could link her so closely with these twin worlds of the stage and bohemia and make her really a part of them.

The widow reasoned, it is believed, that if she married one of her rich and famous suitors she would be more or less duplicating her life with her first husband. Such a man would have much the same background, much the same tastes and interests in life that the late Mr. Dodge had and would never take her outside a very similar circle of friends.

Supremely happy as her life with her first husband had been, she could not help feeling that if she were going to try matrimony a second time it would be pleasant to try it under completely changed conditions.

Her friendship with Hugh Dillman had already brought into her life no end of the most refreshing and romantic novelty. Once they were married, there would be sure to be much more of it.

Dillman was an exceedingly well-groomed, well-spoken man, as truly a gentleman as any of her far richer and more famous suitors. He was well-liked by her family and most of her friends. And she had no doubt that he was deeply in love with her. What more could she desire?

Her own great wealth and high social position and the fact that Hugh Dillman had neither was no objection whatever. After they were married it would be a pleasure for her to supply his lacks in these or any other directions.

The odd chance that brought Hugh Dillman into the life of the woman who is now his wife was as romantic as anything that followed. Their first meeting occurred in Venice three years ago—one night when the moon was bathing the waters of the Grand Canal with a seductive glamor that made this world seem a place for nothing but romance.

The gondola in which Mrs. Dodge and her maid were riding collided with another boat. Instead of separating their craft and going on their way the two gondoliers started an angry quarrel. When they seemed on the point of drawing stilettos to settle their feud, Mrs. Dodge grew a little apprehensive.

Just as she was regretting that she was without a male escort she saw another gondola drawing alongside hers. Its sole passenger was a man, a broad-shouldered fellow whose clothes fitted his well-muscled body faultlessly, and who stood up, hat in hand, as the boat approached.

"Pardon me, madame," he said with an accent unmistakably American, "but can I be of any assistance?"

"Yes, indeed," said Mrs. Dodge, with

He took a troupe of colored jubilee singers on a profitable tour of the United States and Marjorie Rambeau brought suit for the divorce that finally ended it, charging that Dillman had been very, very cruel to her. Later on she confessed that she could not endure him as a husband because he was "too much of a gentleman."

And now the former actor who was "too gentlemanly" for Marjorie Rambeau to live with is the husband of the richest woman in the world, lolling with her in the luxury that many millions can supply!

At the time of the settlement of her husband's estate the former Mrs. Dodge testified that for seven years preceding his death he had been spending a million dollars a year on the support of his family, consisting of his wife, one son, Horace E. Dodge, Jr., and a married daughter, Mrs. James H. R. Cromwell.

When his wife expressed a desire for pearls he bought her the most magnificent string of them that was to be obtained. It was the one that had belonged to Empress Catherine of Russia and it cost $825,000.

Once when one of Mr. Dodge's banker friends was telling him how he had hired private detectives to guard his wife's jewels while she was taking them with her on a trip across the continent, Mr. Dodge smiled and said:

"I never worry about such trifles. If my wife loses her pearls or diamonds I buy her new ones the next day."

Mr. Dillman acted as agent for Mrs. Dodge in her purchase of the Cosden palace at Palm Beach. This was before there had been any announcement of their coming marriage but evidently she thought it none too early to begin accustoming the former actor to juggling with millions.

"What an ideal place for a honeymoon," murmured Mrs. Dodge as the transfer of the villa to her was completed.

Perhaps those words of hers gave her the inspiration for what followed.

The former Mrs. Horace E. Dodge and her new husband, Hugh Dillman, as they appeared at a fancy dress ball at Palm Beach last winter.

a sigh of relief, "if you will be so good. Just make those two rascals stop their quarreling and let us be on our way."

Hugh Dillman—for he was the hero who had come so opportunely to the heroine's rescue—addressed a few words of forceful Italian to the squabbling gondoliers and quickly ironed out the difficulty. Of course, a formal introduction to Mrs. Dodge quickly followed this chance encounter on the Grand Canal and that, according to the story which is told, is how he came into the wealthy widow's life.

A short time before this Dillman, discouraged by his failure to make much progress up the ladder of theatrical fame, had turned to the management of musical organizations.

Europe. At Palm Beach he became, with the backing of wealthy friends, the managing director of the Society of Arts.

Hugh Dillman McGaughy was born in Columbus, Ohio, where his sister and other relatives still live. He is remembered there as a stage struck boy who left Columbus as soon as his school days were over to become an actor.

After appearing in minor roles with Elsie Ferguson, Ethel Barrymore, Nance O'Neill and other well-known stars he obtained a small part with Marjorie Rambeau. During this engagement he and Miss Rambeau fell in love and, shortly after her divorce from Willard Mack, they were married.

This love match was short lived.

Marjorie Rambeau, who divorced Mr. Dillman on charges of cruelty and also objected to him as a husband on the ground that he was too gentlemanly.

Another recent and more conventional portrait of Mrs. Dodge-Dillman.

At any rate, she very quickly acquired the only thing lacking to enable her to enjoy a honeymoon in her new home—a husband whom she thinks perfectly ideal.

Things New and Old About the Bible :

BY REV. W. P. KING

Pastor First Methodist Church, Gainesville, Ga.

Objections to Divine Fatherhood.

Rev. W. P. King

WHILE human suffering has proved to many a stumbling block in the way of faith in a loving God, yet this form of objection may be largely removed by a consideration of the disciplinary value of suffering.

1st. Suffering reveals us to ourselves.

A knowledge that we need to possess is a knowledge of ourselves.

The hour of sorrow is the hour of self-discovery.

There is revealed to us unsuspected tendencies, insincerities and latent impurities.

The flippancy and frivolity of life is laid bare.

"We abhor ourselves and repent in dust and ashes."

2d. Suffering makes clear the fundamental realities of the faith. We believe only what we can cling to in the storm.

Sorrows separate a fancied from an actual belief.

We have gone on with a comfortable supply of beliefs when all is well with us.

Then there comes some frightful calamity and we turn to our beliefs and lo, most of them have vanished. Only one or two elemental things may be all that is left to us.

We lay hold of the truths that men live by.

3d. Suffering makes possible human sympathy. If it were not for sorrow, we would be hard and selfish and cruel. One touch of suffering makes the whole world kin.

*"Oh wheresoever these may be Betwixt the slumber of the poles
Today they count for kindred souls,
They know me not but mourn with me."*

It is a world with a great deal of sadness, failure and despair. I do not want to add so much as a feather's weight to the suffering of men. I feel drawn to men because they are fellow-sufferers. You have suffered, then you are my brother. I could not have it in my heart to harbor hatred toward any human being when I remember that he suffers. Suffering works towards enlarged sympathies.

A man cannot think his way into large sympathy with his fellowman.

At the outset Job prays for his family, a narrow circle, but when he has passed through his discipline and the Lord has turned again his captivity, he prays for his friends.

Suffering enables us to comfort others.

"The God of all comfort comforts us in our affliction, that we may be able to comfort others."

If we have passed under the rod we know the language of the land in which the broken-hearted dwell.

I once stopped with a family who a few months before had lost a little girl. The mother sang at the church the solo, "I shall see him face to face."

As we stood near the fresh sod at the new-made grave I spoke to the husband of the richness, purity and comforting power of her voice. His only reply was, "It's the little girl."

4th. Suffering gives us a sense of the divine friendship.

If suffering takes the form of the failure of human friendship, it casts us back on the divine friendship.

"There is the friend that sticketh closer than a brother."

*"He seems to hear a heavenly friend,
And through thick veils to apprehend,
A labor working to an end."*

5th. Suffering clarifies the spiritual vision. The eyes that see clearest have been bathed in tears. The surest way to God is up the lonely stream of tears.

*"I did not know till 'neath the rod
I passed, how sore I needed God;
In sorrow's night, lo, like a star
I saw his love shine from afar."*

*"I did not know till on a grave,
I saw the windblown grasses wave,
How futile and how fugitive
The baubles are for which we strive."*

*"I did not know, until above
God called the idol of my love,*

*Beyond the reach of yearning eyes,
How beautiful is paradise."*

Suffering gives to man the one necessary thing in life, a vision of God. Mere facts and truths piled mountain high may be so much useless lumber in the mind, but when we can say with Job, "Now mine eyes seeth thee," it is then we repent in dust and ashes. God may remove perplexities regarding His providence and ways from men's minds, but He does not do so by the immediate communication of intellectual light, but by flushing all the channels of thought and life with a deeper sense of himself. Under the flow of this fuller sense of God perplexities disappear just as rocks, which raise an angry surf when the tide is low, are covered and unknown when it is full. This is the meaning of God's manifestation to Job out of the storm. He brings himself and his full glory near to Job, and fills his mind with such a sense of God as he never had before,

"Now mine eyes seeth thee."

I am not competent to discuss the critical question as to whether the last chapter of Job, where Job's prosperity is restored two-fold is a part of the original or a later edition. I am frank to say, however, that I had rather look at the old patriarch, as he stands in the midst of his desolation, friends gone, fortune gone and family gone, looking up with eyes made clear by the washing tears. To see God is the best answer to all of the problems and perplexities of life.

pale pure lips with a sort of sad gentleness which proclaimed an intellect surely able to see the harsh truth of things, combined with a heart full of pity and mercy for all men. One couldn't help reverencing her. And how utterly unwanted by the typical modern woman is the reverence of man. Reverence, I thought, is the very last thing the modern woman desires. Marguerite Grey probably neither specially desired it nor even thought about it. But she commanded it by the obvious shining purity of her character. She was as deliciously unusual as her book. For once I had come upon a writer whose art expressed her nature. It was a wonder and a joy.

It seemed to me that I heard a faint sound outside my door in the corridor. I drew in from the window and listened. The Neufchatel clock chimed two.

There was surely a movement outside. I went to my door and opened it. The corridor was plunged in darkness, but looking down it beyond my door in the direction away from the staircase I saw what I can only describe as a tiny dying flare of light. It was gone even as I looked. And complete darkness and silence reigned. Some one had surely struck one of those matches called "Vesuvius," and it had gone out as I looked that way.

I stepped back into my room and shut my door.

"Mystical activity . . . opens with the sharp stimulation of the will which can only be obtained through the emotional life."

The words I had read that night remained in my head. I lay long in the dark thinking of the emotional life and of Marguerite Grey.

VI.

On the morrow an amazing thing happened. Soleil went to church. I know it because I went, too, and was both surprised and exasperated when I found he was to be of the party. The church lay about three-quarters of a mile from the house at the edge of the deer park. And I walked there with Miss Grey, Soleil, and half a dozen others. Lady Deresby and some of the women drove. Soleil sat with Miss Grey in a pew immediately in front of me, and really I never saw anything more ridiculous than his demeanor during the service. I'm certain that he hadn't set his foot in a church for years. There was an almost savage detachment from religion in his demeanor. He looked like a traveler in some country far distant from his own gazing for the first time at some extraordinary native rite. But he was completely at his ease. It was the others who were being preposterous.

Miss Grey took no notice of him during the service, and seemed as unaware of his presence as he was conscious of hers. I looked, I'm afraid, a good deal at the nape of her neck just below the bright tendrils of her hair. It was odd how purity seemed to be expressed by all of that girl. Even the nape of her young white neck looked to me astonishingly pure, as a little child's neck does. She worshiped with simplicity but with evidently complete concentration. The sermon, I remember, was quite interesting. She listened to it with earnest attention, her head turned a little towards the preacher. I felt that if I preached I should like to preach to her.

On the way home I made a discovery. It was this: that Soleil had met her before their encounter at Deresby. I overheard him say to her: "Ever since we ran across one another at Derby I've been meaning to get hold of your book. I shan't lose another day now. Tomorrow I shall nip into —what's the chap's name?"

"Which chap?" I heard her soft voice inquire.

"The library feller? Wait a bit! Moodie's, that's it! Moodie's! I shall nip in there and I shan't shake a leg till I've got it. By the way, what's a mystic? You ought to know if any one does!"

What's a mystic? Poor Marguerite Grey! What a martyrdom she must be enduring in such society! And the fellow wouldn't leave her alone. What irritated me most was his complete self-possession and air of absolute at-homeness with her. It was obvious that he didn't realize his dreadful inferiority to such a rare being. He couldn't have been more at his ease if he had been in the hunting field, or carrying his famous steeple chaser over the "sticks." It must need impenetrable stupidity to attain to such heights of self-possession. Really the fool has certain advantages in life. But I pitied her.

So they had run across one another at Derby, of all places. I couldn't help wondering about that. But of course I wouldn't inquire into the matter. It was no business of mine where Miss Grey had met any one. Only I had felt positive that Soleil had never seen her till they met on the lawn as I was coming back from tennis the day before. I hadn't heard what they said at that moment. But there had been something in Soleil's manner which had suggested to me an introduction. I wondered whether Lady Deresby knew—but of course she did!

Whether anything occurred at, or just after, lunch between Miss Grey and Soleil I don't know, but he kept away from her during the afternoon. This fact gave others a chance, and I took full advantage of it. I had intended to play a great deal of tennis, but as Miss Grey hadn't brought a racquet and acknowledged that she wasn't much of a player, I decided that it was too hot for running about and went for a stroll with her in the deer park, but not unaccompanied. Her curious charm had made its way through the house party. She was the celebrity of the moment. I couldn't expect, not being a hard shell like Soleil, to get her alone. We were quite a company in the deer park. But after tea—Soleil was then playing tennis as badly as a man who's forever in the saddle generally does—I had another longish conversation with her alone and learned a little more about her.

I found out that she lived abroad, at Versailles. That accounted for the fact that scarcely any one in England seemed to know her. She had met Lady Deresby in Paris. She seemed to know Paris very well. I remembered that I couldn't "see" her in Paris and told her so.

"Why?" she asked, apparently surprised.

"There's something so—so—" I hesitated, while she looked at me with the simple earnestness that was characteristic of her. "So cloistered about you," I said, at length. "And modern Paris is such a hurly burly of feverish materialism!"

"Is it?" she said.

Quite evidently she hadn't thought of Paris as that. She must see many things, I realized, with quite different eyes from mine.

"Well, it always seems to me," I said, feeling, I scarcely knew why, rather ashamed of myself.

Perhaps in an endeavor to reinstate myself in my own good graces, or possibly in hers, I added, "And society in Paris is surely one mad pursuit of pleasure and of the novelty of the moment, however unworthy or even disgusting it may be."

"Perhaps you're right," she said, very gently. "But I don't think I had observed it."

And then I felt a self-righteous beast, and I felt also that it must be the evil in myself which found evil elsewhere.

VII.

That night at dinner Soleil wasn't put next to Miss Grey but I was, by the kind offices of Lady Deresby. Before we went up to dress she said, "Whom would you like to be put next to at dinner tonight?"

"Miss Grey," I replied, without hesitation.

"Very well, you shall sit next to her," said my kind hostess. "I'm glad you like her."

"But every one likes her."

"It seems so. And yet she's so totally unmodern, makes no attempt to follow any fashion, and seems half the time to be living in another world than ours."

"I think that makes her attractive," I said. "She suggests things that are over the horizon. She tells me she met you in Paris."

"Yes. And she's just the same in Paris. They call her 'The Dreamer' there. She lives at Versailles with her sister, Madame de Samaran, and very seldom comes over here."

"She's been to Derby," I said casually.

SPORTS—GAMES—PUZZLES—RIDDLES

THE PUZZLERS AT THE CIRCUS

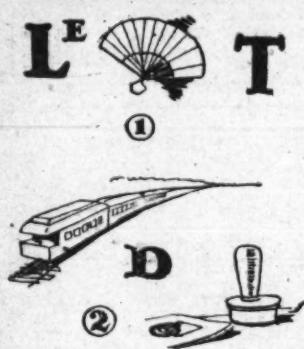

By CECILLE LYON.
The circus is coming again! And gee, what fun it brings—the wild animals—real ones from Africa, too—the funny Fat Ladies and Thin Twin Sisters! Today's puzzles are all about the circus, and should furnish much fun.

—1—
Guess this word diamond, built around one of the funniest circus characters:

N

Harmless Pets

In a word chain—last letter of the first word is the first letter of the second; the last letter of the second word is the first letter of the third, and so on, the last letter of the last word being the first letter of the first.

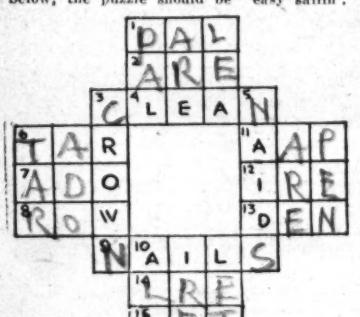

In this circus word chain, the first word is the smallest personage of the troupe; the second is one of the wild animals; the third is the arena; next is the opposite of the first word; last is one of the cooperating groups. Can you make up the chain?

One of the mysterious characters of the circus is concealed in this sentence:

"On the subject of magic, I answer about fifty letters daily."

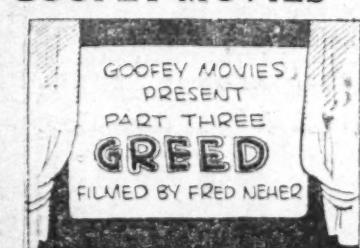

Word-Squarets

The four words revealed are the roots for the word squares extending on all sides, and also are parts of connecting five-letter words in the center. With the definitions given below, the puzzle should be "easy sailin'."

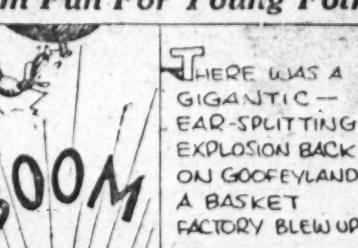

1. Churn.
2. Exist.
3. (Horizontal). Pure.
4. Vertical.
5. (Horizontal). Head ornament.
6. Invades.
7. Thick, black substance.
8. To do.
9. Friends.
10. Anger.
11. Lair.
12. Solidified water.
13. Allow.

GOOFY MOVIES

OSCAR BUGG, PLAYING THE PART OF DILL PICKLE, BOUGHT A BALLOON—HE DECIDED TO BLOW THIS BALLOON UP—but he blew too hard and was soon carried up into the sky.

AND HERE HE IS HOLDING ON TO HIS RED-BALLOON WITH ONLY ONE HAND WONDERING WHAT WILL HAPPEN TO HIM NEXT—

THERE WAS A GIGANTIC—EAR-SPLITTING EXPLOSION BACK ON GOOFYLAND! A BASKET FACTORY BLEW UP!

Can You Name the World's Wonders?

How many boys and girls can name offhand the Seven Wonders of the World, even after having studied them in their work at school?

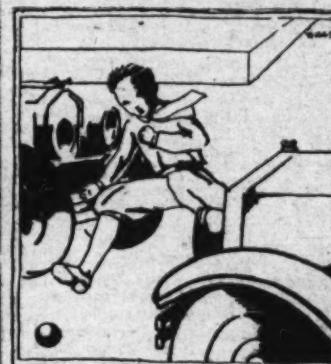

These are really monuments to the work of men during different periods of our civilization, and were noted for their splendor and the enormous size to which they were built.

While we live at a time when the aeroplane, radio, telephone, ships and tall buildings may be classed as wonders, we must remember that the original Seven Wonders were erected by men without the knowledge of tools with which our workers are equipped.

Here is the list; let's paste it in our scrap-books and remember it the next time we are asked:

Pyramids of Egypt.
Temple of Diana at Ephesus.
The Mausoleum.
The Lighthouse of Alexandria.
Hanging Gardens of Babylon.
Statue of Jupiter at Athens.
The Colossus of Rhodes.

What's the Matter?

Answer will be found elsewhere in this page.

HOW MANY OF THESE RIDDLES CAN YOU SOLVE?

241. Why is a five dollar bill more valuable than five silver dollars?—Marie L. Smith, Waterloo, Iowa.

242. What man mentioned in the Bible had no parents?—Eloise Foster, Crowley, Louisiana.

243. How do locomotives hear?—Paul Kinsler, Salt Lake City, Utah.

244. What is the difference between a donkey and a postage stamp?—E. H. Wenslow, Sandusky, Ohio.

245. Why are laws like the ocean?—William J. McGuirk, North Walpole, New Hampshire.

246. Why is a lame dog like a schoolboy adding 6 to 7?—Russel Eash, Elkhart, Indiana.

247. Why is a schoolmaster like the letter C?—Raymond Cross, St. Louis, Missouri.

248. What has more lives than a cat?—M. E. F.

249. How many pears are there in a pint?—Marvin Riddle, Badger, South Dakota.

250. What kind of a ship has two mates but no captain?—Raymond Everett, Minnesota.

POSERS!

Here are some "posers" that would have you running to your encyclopedia if we should happen to forget to print the answers somewhere on this page. Maybe we might judge you, though, and you will be smart enough to guess them all. If you are, you can congratulate yourself on your knowledge.

1. Where was Shakespeare born?

2. What is an equilateral triangle?

3. Where and what is Genoa?

4. What is a crypt?

5. Who wrote "The Lay of the Last Minstrel?"

6. Who was Confucius?

7. What are raisins?

8. How many are there in a gross?

Now about a riddle? Do you know a new, original one that you'd like printed on this page with your name? Send it in to the Riddle Editor, one of this newspaper, and watch for it!

THE ABANDONED MINE

The Adventures of Two Boys Who Try to Solve a Kidnapping Mystery

BY W. BOYCE MORGAN

SYNOPSIS

Ted, Holmes and Bill Watson, who have ambitions to be detectives, find an opportunity for the use of their powers when Bill's young sister, Dorothy, disappears. One May morning the three boys awoke to find their bed empty, and they at once fear that kidnappers have stolen her. While the police investigate the case, Ted and Bill decide to do some detecting of their own, and thinking that the kidnappers might hide the child in an abandoned coal mine near town, they go there to investigate. They enter the mine and Ted, in the lead, trips and falls down the slippery shaft. Into the water, below, he crawls, comes out on a rock bottom, gets no farther, and Bill dashes out, climbs on his bicycle, and goes for help. Riding down the hill from the mine, he hits a root, crashes into a tree, and is knocked half unconscious.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

INSTALLMENT III.

Bill must have lain at the foot of the tree for several minutes before his brain started to clear. The first thing that he realized was that his head ached dreadfully, and putting his hand up to it, he found a huge bump under the hair. Dimly he remembered that Ted was in danger, and that he must bring help. Ted was in the old mine—he knew that—and couldn't get out. He must get a rope.

He scrambled to his feet, and gazed down at his bicycle. The handle bars were twisted and the front fork was bent. Straddling the front wheel, he turned the bar back, and found that the fork was not bent enough to prevent him from riding. He mounted the bicycle and started down the road again, more carefully this time, but still thinking dazedly that he must hurry.

Meanwhile the darkness and the cold of the old mine was rapidly sapping Ted's courage. It seemed to him that Bill must have been gone for hours. Not a sound broke the silence save the drip of the water from the roof. The inky blackness of the hole made any attempt to investigate his surroundings impossible.

Ted's sudden bath in the icy spring water that filled this depression in the cold, the dampness, the darkness and the silence were unnerving to the boy. He began to hear imaginary sounds. He began to imagine a thousand and one things that might happen to him here. Bill might not get help, and nobody would be able to find him. And then, just when he was getting closer and closer to the point where the last bit of his courage would have oozed away, he heard the sound of voices above him, seeming to enter the mine.

Who was it? Was it Bill returning with help? A feeling of immense relief flooded over him as Bill's well-known voice was raised in a shout. "Yeh, Ted! Are you still down there?"

Ted replied with a glad cry. The rays of a light lit up the shaft above him, and turned down, almost blinded him, as it struck his eyes.

"Oh, there you are," cried somebody, and Ted recognized the voice of Bill's father. "Well, Ted, you are in a pickle. But we'll have you out in a minute. Here, Bill," he went on, turning to him, "give me that tow rope."

While Bill held the flashlight, his father gathered up the tow rope of the car and prepared to throw it down. Ted could now see, in the rays of the flashlight, that the slope down which he had slipped was less than 20 feet long, but quite steep. The shaft broadened out here, and it seemed to be about 12 feet across to the other wall. Evidently in the days when the mine had been worked this had been a chamber from which the coal had been removed. The ledge of rock upon which he had clambered was only a few feet wide, but it extended the full length of the hole.

"Can you catch this, Ted?" asked Mr. Watson, preparing to throw the rope to him. "Sure," called Ted, rather vaguely because of his chattering teeth. "Gee, I could almost climb up there without a rope, now that I see what it's like."

"Better not try it," replied Mr. Watson. "It's wet and slippery, and you don't want another bath. All right—here comes the rope!"

kept going, and just after I got to the brick road I met Dad in the car."

"Yes," continued Mr. Watson, "Bill's mother got worried when he said he was going to look for Dorothy and dashed away on his bicycle, and I started out to find you two young sleuths. The man in the garage at the edge of town told me he had seen you come out this way, so I followed."

"But where's Dorothy? Did they catch the kidnappers?" asked Ted.

Mr. Watson laughed. "That little imp gave us a bad scare for nothing," he explained, "and now I guess the whole town is laughing at us. Mrs. Murphy, who lives two houses from us, brought her back just a little while after you fellows left. She found her sleeping in the apple bin in her cellar. Dorothy explained that she woke this morning and was hungry, and as Mrs. Murphy always gives her apples, she quietly put on some clothes and went foraging. Mrs. Murphy's cellar door was unlocked, and she went in, helped herself, and then fell asleep in the bin. No wonder we couldn't find her."

"For eat's sake!" Ted was just a little bit disappointed at the outcome of the kidnapping. "But how about those auto tracks in the road?"

"Oh, probably some one drove up there to pick daisies," said Mr. Watson. "They are thick along there, you know."

Ted was silent as he climbed into the car. Mr. Watson turned it, Ted loaded his bicycle on the running board, and they started back down the hill.

"Well," said Ted, "I guess we aren't such good detectives, Bill."

Just then the car hit a bump and Bill, occupied with holding his own bicycle on the other running board, was too busy to reply.

"I think you are pretty good ones, myself," said Mr. Watson. "If she had really been kidnapped maybe you would have found her."

Ted settled into the back seat, his one arm holding the bicycle. "Gosh, I'm cold," he said. "And hungry, too," he added.

The End.

My Pet---

A Goat That Goes to School.

Pets, pets, and more pets! The letters that come from children about their favorite animals and birds make the postman think that the pet business is one of the country's leading industries. And it is a leading industry in the hearts of the children who read the Boys and Girls' page.

Mary had a little lamb that followed her to school one day, but Mary's lamb had nothing on Ward's goat. Ward's last name is Britton, his home is in Letcher, South Dakota, and his pet's name is Maggie. Maggie is a pure-bred Toggenburg goat; says Ward. One day she followed him to school and he had to give her part of his luncheon. Maggie's favorite occupation is climbing all over everything. She even ventures into the hog house and romps around on the rafters! That's a pretty brave stunt, even for a goat!

A Dog That Disciplines Other Dogs.

This dog is a curly water spaniel named Bill, owned by Eva Marguert of Madison, South Dakota. He is brown with a white spot on his breast. Pulling a wagon or a sled loaded with groceries or children is only one of his tricks, but one that his owner appreciates. When Bill goes hunting he goes into the water and brings back the ducks that have been shot, and when he is thirsty he stands with his paws on the sink and washes. He scratches on the door to get in or out, chases a stick, and goes to meet the paper boy and carries in the paper!

But Bill's prize stunt is this: He will not chase automobiles himself and when he sees other dogs chasing them, he gives them a good shaking when they get back. Bill seems to have all the qualifications of a great reformer!

George E. Kammann, of St. Louis, has an unusual pet. It is a bird several years old and when you put on your hat, or let a stranger into the room, he chirps with all his might. Perhaps the bird has some good reason for that. We wonder what it is.

Have you a pet? Write and tell about his tricks. Address, The "My Pet" Editor, in care of this newspaper.

THE LETTER WRITERS' CLUB

SHAWMUT, ALA.

Dear Kiddies: Will you move over and let a little Alabama girl in for just a few moments. I just want a little room. I have black hair, brown eyes and fair skin. When will your school be out. Ours will be out the last of this month. Well, I will write you a poem:

THE BOY AND HIS CAP.

I know a boy who's eyes are bright, And sharper than a cat's at night; He never even has to squint, When looking at the finest print.

A thousand things he's sure to spy; Things that escape his mother's eye; But though his bright eyes fairly snap, He never, somehow, sees, his cap.

I've seen him hunt it everywhere, On every table, every chair; And when his strength was wasted quite, His mother saw it, plain in sight.

I wonder if some fellow here Can make this funny thing quite clear; Can tell me why a bright-eyed chap Can never, never, find his cap.

You boys and girls write to me and I will answer all letters I get.

Your unknown friend,
GLADYS GULLATT.

WINSTON, GA.

Hello to all the members of the letter writers' club: Oh, no, you don't have to move over any further for me. I am already a member and just wanted to let you know I hadn't left you members. We have been getting The Constitution for—well, ever since I can remember and I don't see how we could hardly do without it.

I like to read all of the letters you folks write and the funnies too. I like Winnie Winkle and Little Orphan Annie best of all. I guess I will like Andy Gumps now, if he does not brag too much. I like for Chester to go to Australia for it gets more interesting. I hope he doesn't get lost from Uncle Bill like he did before, don't you? How many of you like to go to school? I do, but our school closed Friday, April 30. I was in the seventh grade, but was promoted to the eighth. I am 11 years old. I will be 12 July 24. Haxie I a twin? I am 5 feet, 3 inches tall, have brown hair, blue eyes and fair complexion. My father and mother are both living. Listen, I live close to a river and you bet I don't miss going in bathing either. Some of you members come and visit me and we will go in swimming, for I know all of you like to, don't you? It certainly is raining here now, but I don't much care as we were kind of needing rain. Don't you think so? All of you boys and girls that want to may write me and I guarantee I shall answer all letters received. Send your pictures if you possibly can.

An unknown friend,
WILMA DANIELL.
Route 2, Box 66.

PENSACOLA, FLA.

Dear Friends: I wonder would you admit a girl from west Florida? I have enjoyed reading the letters several times, but have never seen any from this part of Florida. I notice that most of you tell something about your school. I am not lucky enough to be able to tell anything of my school, as sickness prevented me from going nearly four years. I have been in bed a good bit of the time, and am now convalescing after being in bed almost a year. I want to tell you little friends about Pensacola. It is located in the northwestern part of Florida on the bay in Escambia county. A real pretty little city of 35,000 population. Pensacola has several paved highways, among them one 26 miles long leading to the gulf. I have never been able to ride that far but my friends say it's so nice for surfing. We have several other bathing beaches closer by. We have free pictures twice a week, also swings, see-saws, etc. A great many people are enjoying bathing now. I would like to hear from any one, especially the ones who are sick. I assure all will receive an answer.

Sincerely,
LUCILLE SHANK.

2002 Peterson St.

DOUGLASSVILLE, GA.

Dear Unknown Friends: I decided I would write to the letter writers' club at last. I am a girl 10 years old, have blue eyes, brown hair and fair complexion. Well! I haven't any pets. I play jacks most all the time. I take music and I have a grand teacher. Her name is Miss Major Upshaw. Oh! I can't hardly wait until school is out, but yet I won't have anything to do. I like to go on hikes, go in swimming and all kinds of other sports and I also like to go to a picture show. Some of you write to me and I will answer.

Your unknown friend,
VIRGINIA DUNCAN.

DOUGLASSVILLE, GA.

Dear Boys and Girls: Will you let another Georgia girl join your happy writing club? I am a happy little girl 10 years old. I weigh 50 pounds. I am 4 feet, 1 inch tall. I go to school and am in the second grade. I have a real good teacher.

Your unknown friend,
MINNIE SWOFFORD.

TROY, N. C.

Dear Boys and Girls: I guess you all remember me for my letter appeared in The Constitution some time ago. Perhaps some of you have forgotten how I look. I have brown bobbed hair, blue eyes and fair complexion. I am 15 years old, am 5 feet, 3 inches tall and weigh 103 pounds. I am sending a song. I hope you like it. I call it

THE CLUB SONG.

I. We're a band of writers gay, Writing more day by day.

And we think of every club ours is the best.

Writing letters, that's our fun, We all enjoy it, yes every one.

CHORUS.

Shout three cheers for the letter writers' club, 'Tis the finest club we know, there the letters all are fine. You can read them just by trying, 'Tis the nicest thing for boys and girls to do.

II.

On this page we are no bluff; Beat us and you've beat enough. And we try some poetry too, Verses old and verses new.

If you don't believe it read our page. (Chorus Again.)

How do you like it? It is to the tune of "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp." I hope every one likes it. I have received 22 letters since I wrote to The Constitution and I am still wanting to get more. Every one write to me. I will answer.

Your friend,
GRACE DEATON.

WINSTON, GA.

Dear Unknown Friends: Here comes another Georgia boy. I go to school at Winston, and am in the sixth grade. I sure do like my teacher. I am 4 feet, 7 inches tall. I have dark hair, brown eyes and dark complexion. My birthday is August 26. Who is my twin? How many of you boys and girls live on a farm? I do. I have a calf for a pet. What do you do for pastime? I go to school and read story books. I like to read funnies too. In The Constitution I like Annie, Perry, Elmer, Kayo and Chester. I like Buttons and Fatty, too. I think the editor is very kind to let the boys and girls have a letter writers' club. Some of you boys and girls write to me and I will answer all letters received.

Your unknown friend,
HOYT STRAWN.

CORNELIUS, N. C.

Hello Kiddies: Please make room for me in your jolly club. I am a reader of The Constitution because daddy takes it every week. I think it is a fine paper, especially the letter writers' club. I have dark brown eyes, brown hair, medium complexion, weigh 86 pounds, am 4 feet, 10 inches tall and am 12 years old. I was promoted to the seventh grade when school was out the last of April. I had three teachers. I go to Cornelius high school.

I am still blessed with father and mother and two little sisters, one six years old and the other two years old. Also a brother who is nine years old and will be in the fourth grade next year. I have no pets, because my collie dog "Rex" died. Please all of you write to me and I will assure you an answer.

Your friend,
VIRGINIA RODGERS.
Box 42.

BUFORD, GA.

Hello Kiddies: Get over and give some room for a new member to join your happy band. I am 8 years old. My birthday is January 29. My school is out now. I will be in the fourth grade next time. I nearly forgot to tell you where I go to school. I go to Gravel Springs. I have one little brother. He is 6 years old. I have two little sisters. One of them is 4 years old and the other is two. I like to read story books very much. And I like flowers too. I live on a farm. I hope my letter is printed. I will answer all letters. All of you write to me.

Your unknown friend,
CAROLINE GUNTER.

EASTMAN, GA.

Dear Boys and Girls: Will you please admit a Georgia girl into your happy band of boys and girls? I have been reading the letters and decided I would try and see if I would be admitted to the club. What do you cousins do for pastime? I'm going to school and am in the ninth grade. I sure enjoy going to school. I am 5 feet, 8 inches tall. I have wavy hair, blue eyes, light complexion, am 14 years old and weigh 102 pounds. I will be delighted to correspond with any of you cousins. I will answer all letters received.

Your new friend,
GLADYS SAPP.

Hello Dear Cousins One and All: Please let another Georgia cracker join your happy circle. I think you can spare enough room for me. I am a little girl 12 years old, am 5 feet tall and weigh 96 pounds. I have bobbed hair of an auburn color, blue eyes and fair complexion. I live in a pretty little cotton mill village 40 miles north of Atlanta. I have completed the seventh grade. My favorite study is arithmetic. I haven't any pets, but I have one little brother and one sister. My father is a subscriber of The Constitution and I am a constant reader of the paper, especially of the funnies and the letter writers' club. I like Uncle Walt, Winnie Winkle and Little Orphan Annie. I would like to start a correspondence with some of you boys and girls, as I like to write and receive letters. All letters received will be answered. Send your photos if possible.

Your new cousin,

: : : :

"To Derby?" said Lady Deresby, with a touch of surprise. "What makes you think so?"

"I heard Captain Hammington mention the fact that he'd met her there when we were out walking today."

"O!" she said.

And I thought she looked more surprised; but she didn't make any further remark till I added, "It's extraordinary to see him with Miss Grey, isn't it? He asked her today what a mystic is."

"Soleil is a great ignoramus," said Lady Deresby. "But women don't mind that. What women like in a man, he possesses."

"Really!" I said. "And what is that?"

"Supreme self-confidence. The conviction that he's as good as any other man and much better than most."

"I don't think that would cut much ice with our beautiful mystic," I said, I fear rather eagerly.

Lady Deresby looked at me for a moment in silence. And I thought her fine eyes were somehow like Mrs. Dicky Lester's just then. Then she murmured, "Difficult to say!"

"But surely a nature like that, ultra refined, immaterial—an absurd expression, I know, but it gives what I mean!—even visionary, couldn't feel the attraction of the stable!" I exclaimed.

"Anyhow, the stable feels the attraction of the visionary. Soleil invited himself here this week-end."

"Then he knew Miss Grey was coming?"

"I don't know. I didn't tell him," said Lady Deresby. And then it was time to dress.

For some reason that I could perhaps hardly have defined this brief conversation made a faintly unpleasant impression upon me. While I was dressing for dinner I felt slightly uneasy, even slightly apprehensive. Something disagreeable seemed to have happened. And yet what had happened? I told myself—nothing. But women, even the dearest women, have a curious power of irritating an enthusiastic man's nerves when the subject discussed with them happens to be a woman he thinks perfection.

At dinner that night Mrs. Lester and Soleil were placed side by side opposite to Miss Grey and myself, and I noticed that the latter's narrow eyes were often fixed upon us. It had occurred to me that something must have happened between Miss Grey and Soleil. Otherwise why should Soleil have so suddenly and completely dropped out of the "running?" But if anything had taken place between them it had certainly not dashed his good spirits. He looked as larky and impudent as ever, and his loud, self-possessed voice dominated the conversations around him.

"What a lot of character there is in a voice!" I couldn't help saying to Miss Grey at one moment, after a particularly noisy outburst from him.

"Sometimes," she said.

"I wonder what you judge people by," I added. "I believe somehow that you are terrible accurate in your judgments."

"But, perhaps," she said, gently. "I don't want to judge at all."

And once again I was slightly abashed by what I felt was a curious combination in her, a combination of acuteness with a purity that, though realizing the existence of evil, saw it like a thing in the distance. She was acute. I knew that. She had made more than one drastic remark to me, for instance that remark about evil being frequently a deliberate assertion of the whole man. And yet her softness made me feel what a brute I was in condemning. I had thought of her as emphatically all of a piece. Yet weren't there some contradictions even in her?

I looked across the flowers at Mrs. Lester. Her eyes were on Miss Grey and there was the shadow of a smile on her lips.

VIII.

That night, when I went upstairs to change into a loose smoking jacket, I saw Marguerite Grey going into a bedroom a little beyond mine, up the corridor, further away from the staircase than my room was. She saw me as she was opening her door and her pale, pure lips smiled a gentle "Good night."

I didn't change into a smoking jacket. Suddenly I felt disinclined to join the men downstairs. Billiards, stories, jokes—no, I wanted none of those downstairs things. And I shot the bolt of my door and resolved to stay where I was. Already it was half past eleven. My room was deliciously warm. I would undress, get into pajamas, and smoke a last cigar over a book by the open window.

A few minutes later I went to my bookcase and looked over it. Among the books—I hadn't noticed it before—was "The Mystic." When I saw it I didn't hesitate, but took it down from the shelf. I had read it more than once, like most other people. I knew some of it almost by heart. But

I could read it again now, and with an entirely fresh pleasure in it. For I had made friends with its delicious writer, that enchanting girl up the corridor.

* * * *

When at last I put the book down, having read it right through again from cover to cover, it was deep in the night—I suddenly felt. Or perhaps—wasn't the dawn very near? I got up and went to the window. Yes, I had read into the beginning of dawn. There was a peculiar freshness in the air. Here and there a sleepy, half tentative chirp announced the awakening of the birds. And there was a faint grayish light over the world. In it I saw some shadowy red deer moving over the dew-laden grass. I closed my shutters and extinguished my light, preparatory to slipping into bed.

I had my hand on the cool sheet and one knee on the bed when I heard a sound in the corridor. There was, I thought at once, something peculiar about it, though it came to me very faintly. Instantly I remembered the sound I had heard on the previous night, and the swiftly dying tiny flare of light I had seen. I took my knee from the bed, my hand from the sheet, went over barefoot to my door and listened, at the same time softly drawing back the bolt, and putting a hand on the door handle.

I still heard the faint noise, a slow something. Yes, the noise oddly suggested slowness, heaviness—or weariness. And it wasn't ordinary. There was something inexplicable about it.

Very gently I turned the door handle and slightly opened my door. My room, now the shutters were closed, was dark. But I saw a faint gray of dawn in the corridor. And I now heard what sounded like laboring breath and a curious noise as of something being dragged over carpet, and these noises seemed to be quite close to me.

I opened the door a little wider and looked into the corridor.

In the pale gray of dawn I saw a very slim girl in a long silk dressing gown dragging the prone body of a tall man in pajamas along the corridor over the carpet. She had fast hold of both his hands and was moving along sideways, bending and breathing hard. His hanging head was off the floor with part of his body and, of course, his hands and arms. It seemed to me that he was certainly dead. I was held in a fascination of horror and could neither move nor speak. A little beyond me the girl stopped, seemed to hesitate, then carefully, with an awful care, let the whole body go to the floor, wrenched away her hands, and, with a hideous tentativeness, opened a door and looked into the room beyond.

It was, I knew, Soleil's room, and I knew that the man lying there was Soleil. Having looked and made sure, the girl turned quite round towards me to lift up again the man's hand and head from the floor. It was Marguerite Grey transformed. Instead of the delicate mystic I saw a hard, desperate, resolute woman. She didn't see me. Her fierce eyes were fixed on the dead man. (I knew by this time he was dead.) As I watched, with a violent effort she got hold of him again, and slowly vanished into the bedroom, dragging him with her. The last parts of him I saw were his two long legs jerking over the carpet toward the bedroom door.

Then I heard a door softly shut. In about five minutes I heard her come out and steal back again to her room.

* * * *

Next morning—I hadn't had any sleep—I went down to the breakfast room about half past nine. (With many of the house party at Deresby I was going up to town by an early train.) Lady Deresby was there with several of her guests, and I had scarcely begun breakfast when the door opened and Marguerite Grey came in looking just as usual. She greeted us all with her charming and gentle smile and sat down in a chair beside me. She was also going up to town by my train. I tried to talk to her, but I think it ended in her talking to me, with that curious evasive grace of hers, that yet seemed wonderfully sincere.

When the bells in the clock tower chimed ten Lady Deresby said, "But where's Soleil? He's got to catch the early train, too. He told me so. If he doesn't take care he'll be late."

She turned to a footman. "Just go up to Captain Hammington's room, will you, Henry, and tell him he hasn't got much time."

"Yes, my lady."

The footman went off. In about three minutes he came back, looking scared. During those three minutes Marguerite Grey was peeling a peach. And I never saw a peach peeled more perfectly.

"Well, Henry," said Lady Deresby, "did you tell Captain Hammington?"

"No, my lady," stammered Henry.

"Why not?"

"Because—I'm very sorry, my

"MONA LISA" :: :: :: ::

BY LEONARDO

This is the 15th of a series of 52 greatest paintings which represent the choice of the art directors and connoisseurs throughout North America. Reproduction of this art masterpiece appears in the rotogravure section of today's Constitution.

BY EUGENE P. CONLEY

Long before the historians started carving history's pages on slabs of stone, men had differences of opinion as to the types and features that constituted beauty in the human face. Some preferred this type; others leaned towards that type. Even the future husband of Helen of Troy, acting as judge, had to be bribed before awarding the "Apple of Discord" to Venus, proclaiming her the most beautiful woman in the world.

Many years later, or to be exact, in 1506, Leonardo da Vinci, great Italian painter, then aged 54, put the finishing touches to a picture he labeled "Mona Lisa," which the whole world has since risen in unison, and free from bribe, proclaimed it to be the loveliest likeness and the most beautiful picture of the human face ever painted. Finishing touches did I write? Out with it! Thirteen years later when Leonardo lay on his death bed, he mumbled regret that he wouldn't live to finish this painting. Time has clipped off over four hundred years since Leonardo laid down his brush. Many great artists have come and gone since his day, but none has matched his masterpiece. Walter Pater refers to it as the "Despair of Painters."

The wife of Zanobi del Giocondo was the model for "Mona Lisa." Her elusive half-smile delighted Leonardo. He wanted to paint it in his "Mona," so to keep this expression in her countenance, he amused her by telling stories and having music played during the sittings. There is nothing that furnishes inspiration like love. So it is assumed that Leonardo loved this model, must have loved her else there wouldn't be any "Mona Lisa" today.

Osvald Siren speaks of "the large noble figure, the wonderful sensitive hands, the inimitable face with its spiritual values, which unite to form an image dominating every surrounding circumstance"—but even that falls far short of a description of the painting. "Mona Lisa" defies analysis. Every feature about the painting brings out all the sublime sweetness of womanhood. Mona Lisa, even with your bewitching smile, you are divine.

Leonardo, upon completing the picture, announced that it was not for sale. He painted it for himself. But the king of France wanted it and offered the unheard of sum of $8,000.00, so Leonardo sold it. It has been reported, though never confirmed, that the British government, not so many years ago, offered $5,000,000.00 for the same picture, but the French government wouldn't listen.

Great was the consternation throughout France on August 11, 1911, when the shocking news spread that "Mona Lisa" had been stolen from the Louvre. The news created tremendous excitement. Every art dealer throughout Europe joined the detectives in the search. Hope had almost been abandoned for its recovery when Sig. Geri, an antiquary of Florence, Italy, caused the arrest of Vincenzo Perugia on December 11, 1913, charging him with the theft. Perugia confessed. The painting was found in his room in good condition. Fired with patriotism, he had stolen it to avenge the spoilage of the Napoleonic armies. The painting was placed on exhibition in Florence and Rome, and the police encountered considerable trouble in keeping order among the thousands that gathered to view this celebrated picture, painted by their own Leonardo. When the news reached Paris the sensation it caused was equalled only by its disappearance. The Paris newspapers published special editions announcing its recovery.

Today Mona is back home—back in the Louvre—back with that same lovely, haunting smile that has won the admiration of the entire art world.

BARRACUDA

INSTALLMENT XVIII.

 ND I am going to follow you down from this office." He gave a precautionary glance over his shoulder toward the hall that led to the kitchen, but a slight sound from the back of the house located Selma for them. He bent still closer, whispering rapidly for a moment. She raised her head a little, round, startled blue eyes looking into his face. Her lips released an articulation so soft that it was hardly audible: "You'll be careful?"

The murmurous, anxious note mysteriously claimed him. That unfulfilled thing of the afternoon swept over him again. She was so near, just at the verge of slipping close within his dream, her soft anxiety was so yielding that of itself, naturally as breathing, his arm went round her shoulders and he was whispering, "I love you."

To her also it appeared to come naturally as breathing. She showed none of the reactions which a maiden is supposed to exhibit under like circumstances, but looked calmly into his eyes and smiled; then, yielding to the pressure of his arm, bent toward him. Their lips met.

"Such a lot to say!" he babbled witlessly under his breath. But with a quick look of warning she drew back; his arms fell away from her shoulders; the next instant Selma's large figure filled the doorway—looking soberly down at them.

"I've made some tea," she said stolidly.

"Thank you, Selma, I don't care for any," Louise replied.

The cook looked down at them an instant more and turned away, with no tangible change of expression—yet Latham felt there was something derisive about her, and her coming into the room reminded him that he should not linger very long. There were some necessary things to be said, so he glanced significantly at the corked bottle of mineral water and warned, low: "You stick to that."

She nodded, proposing not to be drugged again and urged, "But tell me more about tonight."

Rapidly, under his breath, in whispers, he explained further and concluded, "You must manage to lock her in her bedroom after she's gone to bed. Get the key out of the lock first, then lock her in from the outside. I think you can do it."

"I'm sure I can."

By that time he felt how incongruous it was—love, all hopelessly mixed up with this other ghastly and exigent business. On the heels of her reply he said, "I loved you the first time I saw you."

She slipped her hand into his: "You will be careful tonight?"

"No trouble about me," he whispered back, his brow puckering, his arm going round her shoulders again. "It's you! I hate fearfully to leave it this way. Somebody ought to be with you. . . . Those wolves. . . . You can't tell."

She murmured back, "I'm not afraid. I'll lock her in. I'm sure I'll be all right."

He still glowered over it. "Of course, I want to catch them. They're horrible wretches. Two men killed already. Cunning brutes, too, you see. That's the trouble about bringing in too many men—bringing in anybody we're not sure of. A blockhead might blab or show himself. The sheriff's going to Tampa—and I'm not too sure of him either; he's under Donahue's thumb. I've tried to think of somebody else. . . . He drew her toward him. "I hate, like the very devil, to leave you so."

Yielding to his arm, smiling a little, she answered, "Why, no! I'm going to be all right. I'll lock Selma in. I'm not afraid of her in the open. I'll eat nothing, drink nothing. You mustn't bother about me."

He brushed his cheek against her hair and was still a moment; then he said, "You're all there is in the world to bother about. . . . For a cent I'd give the other up!"

She put her hand on his arm, persuasively, "O, no! Not on my account. I'll be perfectly safe now that I'm on my guard. I want those men caught, too, you know. I want you to catch them. You must go on with it."

For a moment he only looked unhappy, although his arm was around her. He then gave a little sigh, arose, and tiptoed to the hall door, which he noiselessly swung shut lest Selma see them unaware. Returning to the table, he took Egan's revolver from his pocket.

"You must keep this always at your hand. It's double action. See? You just press the trigger."

"I know," she answered, and reached for the weapon.

The moment she took it he saw she understood the mechanism. With that black, murderous thing in it her hand looked like a child's and so pretty it invited kisses. He dropped to his knees by the chair, his face distorted, thrusting both arms round her waist:

"I love you, Lou. I'd die for you. And the best I can do is to give you that thing and tell you to protect yourself."

It sounded so desperate that she gave a low little laugh, "Don't be foolish about me. I'll be perfectly all right. Don't be foolish about yourself, either. We'll have plenty of time to talk when this other's all over. . . . Only"—the arms tightened round his head—"You'll be careful tonight. Promise me that!"

Of course he promised; and on the heels of it she gave a soft "S-s-s-h!" pushing him away. He sprang up, stepped to the door and opened it upon Selma, while Louise hid the revolver under her skirt.

"You keep good watch tonight, Selma; I've got to go to Tampa," Latham enjoined. "Let's see how the kitchen door is." On that pretense he got Selma out of sight so that Louise could hide the revolver in her bedroom. Some conversation intended for the cook's ears followed. Selma turned toward the kitchen. He stooped swiftly to meet her uplifted lips, and she was laughing at him because he had to steal a kiss behind the cook's back. That was the last he saw of her—laughing—as he went ruefully out.

He was out on the sidewalk in the strangest confusion, the touch of her lips still sensibly warm and soft on his—and she laughing at him for having to steal a kiss behind Selma's back. . . . Had there ever before been anything like this, with murder, sheriffs, deadly stratagems, and kisses so mixed up together? His blood raced from the soft touch of her lips—but what was he doing now? What was he leaving her to? That was the worst—leaving her so. He tried to shake all that out of his mind and set himself singly to the grim business ahead; but his blood would race, his heart would dilate, his head go round.

Deputy Sheriff Bassett dropped Snyder at the weather beaten four-barred gate to the Yates place. On the ground, by way of adieu, Snyder gave a faint smile and a slight wave of his hand. The small, whipcord man in the machine replied only with a little nod. Snyder's movements were now rapid and precise. Walking rapidly with firm steps, he came around in front of the dismal old house, and his wife on the decaying veranda arose to meet him, her hands some brown eyes questioning.

"It's coming on," he said. "Of course there was no chance to talk, but Latham gave me a nod as I came away. There's been no telephone?"

"No."

"Then it must be coming on. He's taken the bait. What about Sam?"

"I've got him locked up in Selma's bedroom. The electric light's disconnected. He wouldn't tell me anything. But he's scared. I told him you'd kill him." She made the statement calmly, without smiling.

"We may as well wait till after dark," said Snyder, "and have some supper. He considered a moment and gave his judgment: "I believe it's going to work."

"I hope so," she said, and seemed to hesitate a little, then lowered her voice, looking up at him. "You must be careful—in the woods—Fritz."

"Yes," he answered, and looked down at her, apparently with some embarrassment, flushing slightly. Then he gravely put his arms around her, drew her to him and kissed her. She cuddled against him an instant, patted his cheek and smiled. . . . They both knew what it meant. . . . If only it could always be like this!

Snyder released her and observed, "It will be an hour to dark. We may as well have some supper."

Now that Selma was away, housekeeping at Little Bayou was of the most haphazard sort. The Snyders' supper consisted of a can of baked beans, sandwiches, and coffee. After this improvised meal they sat on the veranda, Snyder smoking his after-dinner cigar. They talked, but, above all, they waited. At half past seven it was quite dark and Snyder arose, saying, "I'll try it."

In the house they prepared a tray, putting on it a plate of sandwiches, a glass of water, a small bone that might have belonged to a dog or cat, half a dozen hearts cut out of red paper, several pins, a little rudely made rag doll, a hunting knife. Carrying the tray, with an electric torch in his pocket, Snyder followed his wife through the dilapidated old dining room to a door the key to which was sticking in the lock. Mrs. Snyder turned it, opening the door. Snyder stepped into a pitch dark room and the door immediately closed behind him.

He balanced the tray on his hand, got the torch from his pocket and turned it on, revealing a shabby bedroom, the two windows shut and the blinds closed on the outside, also revealing the bullet headed, loose lipped nubbin-chinned young negro named Sam, who was sitting in a high-backed chair by the bed, trying to grin a little, but with indifferent success. Gravely Snyder deposited his tray on the floor under Sam's eyes and took a chair beside it. He laid his torch on the bureau so that it shone into Sam's face, leaving much of the room in shadow. He then folded his arms and looked fixedly at the floor for full two minutes. Still looking at the floor, he spoke:

"You know obeah?"

"Naw, sir, I don't know nothin,'" Sam answered in a nervous explosion.

Snyder waited an instant and changed the inflection, making it a statement instead of a question: "You know obeah. . . . Obeah makes you dead."

After a little silence Snyder stooped to the tray and pinned one of the red paper hearts to the rag doll. Without looking at Sam he stepped over and pinned the doll to the high back of the negro's chair, returning to his own seat. Another silence, Snyder looking at the floor.

"You will see the snake, Sam. The snake is whining for the goat without horns. . . ."

"Mamaloi is strong, but papaloi is stronger. . . . Papaloi is stronger. . . ."

Stooping, Snyder laid the small bone on the floor and put a red paper heart over it.

From time to time, for their own amusement, Snyder and his wife had sought to draw Selma out regarding her pretension of being a voodoo priestess. In that way they had picked up some of the mummery. They suspected that Selma had used her alleged voodoo lore to get this dull witted and probably superstitious negro under her thumb. Snyder proposed now to see what he could do in that line. He repeated phrases that he remembered, gravely manipulating the bone, doll, and red hearts.

"You must tell me what I want to know. Papaloi is strong. . . . Abruptly Snyder looked up, quickening and emphasizing his utterance: "You must tell me right now. I'll put obeah on Selma."

Sam, sweaty, yellow, with staring eyes, blurted, "I tell you all I know."

This was what Latham wondered about as he sat in his back bedroom at the Seminole House, restlessly killing time. He held himself there until half past ten, then took a look at his army automatic, put it in his pocket and went out noiselessly—down the back stairs once more, through a little used side door into the garden and so to the alley. Again avoiding Main street he came around to the alley back of his small yellow house.

At the first throw luck was against him, for some clouds had come up since dark and the weather was thicker. Overhead only here and there stars shone dimly. That would make it worse in the woods. The back of his little house was quite dark. He stood a moment staring up at the kitchen door, then slid around the side as he had done before. But this time the side was quite dark also. Standing close to the sash he saw that the curtain of Louise's bedroom window was up an inch—certainly there was no light in the room. His heart beat with a great temptation that took his breath.

She was just beyond that bit of wood and plaster. Without doubt she was wide awake. A gentle tap on the pane would bring her to it—opening it, whispering to him. And in a little while now who knew what was going to happen to her or to him? There were risks just ahead. The temptation was great to lift his finger and give that light tap on the pane. But he must not.

There was some forty minutes of just waiting—pulling at his nerves. Then, by a blacker patch in the rear of his house, he knew the kitchen door had opened. The black patch disappeared, and a dim figure detached itself from the mass of the house, moving rapidly toward the alley. He took a step round the corner of the garage, watching. When that slim figure, no taller than a well grown boy, reached the alley it was only a dozen feet from him. The lowest call would have halted it; but he dared not, and after waiting a brief moment, he followed down the alley, keeping to one side. Following was difficult enough. Sometimes he lost the figure ahead altogether, but kept on and soon again picked up a moving shape in the dark.

When, beyond the hotel and the stores, the moving shape ahead of him

A Baby in Your Home

So many married couples yearn for children that thousands of copies of a new book by Dr. H. Will Elders are being distributed without cost to childless women. Any family interested in overcoming conditions of nature that hinder the gift of children should write for this free book today. It describes a simple home treatment based on the use of Sterilite, a wonderful scientific tonic that has had marvelous success all over the country in relieving constitutional weakness. Every woman who wants to live a normal, happy home life with little ones around her should consider it her first duty to know what Sterilite is and why it should be so wonderful an aid to her. Read this little book which is sent without charge or obligation in a plain envelope. It unfolds facts that most women never have had explained to them. Send NO Money, NO Obligations. turned to Main street, it was easier to keep it in sight for it took to the middle of the road. And when they came to the old shell highway at the beginning of the woods it was easier still, for the whiteness under foot made a background. But the old shell lasted only twenty rods, and after that he lost the figure altogether. In fact, it was by the feel of the ground under his feet rather than by sight that he could keep to the rutty wagon track through the pine and palmetto. There was light overhead, up in the sky—even dim patches of stars—but when he looked down he might as well have been looking into ink. Around him, near at hand, tall shapes of trees disclosed themselves in shadowy fashion, and the denser shadows were palmetto clumps but he realized with a little clutch of despair, that merely to keep to the road was all he could do; really seeing or following was out of the question.

It was the wrong night; the luck was against them. He stumbled doggedly on, and his nerves thrilled as something stabbed him—but it was only a bayonet palmetto leaf; he had got off the road. He stopped, thinking, "I'll have to use my torch." But that would never do, either. Where was that figure he had been following? What a hell of a night!

He stood in his tracks, realizing what slight skill or experience he had in this sort of thing, and peering ahead, trying to make out the top of that old dead pine, with its stumpy branches, against the sky. Leafy tree tops made black, indistinct silhouettes overhead, but not that dead pine. Probably he had not got far enough along. He must find the wagon track if he had to get down on his hands and knees. But before he moved something went by him in the dark, so close that he could almost have touched it with his hand—a man, undoubtedly.

It was on the tip of his tongue to whisper, "Lem." But Lem White should not be there. According to their plan the ex-sheriff, who knew the ground intimately, was to go into the woods early and wait to the right of the dead pine, watching to see whether another man came there—that mysterious "other man" who was the special object of this plot. At that thought Latham's nerves pulled. What if the shape that had just gone by him was that other man—trailing him from town as he trailed the slight figure that led the procession? It was the other man—the man with the red beard! That conviction sent Latham's blood racing.

Then he thought the moving figure had stepped aside. Not that he had really seen it step aside. It dissolved into the blackness; but there was something about the dissolving which gave him the idea that it had stepped aside. Had the man seen him standing by the roadside—the white of his face or of his hands? He remembered that the shape, in moving past, had shown no white—face muffled, perhaps, hands gloved or in pockets. There had been no blob of white about it. But would he have made out the white of a face or hand? He couldn't tell.

Then a light flashed ahead—an electric torch snapped on and off again. He must make towards that at any rate. In three steps his feet found the rude road again and he moved forward, taking the automatic out of his pocket, alert, trying to keep watch at his side as well as ahead. That flash in the night set up its own excitement. It ought to be from his leader; yet there were other figures in this dark and silent wood—Snyder and Donahue coming up from the opposite direction, Lem White waiting somewhere; most of all the shape that had gone by him. At any minute now somebody might be shooting at him.

Fifty yards ahead of him the light flashed again. He went forward, stepping carefully. . . . Once more, on ahead, there was that sudden glow in the dark, seeming to leave everything darker when it went out. All the while, overhead, there was considerable light; tree tops stood out quite distinctly against the pale mist of the sky, with here and there faint handfuls of stars that looked blurred. And here, overhead, was the dead pine, but underfoot it was like ink.

There was the light, off at the right fifty yards, as though the bearer of the torch had found a landmark at the roadside and turned into the woods. Latham left the road also, making toward the spot where the glow had appeared moving still more cautiously. After a minute or so he stood in his tracks, waiting for another signal, listening with all his might. . . . A long while it seemed. Then his nerves tightened, for some little distance to the north a shaft of light shot out, waving across the palmetto leaves, striking the pine tree tops. That, he thought, must be Snyder coming down from Little Bayou to keep the tryst, Donahue following him. Dark and silence for a minute. Then only three rods away a broadening pencil of light flashed straight upward, swung to right and to left, pointed straight up again and went out. That was the signal to Snyder, whose torch made an answering flash.

Surely it was coming now. Latham's hand gripped the butt of his pistol. Again a torch flashed upward, and Snyder's torch, quite near, answered it. A moment later Latham caught the sound of a man's voice—only a word, it appeared, or two words at most. They had come together.

Stiff palmetto leaves brushed and pricked him on the right hand side. He started working round the clump, to get clear ground between it and the torch bearers. Then there was the steady light of a torch only fifty feet ahead of him. The ground between it and him was now clear of underbrush, for he could see it without an obstruction, held breast high and turned on a clump of palmetto, moving back and forth a little as though in search of some distinguishing mark. Against the glow he saw a slight figure and even made out the shape of the figure's headgear—his own cap, in fact, pulled down at the back so as to cover all the wearer's hair and drawn low over the forehead. That cap had been hanging in the hall of his dwelling that afternoon. But he saw nothing of Snyder and strained his eyes for a dim glimpse of him.

With the swiftness of a lightning flash it occurred to him that against the luminous area ahead where torch rays were reflected from palmetto his figure would be outlined to a man behind him. But he never knew why on the heels of that thought he ducked his head. A glancing blow descended upon his skull and sent him staggering into the palmetto, dazed, wild with pain. The automatic was in his hand and before he gained an upright position he began firing. For some seconds everything was a confused mess in his mind, his finger pressing trigger. The light of an electric torch swept over him. He was standing upright, his pistol empty. The light swept over him again. He heard Snyder's voice saying:

"Dr. Latham? What is it?" He answered stupidly, "Somebody hit me."

Then Lem White was standing there, holding a torch. Latham put a hand up to his head and brought it away, the fingers covered with blood. His hat had fallen off. Snyder and Lem White were looking at his head. Lem was feeling of it and saying, "Scalp wound, I guess; tie it up with his handkerchief." It seemed to Latham that Lem's voice sounded rather disgusted.

Snyder was sweeping his torch around. "Here's his hat," he said, stooping to pick it up. Looks as though he had been hit with the butt of a pistol, or with a hammer."

The hat was a cheap affair of light gray cloth, suitable for summer wear. There was a tear in the left hand side of the crown. A strip of Latham's scalp, as wide as a finger, was torn, too, and bleeding profusely. The butt of a pistol, or a hammer—a new one with sharp edges—would have made such a wound if a glancing blow had been struck with it.

While Lem made a rude bandage with a handkerchief, Snyder explained to him, soberly, loud enough to be overheard for some distance, "I was restless tonight—walking through the woods. I thought I saw a light over here and came to see what it meant."

And Lem, tying the bandage, replied drily, and as loudly, "Same here." But he whispered in Latham's ear, "Guess we've spilled the beans for tonight."

By that time Latham's brain was clear again, and it seemed to him also that the beans had been spilled for tonight. That wild fusillade of pistol shots might bring other people to the scene. At any rate, here were himself and Lem White disclosed to Snyder, so it would take a long stretch of the imagination to suppose that Snyder would go ahead with his search for the immensely valuable and very secret set of papers. He said aloud, so that anybody near could hear:

"I felt somebody behind me and ducked my head—and got it on the bean."

Lem, having finished the bandage, turned his searchlight around and remarked, "Nobody in sight now; might as well look for a needle in a haystack as look for a man in these woods tonight."

So there the three conspirators stood, plainly revealed by torchlight to anybody else who might be in the neighborhood, the whole vicinity still echoing with pistol shots. The beans spilled, indeed! Latham felt foolish, saying aloud: "I can't imagine who it could have been."

He then whispered to Lem, "I'll tell Donahue you got suspicious and trailed me into the woods." It sounded flat enough.

"Not much use lookin' for anybody," Lem repeated grumpily, and whispered, "You may as well go home and tend to your head. Snyder 'n' I'll hang around—keeping watch. Don't believe there'll be anything more tonight. Might as well go home."

For a minute longer they discussed the assault aloud, with whispered asides. In reply to Lem's repeated injunction to go home, Latham humbly whispered back, "I suppose I might as well."

He felt greatly humiliated. No doubt his broadside of pistol shots had spilled the beans. A man suddenly struck a dazing blow over the head might be forgiven for acting blindly. But this was his plot, he had banked on its success, and after all it was he who had spoiled it. To be sure Donahue and his mysterious partner had seen the light of a torch playing upon a certain clump of palmetto, but as though searching for some distinguishing sign. They would be very rash to assume that this was the right clump and rashness was not their characteristic. An alarm had been given. Snyder, after having seen Lem White and Latham at his heels, could not plausibly go ahead with his treasure hunting. Donahue & Co. now knew they had Snyder, Lem White, Latham and Louise Sheldon to reckon with—and no good reason to suppose that one particular clump of palmetto was the right one. Lem White and Snyder might stay by and watch a while, but it seemed excessively improbable that anything more would happen tonight.

Quite crestfallen and dejected, Latham prepared to tramp home and put a proper bandage on his splitting head. But he did know one thing—or at any rate, he felt sure of knowing it. Donahue, according to their plan, would have trailed Snyder down from Little Bayou. Ten to one, therefore, he would have been over on the other side; ten to one it was not Donahue who had hit him over the head. But there was no satisfaction in knowing that; rather, the knowledge brought a deeper humiliation. That shape in the dark, so near that his hand could almost have touched it, must be precisely the man he wanted—the object of his plot. It must be the man who had helped kill Mark Egan. Within touch of his hand—and then to have slipped away in the dark and cracked his pursuer over the head to boot!

Undoubtedly the man had meant to stun him; probably to kill him. The reason was plain enough. He and Donahue were after that brief case, at any cost. They had said they would take it from Snyder by violence; but that would leave Latham, whom Donahue had pretended to take into partnership, to deal with. How could he be dealt with more neatly and simply than with a crack over the head at the very beginning?

It would be necessary to explain Lem White to Donahue, for Latham had pretended that this excursion was a secret between the detective and himself. But he could say that Lem had grown suspicious and trailed him into the woods. Without doubt Donahue knew that Lem had once trailed him and got a punch on the jaw for his pains.

Thinking it over in this wise, Latham in town went down Main street past dark, little shops, past the silent hotel where a single light burned in the lounge, to his own small yellow domicile and office. That was dark and still. He walked around it, watching and listening, but there was no sign of life. It was one o'clock in the morning; his head was bloody.

Somewhere up in the woods lurked a slim figure wearing Louise Sheldon's skirt and jacket and Latham's cap—gun ready to hand, alert as a weasel; but it was the figure of little Deputy Sheriff Bassett, who had slipped into the cottage by the back door as Louise gave him the signal—by turning the lights on and off twice—that Selma was locked in her room. There Bassett had put on the disguise and waited until a quarter past eleven, when he left to lead Latham into the woods. At least that had been the plan. Believing Louise Sheldon to be in the woods, Donahue and his pal would keep away from Latham's office tonight. Nine chances out of ten they would keep away. Latham was not without anxiety concerning the tenth chance; but in this grim business a chance here and there must be taken. He did not want to appear before her now with a bloody head, so he went back to the hotel and slipped up to his room.

Under electric light the mirror showed him a ghastly image of himself, pale and daubed with blood. He washed himself and put a fresh bandage on his head. Then he lay down and, thinking it over, fell asleep. Continued in next Sunday's Magazine.

lady, but I'm afraid the poor captain's dead."

The cause of Soleil's sudden death was said to be valvular disease of the heart. He had been a hard rider, a hard drinker. Evidently in many ways he had tried his constitution too much.

Recently Marguerite Grey brought out another exquisite little book. It is called "The Beyond." It is quite perfectly written, quite as beautifully felt, quite as wonderfully sincere as "The Mystic."

When I finished reading it the other day I thought of the mystical activity which opens with that sharp stimulation of the will only to be obtained through the emotional life, and I murmured to myself the words,

"In honorem omnium animarum mysticarum."
